The Receiver of The Great Arnold Print Works Sells 7,000 Cases White and Colored Wash Goods at Auction In New York—Our Resident Buyer Secured Many Lots Much Below Value.

John C. Lewis Co. INCORPORATED

A few months ago the great Arnold Print Works went into the hands of a receiver, tying up thousands of cases of Fine White and Colored Wash Goods intended for this season's business. Dry Goods circles were greatly surprised when the Arnold Plant got into deep water, for no mill enjoyed a better reputation for quality, and the output of their plant was simply enormous. By an order from the Court, Messrs. Wilmerding, Morris & Mitchell, the New York Auctioneers, were appointed to sell the stock at auction for whatever it would bring.

Our New York man, who is a large syndicate buyer, looked after our interests at this sale. Now this unusual opportunity is given the ladies of Louisville to buy, right at the start of the season, High-class Wash Goods at prices never before quoted in this locality. We have arranged these goods into lots to simplify choosing and facilitate the rapid transaction of business. Each of the items offered below is from 25 to 40 per cent. under the regular market price, and is a big bargain.

This Historical Wash Goods Sale Starts Monday at 8 A. M. And Will Run From Day to Day Until Stock Is Sold.

The garments are cut in one piece, eliminating the circular yoke and band and bringing the bias cut, thus producing a most desirable rounding effect. The bias cut provides for the necessary elasticity and the back and front, being cut on the straight of the cloth, prevent the uncomfortable opening of the drawers. Demonstration will show you.

TAFT'S BLACK GUEST REFUSED

Seat In Dining Car In South Carolina.

Secretary Informed of "Jim Crow" Law.

Foraker Presents Issue To Colored Voters.

THE CASE IN A NUTSHELL.

Washington, May 23.—[Special.]—A dispatch from Fayetteville, N. C., says: "A negro companion of Secretary of War Taft was refused permission to eat on the dining car with the Secretary, is the report of Solicitor H. A. Sinclair, who returned last night from Savannah.

"The Secretary was returning to Washington from Charleston, where he had landed on his return from Panama. With him, says Mr. Sinclair, were two white men and a negro.

"The Secretary, according to the story, ordered four covers laid on his table for dinner. On account of the size of Mr. Taft is was found necessary to extend the table, which usually accommodates four people comfortably, that the party might find seats about it. As the great man and his three companions were preparing to take their seats, it is asserted, the conductor of the train appeared and quietly informed Mr. Taft that in South Carolina, where the 'Jim Crow' laws are rather stringent, colored people are required to wait until all the whites on the train have completed their meal before they are allowed to eat. The negro companion of the Secretary was forced to retire, it is declared, in spite of the protests of Mr. Taft.

Bid For Black Votes.

"Those who heard the story consider that the Secretary, in arranging to dine with a negro, was making a bid for the Southern negro vote. It remains to be seen whether the black man can be won for him in such a way, they declare, for they say the breaking down of social lines will not have a tendency to popularize the Secretary with the white voters of the South.

This is the issue on the Brownsville case that Senator Foraker presents to the colored voters of the United States, viz.:

"If the bill had been voted upon and defeated at this session, the colored voters of the country would not have had any means of showing their displeasure except by voting against the party in a spirit of revenge.

"Now, with the bill postponed, they have at least a living issue, and they have a right to demand of Republican candidates for office, including our candidates for President and Vice President and all other candidates for re-election to the Senate and to the House of Representatives, that they will pledge themselves to support the Foraker bill. In this way the 10,000,000 colored people of the United States can greatly help, not only the soldiers, but the whole race, by causing themselves to be felt and appreciated as they never have been before. When they come to realize their opportunity I think they will all be proud to take a direct and effective part in what should be to them a labor of love."

MR. WHITE'S LEG BROKEN IN AUTOMOBILE WRECK.

Cincinnati, May 23.—Mr. Walter White, a wealthy automobile manufacturer of Cleveland, O., suffered a compound fracture of his right leg and several scalp wounds while participating in the automobile hill-climbing contests here this afternoon. Mr. White's car had just crossed the finish line and was going at terrific speed, having done the best time of the day, when it skidded, hit the curb and turned turtle.

The trade of a glove cutter is a hard one to master, and in France some of the most expert glove cutters earn $100 a week.

Points About Tobacco Culture Learned By Experiments.

PROF. SHAMEL MAKES TRIP TO KENTUCKY.

MISS MARY RODES CUP WINNER AT STATE UNIVERSITY.

ANNUAL TOURNAMENT HELD.

Lexington, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—Prof. A. D. Shamel, chief of the tobacco growing division of the United States Department of Agriculture, left here this morning for his headquarters in Washington, after spending a short time in this city and other parts of the State looking over the first year's experiment work in tobacco culture that is being conducted under the direction of the Agricultural Department by the Government Experiment Station, located here. Prof. Shamel has visited a number of the subexperiment stations that are being conducted at Hopkinsville, Christian county; Farmington, Graves county, Kentucky, and Clarksville, Montgomery county, Tennessee, under the observation of the local station for experimenting purposes.

Prof. Shamel said that the records of last year's experiments were carefully gone over with W. H. Scherffius, who is the collaborator of tobacco breeding investigations in this city and from the records some interesting revelations were made.

Prof. Shamel said that the Government will continue its experiments in the different tobacco growing districts of Kentucky again this year, owing to the great amount of information of value obtained during the first year's experimental work.

Miss Rodes Wins Cup.

A large crowd witnessed the sixth annual tournament of the Woman's Department of Physical Education at State University this afternoon. This work has been under the supervision of Mrs. Robert Lee Stout since the organization of the department six years ago, and the annual contest for the trophy cup is not only of the greatest interest to all those interested in the physical education of women, but also serves to show the unique work done by young women in this department. The judges were Miss Margaret Moore, physical director at Sayre Female Institute; Dr. Robert Coleman, physician in charge of the Physical Department of Transylvania University; Mrs. Shearin and Mr. Brown. The points on which the decision was rendered were as follows: First, accuracy of movement; second, strength of movement; third, grace of movement; fourth, that movement suggesting the strongest mental force and control. The winner of the cup was Miss Mary Rodes, of Lexington; Miss Ethel Bryant was second and Miss Sarah Marshall third. The tournament was in reality a German gymnastic lesson somewhat longer than usual. It consisted of military tactics, drills with wands, Indian clubs, hoops and bounding balls. Following these came the work on parallel bars and horse, and last the classic dancing, which is being made a specialty in this department. The physicians and ministers of the city were specially invited.

Bryan Club Meeting.

At a meeting of the Bryan Club this afternoon it was decided that the number of members had been so large that separate organizations should be created for the city and county. Maury Kemper was elected president and Robert Finnell secretary of the city branch, and J. S. Moore president and Archibald Hamilton secretary of the county division. A joint campaign committee will be appointed by the two presidents. Short addresses were made by Col. John R. Allen, Solomon Van Meter, Maury Kemper, W. B. Hawkins and George B. Kinkead. The dues of members were fixed at twenty-five cents. Former Mayor Henry T. Duncan attended the meeting and was cordially invited to join the club. Just before the adjournment of the meeting to-day O. F. Redd suggested that Col. John R. Allen be indorsed by the club as delegate from this congressional district to the National Convention at Denver. E. S. Kinkead, however, stated that Col. Allen would not entertain the suggestion and the matter was dropped.

Sues For Inheritance Tax.

S. H. Kash, revenue agent for the State-at-large, filed suit in the Fayette County Court to-day against George S. Shanklin, executor of the estate of Mrs. Scotia Chenoweth for an inheritance tax of $5 on each $100 of the property of the estate of Mrs. Chenoweth. The plaintiff alleges that the estate is valued at $270,000 and has been divised to persons not direct relatives and is therefore subject to the tax. Among other bequests Mrs. Chenoweth left about $30,000 to the Hill-street Methodist church of this city.

FLY TO PIECES.

The Effect of Coffee on Highly Organized People.

"I have been a coffee user for years, and about two years ago got into a very serious condition of dyspepsia and indigestion. It seemed to me I would fly to pieces. I was so nervous that at the least noise I was distressed, and many times could not straighten myself up because of the pain.

"My physician told me I must not eat any heavy or strong food and ordered a diet, giving me some medicine. I followed directions carefully, but kept on using coffee and did not get any better. Last winter my husband, who was away on business, had Postum Food Coffee served to him in the family where he boarded.

"He liked it so well that when he came home he brought some with him. We began using it and I found it most excellent. While I drank it my stomach never bothered me in the least, and I got over my nervous troubles. When the Postum was all gone we returned to coffee; then my stomach began to hurt me as before and the nervous conditions came on again.

"That showed me exactly what was the cause of the whole trouble, so I quit drinking coffee altogether and kept on using Postum. The old troubles left again and I have never had any trouble since." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

REPORT OF A SECRET MARRIAGE NOT BELIEVED.

De Sagan and Anna Gould Probably Will Be Wedded In Paris In Few Days.

Paris, May 23.—The report that there was a secret marriage between Prince Helie de Sagan and Mme. Gould at Hoboken on the eve of their departure from America is discredited here. The Prince categorically denied this before going to Italy to join Mme. Gould; and since the arrival of the couple in Paris their sole purpose apparently has been directed to clearing the way for a speedy wedding. They have been in consultation with their attorneys and throughout the past week there has been an extensive exchange of cables with New York.

Mme. Gould has made clear her irrevocable determination to marry the man of her choice, and in view of her unflinching attitude, it is understood that the family has agreed not to invoke the clause in her father's will, cutting off a half share in the estate in the case of any of the children marrying without the executor's consent. What other arguments may have been employed is unknown, but this obstacle is now regarded as having been removed and the marriage may be expected to take place within a fortnight.

"BEAUTIFIED" MEATS DIDN'T GO

[Minneapolis Journal.]

"Butchers tried last year to introduce beautiful meats. They sold blue chops, green steaks, purple pork, and so on. But the idea didn't take."

The speaker, a meat exporter, smiled and went on:

"It was in Vienna, that splendid little city, that the idea arose. In Viennese restaurants, for a month or more, the waiter asked you if you preferred your meat 'natural' or 'beautified.' I'll never forget, there in Vienna, the shock I had on cutting into a juicy grass-colored sirloin with an edging of violet fat.

"No, the idea failed. The people don't want their meat beautified. Their houses, their parks, their streets, their own persons you may beautify to your heart's content, but you must leave their meat alone."

MOUNTED MEN PUT ON GUARD

Soldiers To Patrol Shelby County Roads.

Body of Men On Horseback Met By Troops.

Gallop Away When Ordered To Halt.

HAZELETT TWICE WOUNDED.

Frankfort, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—State troops, mounted as a patrol, will be kept on duty and will cover the territory around Jacksonville, in Shelby county, near the place where N. B. Hazelett was killed night before last. How long the soldiers will stay there is not known, and this depends largely on future developments. The soldiers were out in Shelby county last night, but were not mounted, and simply acted as guards. The officers came in this morning and reported to the Adjutant General and then returned to the scene of the killing. The soldiers were sent because it was feared that an attempt might be made by the friends of the dead man to avenge his killing.

A clash between the soldiers and a squad of mounted men, who might have been night riders, narrowly missed last night in Shelby county, near the Franklin county line, but no shots were fired. The soldiers were walking along the road when they met a body of the men on horseback. The officer in comamnd of the soldiers ordered the mounted men to halt, and immediately all of them turned and galloped away at a rapid pace. The soldiers could not be certain that the men were night riders, although they believed that such was the case, so no shots were fired at the fleeing men. The officer in command thought that the men might be friends of the dead man and might be going to sit up with the body, so did not take the chance of shooting anyone who was on a lawful mission. This incident occurred about 11:30 o'clock last night, only a short distance from where the body of Hazelett was found and between that place and Hazelett's home.

Hazelett Shot Twice.

Information received here this morning is that Hazelett was shot twice, once in the breast and once in the abdomen. Both wounds were made with buckshot and two shots seem to have been fired, as two shotgun shells were found in the road near the body. Two chambers in Hazelett's revolver were empty, and the neighbors say they heard two shots about 1 o'clock yesterday morning. They believe that this was the time of the killing of Hazelett. It also develops to-day that the soldiers who were on duty Thursday night in Shelby county did not get within half a mile of the place where the body was found. They fired no shots, but heard two shots just before daylight some distance from where Hazelett's body was found.

As soon as the Frankfort men can secure mounts the patrol will be organized and the district in and around Jacksonville and in a large part of Shelby and Franklin counties, where the two counties adjoin, will be covered thoroughly. The mounted men can cover a wide territory, and enough men will be kept there to handle any body of night riders who may be met.

OFFER OF $10,000

Probably Will Be Accepted In Hollowell Cases.

Paducah, Ky., May 23.—A compromise in the Hollowell night rider damage suits has been agreed on and Attorney John G. Miller, chief counsel for the plaintiffs, is in Evansville to-day to confer with his clients. It is reported he will recommend a settlement. The twenty-nine defendants offer to pay the plaintiff $10,000 and all costs. Robert H. Hollowell in the United States Court received a verdict for $35,000, his wife and son have suits pending for $75,000, but the compromise covers all. The reason Attorney Miller will recommend a settlement at the figures named is because there is doubt if more than $10,000 could be made out of the defendants.

Deputy Marshal Elwood Neal, who has been in Caldwell county serving attachments and writ of capias, reported to Attorney Miller that he found but nine defendants who owned property and it was heavily mortgaged. They are: G. G. Brown, W. S. Larkins, Malachi Pickering, T. G. Lacy, J. E. Hollowell, J. W. Cavanaugh, F. M. Brown, J. W. Hollowell and Urely Lacy. Their property is mortgaged for $18,831. As soon as the Deputy Marshal reported these facts to Attorney Miller the latter instructed him to defer further action until Monday. All of the defendants are ready to come to Paducah and go to jail for ten days, after which they can take the insolvent debtor's oath.

FIRED AT NIGHT RIDERS.

Home of Walter Hook Riddled By Bullets.

Ripley, O., May 23.—Night riders last night destroyed the tobacco beds of Walter Hook, six miles from Ripley. Hook fired at the men, and in return they riddled his house with bullets. One bullet came within two inches of hitting the baby. Troop B, which is patrolling this section, was soon on the scene. It is said that some of the riders were recognized and arrests are expected.

Before visiting the farm of Walter Hook the night riders "shot up" the little hamlet of Red Oak. The four plant beds destroyed were within twenty feet of the house. Hook's tobacco barn was burned recently, but it was supposed to have been struck by lightning. Troop B, since the recall of Troop A, has been doing nearly double duty. Tuesday night a detachment of the Manchester company, on duty at West Union, had been stationed at Decatur, this county, their guard duty extending through the section visited by the night riders last night. There is a bitter feeling in the section and trouble is feared.

ALLEGED RAIDERS INDICTED.

Trigg County Grand Jury Returns Nine True Bills.

Cadiz, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—The grand jury adjourned to-day, returning nine indictments, the smallest number brought in at any session here in many years. One indictment was against the nine men of Golden Pond, who were accused by J. S. Cossey of whipping him. Another charged Sullivan Jones and Jack Lofton with sending a threatening letter to Frank Hicks, who lives between the rivers.

The jury refused to indict the men charged with banding themselves together to drive negroes from Center Furnace, but recommended that the men be continued under bond and that the cases be submitted to the next grand jury.

NO PROSPECT OF AN EARLY DECISION

GOVERNOR STILL STRUGGLING WITH POWERS CASE.

GIVES NOTICE THAT OTHER APPLICANTS MUST WAIT.

STUDYING THE RECORDS HARD

Frankfort, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—No decision in the Powers and Howard cases will be made by the Governor for several days or, perhaps, longer. It had been thought by some persons that the Governor would announce his decision to-day, but the reason for this was that the Governor had said, before he went to Washington, that he would decide the cases not later than May 23. The Governor concluded, however, just before he caught the train for Louisville the afternoon he started for Washingtoe, that it would not do to announce any maximum period for his decision, and he decided not to place any limit on the time which he would allow himself. His change of plans was not generally known and the original statement gave rise to the report that the decision would be made on May 23 or sooner.

The Governor to-day gave out an official announcement in which he said that no more applications for pardons or remissions would be considered until after the Powers and Howard cases have been settled. The official announcement is as follows:

"Gov. Willson wishes notice given that no applications for pardon, remission or executive clemency in any form, except in the most extreme cases, will be considered until after the decision of the Powers and Howard cases. This notice is given because day after day people reach Frankfort, coming from a distance, with matters which only take a few minutes, but each day is used in these matters, which must take their turn and wait until the pending cases are decided."

This means that the decision may be delayed for more than a week, as it is taken to mean that there is o be delay. If a decision was to be given soon there would be no need for making any announcement about applications for pardons in other cases. The Governor is still digging away at the records in the two cases.

ELECTED PRESIDENT OF STATE T. P. A.

Successful Annual Gathering of Organization Held At Owensboro.

Owensboro, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—After selecting Henderson as the next place of meeting, and electing officers and delegates to the National convention at Milwaukee, the annual State meeting of the Travelers' Protective Association came to a close to-night with a barbecue at Hickman Park. The meeting in Owensboro was attended by over 200 delegates, and was one of the most successful in the history of the organization.

The meeting was called to order in the Circuit Court room of the courthouse this morning by President Louis F. Kolb, of Paducah. The address of welcome was delivered by George H. Cox, secretary of the Owensboro Business Men's Association. D. O. Talbott, of Louisville, responded.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Ed Altsellar, Post D, Louisville; vice presidents, T. J. Turley, of Owensboro; J. Andy Bauer, of Paducah; C. L. Schlamp, of Henderson; H. W. Brizendine, of Mayfield, and Fred W. Napper, of Louisville; secretary, James F. Short, of Louisville.

The following direcoors were elected: C. P. Frick, M. W. Burd and Carl Finck, of Louisville; H. A. Petter, of Paducah; J. M. McCormick, of Henderson; J. E. McKell, of Louisville; Phil Hahl, of Owensboro. State physician and surgeon, Dr. T. K. Van Zandt, of Louisville; State Chaplain, W. F. Tandy, of Louisville. Ernest Lackey, of Louisville, was selected as chairman of the legislative committee over J. Wheeler Campbell. The treasurer's report showed a surplus of $2,500 in the treasury. The membership showed an increase of 117. Louisville played a prominent part in the meeting and in addition to securing a number of officers secured the State headquarters of the association. Over 300 persons were in attendance at the barbecue at Hickman Park.

TRACTS SOLD TWICE.

INDIANA REAL ESTATE MEN CHARGED WITH FRAUD.

Alleged Plot To Dispose of Land On Fort Niobrara Military Reservation.

Indianapolis, May 23.—An alleged plot to dispose of the land in the United States military reservation at Fort Niobrara, Neb., by means of false deeds and abstracts and mythical names and characters was exposed this afternoon when four real estate dealers were arrested by Federal officers. The men arrested were Edward E. Kesler, George T. Voorhees, James M. Newby and Perry F. Carr. The specific charge against the men is that they entered into a conspiracy to defraud by the use of the mails. Some of the tracts of land sold by the men, it is alleged, have been sold twice. One man bought 160 acres on which the buildings of the military post are situated.

In most cases, it is alleged, it was represented that the Nebraska land was owned by a man named C. Hastings Reid, unmarried, of Polk county, Iowa. In other instances the owner was represented to be Thomas L. Thomas, of Polk county, Iowa. It is said there are no such men.

The Fort Niobrara reservation consists of four townships, and it is believed that nearly six thousand acres have been sold in a fradulent manner. The alleged fraudulent sale of the lands came to the attention of the authorities when some of the deeds and abstracts were sent to be recorded. The men arrested appeared befor United States Court Commissioner Morres late this afternoon, who granted a continuance until June 1.

CLARENCE DARROW SEEKS GOEBEL CASE RECORD.

Noted Attorney Will Defend Fred Warren, Who Offered Reward For Kidnapping of W. S. Taylor.

Frankfort, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—Clarence Darrow, the celebrated attorney who defended Pettibone, Haywood and Moyer, the men accused of the murder of Gov. Steunenbrg, of Idaho, was in Frankfort to-day to obtain records relating to the murder of William Goebel. Mr. Darrow is attorney for Fred Warren, of Gerard, Kansas, editor of the Appeal to Reason, a weekly labor journal. Shortly after the murder of Goebel, when Taylor fled to Indiana, the Appeal to Reason sent out a number of letters, and on the envelopes was printed the following: "One thousand dollars reward for anyone who will kidnap W. S. Taylor, a fugitive from justice, an deliver him over to the authorities in Kentucky."

Warren was indicted in the Federal Court for sending libelous matter through the mail, and his case is still pending. Mr. Darrow was in Frankfort to get the records showing that Taylor was under indictment for the murder of Goebel and was a fugitive from justice at the time Mr. Warren made his offer of $1,000 reward for the kidnaping of Taylor. He expects to prove that Taylor actually was accused of the murder, and will set this up as a defense to the indictment. Mr. Darrow was accompanied here by his wife, and will spend to-morrow driving about the Bluegrass country and seeing Kentucky.

NOW ACCUSED OF SIXTEEN MURDERS

EITHER AN ARCH-SLAYER OR COLOSSAL FAKER.

BRIMMINGSTALL SAID TO HAVE CONFESSED SIX.

KILLINGS ALL IN THE WEST.

Dowagiac, Mich., May 23.—Opinion is now divided as to whether James Brimmingstall is a remarkable criminal or a colossal fabricator. As tated yesterday, he was arrested at the instigation of his wife for murdering David Huff, and he is credited with a string of murders, nearly equaling the red list of Mrs. Bella Guinness. He has already ackowledged, the police say, that he was not guilty of killing six men in the West, and his wife and other relatives, the police say, accuse him of other crimes, bringing the total of his victims up to sixteen.

Following is the revised list, according to the police: Smith Hatrum, in Dowagiac (denied); David Huff, in Dowagiac (denied); two brothers named O'Brien, in Arizona (confessed); unidentified man shot from horse in Arizona (confessed); Missouri Southern railroad conductor, in Missouri (confessed); man named Johnson, in Arizona, (confessed); unidentified man, in Missouri (confessed); first wife and one girl (denied); second wife and three children (denied); Daniel Heaston, near Dowagiac (denied); unidentified man at Dowagiac, body found on railroad (denied).

According to the alleged confession of Brimmingstall to Prosecuting Attorney Bresnghan, he was a Wild West desperado of the dime novel kind. He was born in Missouri. He said that when he was 17 years old he shot two brothers named O'Brien. When he was 19 years old, he said, he shot a man off a horse, but never learned who it was he killed. Brimmingstall told the prosecutor, it is said, that when he was 20 years old, he killed a conductor on a Missouri Southern railroad train, hitting him with a coupling pin.

In 1889 Brimmingstall said he killed a man in a free-for-all fight in Arizona. The prisoner also admitted that in 1900 he shot into a crowd in a town in Missouri and killed a man. He said there was no reason for his firing.

Brimmingstall's first wife was a squaw. The woman and her child were found murdered one morning. Brimmingstall denies that he killed them. Brimmingstall then married again. By his second wife he had three children. The family lived in Missouri. One day the wife and three children died suddenly. Brimmingstall says they were killed by drinking alkali water. He denies that he killed them, and he denies all the crimes credited to him in Michigan. He says that he served only one year of sentence for his crimes in the West.

Huff, the aged man for whose murder he is under arrest, was a boarder in the house, and the inquest at the time of his death declared that he had choked to death accidentally. Smith Hatrum was supposed to have fallen from a bridge. There was never any trace of the murderer of the man found on the railroad track.

IN MEMORIUM.

In Memory of Our Beloved Mother, Mrs. Mary Koeberlein, Who Died May 25, 1907.

One year, O mother, can it be,
Twelve weary months we've mourned for thee?
And yet it feels so fresh, the pain,
We count them o'er and o'er again.
The midnight stars are beaming
Upon a silent grave,
Where sleepest, without dreaming,
The one we could not save.
Heaven retaineth now our treasure,
Earth the lonely casket keeps,
And the sunbeams love to linger
Where our darling mother sleeps.
CHILDREN.

In Memory of Our Dear Husband and Father, John J. Zehnder, Who Died May 26, 1907.

The midnight stars are beaming
Upon a silent grave,
Where sleeps my dear husband,
The one I could not save.
Had He asked us, well we know
We should say, O spare the blow;
Yes, with streaming tears should pray,
Lord, we love him, let him stay.
In love he lived, in peace he died.
His life was asked, but God denied.
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memory of Henry Beck, Who Died May 23, 1907.

One sad year you've now been gone
From those you loved so dear;
And, Oh! dear brother, you see
How much we miss you here.

NUMEROUS SHOPPERS JOIN IN CHASE AFTER NEGRO.

Rich Mays Charged With Having Lifted Socks From Shop Counter.

After an exciting chase of eight blocks out Fourth avenue and west on Walnut street, yesterday afternoon, in the course of which he lost one of the ten-cent pair of socks which he is accused of having "lifted" from a shop counter, Rich Mays, colored, was blocked and arrested on a charge of suspected felony by Patrolman Woods at Eleventh and West streets.

Mays is charged with having stolen the socks from a counter in a five and ten cent store at Fourth avenue and Green street, but he says that he purchased them. To two of the clerks, however, it seemed otherwise, as also to about 150 people who joined them in the chase, deeming the negro guilty of a whole gamut of crimes, from murder and arson all the way up to lifting the lid on the next day or eating pate de foie gras with an oyster fork.

The collections on whisky for the present month, including yesterday, in the office of J. A. Craft, Collector of Internal Revenue, amounted to $689,455.02, which is a little shy of the collections for the same period of last year. The collections on whisky for the month of May, 1907, were $789,140.70. The total collections on whisky though for the month of May, 1906, were $636,489.73. It is not believed that the collections this month will reach what they were for the same period last year.

The internal revenue collections yesterday were as follows: Beer, $1,815; whisky, $27,053.43; cigars, $1,129.65; tobacco, $277.20; special tax stamps, $25.01; case stamps, $136; total, $30,436.29.

Sensational Silk Suit Sale!

We announce the most important trade event of the season. We will sell over 400 delightful Suits in finest taffeta silks at about half their actual value.

Three hundred of the lot have just been received. They came to us through a clever trade transaction at a fraction over 50 per cent. of their real worth.

Briefly—our favorite costume manufacturer asked us to buy all the silks he had in stock and allow him to make them up in such models as we might elect. The offer was so alluring that we closed the deal.

In some instances there are only two or three dresses of a kind. In other patterns there are ten or twelve. Just whatever quantity of silk he happened to have. Of course the styles are the very best to be had.

The other 100 suits in this offering comprise just what we had on hand and which have been marked down to correspond with the prices in the new lot. It's a rare opportunity—one that will probably never present itself again.

We are glad to give our friends and patrons the benefit of this most timely deal.

To facilitate the selection we have massed about all in four assortments at the prices mentioned below. Please remember that these are not samples or undesirable suits that have been rejected by other dealers—not a job lot nor any of the other numerous causes so frequently used by merchants to dispose of goods lacking merit—it's the cleanest, snappiest, prettiest range of Summer Suits ever seen under one Louisville roof.

Here Are the Prices.

$10.85 Is all we ask for the first lot, comprising princess and jumper styles, in the nice plain shades, including black, as well as checks and stripes.

There are several distinct models to pick from, and all are good. Not a suit in the lot but would sell ordinarily at $17.50; a few at $20.00. In this sale you get them at $10.85.

$14.90 This is a very large assortment. The ones in light ground with blue, brown, tan and black stripes are especially attractive. Some of them are trimmed with French knots and fine laces. They are all made in princess shapes.

In fact, the variety is so extensive that even the most detailed description would fail to do it justice. You must see these exquisite garments to fully appreciate them. This range includes dresses ordinarily selling up to $28.50.

$16.75 This we consider the banner assortment of the entire sale. It contains the most exclusive patterns in the richest silks. Both light colors and dark.

Especially good are the jumpers that have elaborate net waists attached. The ruffled sleeve in the waist makes this the most effective suit of the season.

There are over a hundred in the lot, but we do not think they will last long, for such qualities were never offered under $30.00.

$18.75 Here we have assembled the fine Novelty Dresses. Mostly one or two of a kind. The patterns and qualities of silks used will simply fascinate you. Then, they are so exquisitely made in the extreme and modified princess effects as to render them most appealing to fastidious dressers. Some of the values range up to $38.00.

See Specimen Values in Our Three Big Windows. None Sent on Approval. Mail Orders Filled.

Wash Suits

As a demonstration of what we are doing in the Wash Suit Department, we simply mention the one lot at the above price.

It is a princess style, of sheer mull, and it comes in white and pleasing shades of pink and light blue. It's built somewhat on the Gibson model, with wide shoulder effect. It is elaborately trimmed with German Val. lace edgings and insertion, with real filet medallions in the front. At even double this price it would be considered an unusual value. At the special price of five dollars it is, indeed, most appealing.

At $6.50 and $8.75 we show assortments in these exquisite Lingerie Dresses, in white and summer shades, that could not be equaled in other stores at even one-third more.

Fascinating Waist Values

We shall feature some 300 waists at this price for choice. It's a most extraordinary special, and presents a bargain opportunity of widest scope. For instance—

In the lot you will find a Sheer White Lawn Waist, tucked in the front and back. Tucked cuff to match. It's a smart tailored model, with stiff laundered collar made in colored stripe effects; or,

A very fine White Lawn Waist, which has solid yoke of fine tucks. The collar is attached and is finished with fine hemstitched tucks. The cuffs are finished in like manner.

Then, again, there is a dainty waist made of white batiste, solid front and back of graduated tucks. The simplicity of this garment appeals to women of refinement. And still, again,

A waist of white lawn, with most elaborate front of lace and embroidery insertions, with fine tucks interspersed.

Another style in the lot is considered a very smart effect. It is made of lawn, and is extravagantly trimmed with German Val. laces.

These are only a few of the exceptional styles to be found in this monster collection, and not a waist in the lot but would sell readily from $2.00 to $2.25. Bear in mind you get unrestricted choice at $1.39.

Cloth Suits
$15.85

We have made up an assortment of Cloth Suits to go at this price for this week. Of course, all our tailored suits are greatly reduced, but in order to specialize, we deem this the most impressive range.

There are over 100 of them, and they consist of the fashionable models now in greatest demand. Many distinct styles in the assortment, including black, Copenhagen blue, tan, brown and other sought-for plain shades, as well as stylish foreign weaves in checks, stripes and mixtures.

Some of these suits sold at $25.00, some at $28.00. Help yourself now to any at $15.85.

Deny Agreement To Fix the Price.

LITTLE EVIDENCE SECURED AT THE HEARING.

ORDER OF THE COURTS HAS NOT BEEN VIOLATED

CLAIM OF MANUFACTURERS.

Washington, May 23.—Louis Chable, secretary of the American Pulp and Paper Association, testified to-day before the House Wood Pulp and Paper Investigating Committee. He told of efforts made by a former secretary to obtain statistics of the trade, but said these efforts had failed owing to the jealousies among the manufacturers. He told of a meeting that had been held in Chicago in March, 1908, for the purpose of inducing the Western manufacturers to join the association in order to enable them to fight more efficiently the attacks which were being made by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. A number of Western manufacturers joined the organization. He said the association had been in existence for thirty years. He also said the organization always has been restricted to manufacturers except so far as associate members are concerned.

E. P. Sherry, of Milwaukee, Wis., president and treasurer of the Rhinebeau Paper Company, of Park Falls, Wis., denied that his company, as a former member of the General Paper Company, had violated the order of the court prohibiting that company from doing business. He said that his concern was in no combination, agreement or understanding of any nature in restraint of trade, nor did he know of any such combination. He admitted that at times he had stopped making print paper and gone to making hanger paper.

Mr. Sherry told of a proposition made by certain Eastern men to purchase his mills.

"What was the purpose of making that proposition?" asked Chairman Mann.

"Was it a consolidation of the Wisconsin paper mills as you gathered it?"

"That was my impression. They proposed the purchase of certain of the mills in Wisconsin, and possibly Minnesota."

"Was it to be an out-and-out purchase?"

"As I recollect, it was to be an out-and-out purchase."

Mr. Sherry declined to supply the committee with data bearing on the value of his plant and was peremptorily directed to do so. He again came in conflict with the committee when Mr. Mann asked him to send the committee a copy of his highest contract for paper. The witness said his attorney objected strenuously to making public the names of his customers and the prices charged them "because the big fellows will take away what customers we have got."

Agrees To Furnish Information.

Mr. Sherry, however, finally agreed to send the desired information, Chairman Mann remarking that the committee would use its judgment about publishing it. "We have no desire to injure your mills," he said. Continuing, Mr. Mann said he thought the information the company had acquired ought to be of benefit to everyone in the paper trade.

C. A. Babcock, secretary and treasurer of the Wisconsin River Paper and Pulp Association, located at Stevens' Point, Wis., prefaced his examination with the following statement:

"I wish to deny absolutely all of the evidence or any of the evidence which has been produced to show that at any time since the injunction against the General Paper Company I have entered into any agreement in restraint of trade or attended any meetings where there was any agreement, either expressed or implied, on prices which we should charge for our paper or for dividing territory, or any arrangement or agreement in violation of the injunction placed upon us as one of the constituent companies of the General Paper Company in May, 1906."

Since Prof. Simmons has been in charge of the school here a wonderful growth in attendance has developed.

TAKING STEPS TO AVOID THE PROBE

FROM GAYMAN LEGISLATIVE INQUIRY COMMITTEE.

FILE SUIT FOR INJUNCTION.

Cincinnati, May 23.—The right of the legislative committee to investigate public offices and allegations of improper methods as to Cincinnati and Hamilton county was questioned in the first attempt of the committee to get to work to-day.

George B. Cox, Republican leader; George Cohen, clerk of the board of elections, and John H. Gibson, former County Treasurer, had been summoned to appear as witnesses at the first session here to-day, but all refused to obey the summons.

Instead of doing so, quo warranto proceedings were instituted in the Circuit Court here to test the legality of the committee's existnce and its power to investigate.

The suit against the legislative committee, a proceeding in quo warranto, was filed early to-day in the Circuit Court by the County Prosecutor, with whom Attorney Frank Dinsmore was associated. It asked the court to construe the right of the Gayman committee to act, and also prayed for a temporary injunction against the committee. The committee, on being notified of the proceeding, took a recess. No injunction being issued immediately, the committee resumed its sessions.

The first witness put on the stand was Vivian J. Fagin, formerly United States Marshal in Cincinnati. Fagin testified that he had carried interest on county funds from the treasurer's office and had given them personally to George B. Cox, while he, Fagin, was a deputy under former Treasurer Lee Schott. He said the money was in envelopes, just as they were received by Cashier George Schott from the banks.

Fagin said John H. Gibson, when elected treasurer, had discussed the office with him, and that he, Fagin, had explained the system of giving the interest.

"Did County Treasurer French ever take the money to Cox?" asked Horstman.

"He told me he did."

Harry E. Hope, of the present treasurer's office, testified as to the money returned to the treasury for the former treasurers. He said the records did not show anything collected for interest during Schott's term of office. He said the total amount paid in by former treasurers after the last legislative investigation was $214,998.76. He also explained the present method of advertising for bids for interest on county funds.

MONUMENT TO LATE SENATOR M. A. HANNA

ADDRESS BY FORMER ATTORNEY GENERAL GRIGGS.

SECRETARY TAFT ATTENDS.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 23.—A monument in memory of the late Senator Marcus A. Hanna was dedicated here this afternoon in the presence of many distinguished guests and thousands of spectators.

The oration was delivered by John W. Griggs, former United States Attorney General. Vice President Fairbanks was to have presided, but he was unable to attend. His place was filled by ex-Gov. Myron T. Herrick. Secretary Taft and President Hadley, of Yale College, and Gov. Harris and staff were among the guests.

The monument was dedicated on its temporary site in Wade Park. Later it will be moved down town and placed in the hall being built in connection with the grouping of public buildings. The statue is bronze and was designed by St. Gaudens. The figure is eight feet high. The pedestal, designed by Henry Bacon, of New York, adds twelve feet to the height. It is of granite. The statue was unveiled by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick and Mrs. Mabel Hanna Parsons, daughters of the late Senator.

In his address Mr. Griggs said in part:

"The State of Ohio glories in a long roll of illustrious names of sons of hers who have won fame for themselves and never dying honor for their State. High upon that roll, where are written the names of presidents of the republic, of great soldiers, of statesmen and jurists, of financiers and philanthropists, stands the name of Marcus Alonzo Hanna, in whose honor this monument is raised and dedicated this day. For his countrymen of this generation, who know his work and his worth, no monument is needed to remind them of his pre-eminent services to the nation. Before he died they knew and honored and appreciated, and they have not forgotten and will not forget. But in the days that are beyond, when other feet shall tread these paths and other eyes shall read his name upon this monument, it will serve to recall a great leader and an ideal citizen. If some inquirer in after days shall ask, Why is there a monument to Senator Hanna? it shall be answered: Because he filled all the ideals of an American from youth to the day he died, rising step by step to the highest plane of usefulness in the service of his country; because as a business man he was successful in business by honorable methods alone; because, as a prosperous man he was not proud; because, as a friend, he was loyal and true-hearted; because, as a leader of men he was wise, yet unselfish; because, as an employer of labor he had a genuine and heartfelt sympathy with his employes, and, more broadly, with all who toil; because he was a man among men; because, in many and varied capacities—merchant, manufacturer, capitalist, political leader and Senator in Congress, he was an ideal American citizen."

Theosophical Society Meets.

The Louisville Theosophical Society will hold its regular Sunday evening meeting to-night at 8 o'clock in the Y. M. H. A. Hall. The public is invited. On May 31 J. W. Homstard, of Cincinnati, will deliver a lecture on "The Great Teachers."

HI KI KILLED BY SHELBYVILLE POLICE

DESPERATE NEGRO PUTS UP A HARD FIGHT.

MURDERER HAD BEEN ABOUT CITY SINCE ESCAPE.

FORTY SHOTS FIRED AT HIM.

Shelbyville, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—After a desperate running fight, in which more than forty shots were fired, the Shelbyville police and a posse of deputies succeeded in killing Will Jeems, better known as Hi Ki, the negro murderer. The killing occurred just south of town at 6:30 o'clock to-night. The crazy desperado fought to the last ditch, firing six shots at the officers as he ran toward an unused negro cemetery just south of the city limits, where he hoped to escape by hiding in the dense undergrowth. Fortunately none of the officers was struck by the bullets, but several had narrow escapes.

Hi Ki had been hiding around the outskirts of Shelbyville since he escaped from Central Asylum at Lakeland, March 25. The local officers knew he would never be taken alive, and went prepared to kill him on sight. At 6 o'clock this evening a negro woman living only a short distance from the police headquarters reported that Hi Ki was at her house waiting for money, which he had demanded she procure under penalty of death. Officers Morgan and Bennett called former Policeman Duncan, Deputy Sheriff Baskill and Isaiah Fawks to their aid, and after arming themselves proceeded to the woman's house. Jeems got wind that they were coming and bolted for the old cemetery. As soon as the officers got in sight of him he pulled his pistol and fired two shots at Mr. Duncan. The fusillade then began, and continued until the negro fell riddled with bullets.

The news of the killing spread rapidly, and more than 500 persons visited the scene and viewed the remains before they were removed to the undertaking establishment.

The negro was one of the most desperate men in the State, and had been a continual source of trouble to the authorities for several years. After killing a man in Louisville he made his way to Cincinnati, where he was shot down by a pedestrian after he had assaulted a policeman with his club. Upon recovering from the wound he was removed to the Louisville jail, where he caused a reign of terror on several occasions by attacking prisoners and guards. At his trial he created such a scene that it was decided he was insane, and he was sent to the asylum, from which he soon escaped.

HARGIS' CASE JUNE 1.

MANY NOTED CASES ON THE BREATHITT DOCKET.

John Abner's Trial For the Murder of Jim Cockrill Set For Same Day.

Jackson, Ky., May 23.—Circuit Court convenes here Monday and the number of sensational cases to be tried is an indication that the term will be the most notable in the history of Breathitt county.

The case which will attract most attention is the prosecution against Beach Hargis, the slayer of his father, Judge James Hargis, who himself was on trial at Lexington for murder one year ago.

The youthful murderer has been in the county jail ever since he killed his father. Everything that money and skill can accomplish will be done in an effort to secure the prisoner's freedom. His devoted mother visits his cell nightly, and has been in daily consultation with his attorneys for several weeks. She announces that she will spend every cent of her fortune in the defense of her boy. The trial of young Hargis will begin June 1.

Next in prominence is the case against John Abner charged with the assassination of Town Marshal James Cockrill, who was shot from a second-story window of the court house while standing on Main street, in August, 1902. He was tried last March by Special Judge W. H. Holt, but the jury failed to agree upon a verdict. The case will be called on June 8.

The prosecution against former State Treasurer W. R. Day on the charge of forging the name of his uncle, Floyd Day, to a $5,000 note, is also set for trial during the coming term. This case was tried at last term of court and resulted in a hung jury. The defendant is now in jail at Hazard, where he was convicted last March on a similar charge. The Court of Appeals granted a new trial in this case. Day is a first cousin of Beach Hargis.

JOLLY TIME

Arranged For Kentucky Editors At Cerulean Springs.

MAMMOTH CAVE TRIP HAS BEEN ABANDONED.

ONE DAY WILL BE SPENT AT HOPKINSVILLE

COMMITTEE HARD AT WORK.

Hopkinsville, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—At beautiful Cerulean Springs, in the smiling Pennyrile, the Kentucky Press Association will hold its annual meeting the middle of June. Beginning June 15, the editors and their families will spend a joyous week, and Capt. R. S. Pool, the genial host, whose culinary accomplishments have made him famous all over Dixie, promises the newspapermen a delightful time.

The officers of the association are Lew B. Brown, of Harrodsburg, president; Tim Needham, of Williamstown, vice president; W. Vernon Richardson, of Danville, secretary-treasurer. The executive committee is composed of T. C. Underwood, of Hopkinsville, chairman; W. B. Haldeman, of Louisville,; Dan Bowman, of Versailles; E. Barry, of Benton; George F. Friel, of Ashland. Assisting these officers in the arrangements and plans for the occasion are the following committees:

Arrangements—Henry R. Lawrence, Cadiz, chairman; T. C. Underwood and W. A. Wilgus, Hopkinsville; W. V. Richardson, Danville.

Banquet—Edward A. Jonas, Henderson, chairman and toastmaster; Charles Hert, Morganfield; C. C. Givens, Madisonville.

Many Social Features.

Morning and afternoon business sessions will be held, but with ample hours for rest and recreation. A reception by the First District League will be given on the first evening. On the next, Tuesday night, the evening will be reserved for the Eighth District League and a ball. Wednesday afternoon and evening will be spent in Hopkinsville, for which interesting plans are being matured. Thursday night the annual banquet will take place. Chairman Jonas, of the Banquet Committee, was here yesterday looking after details of his part of the programme. To Mayor Charles M. Meacham, of the Hopkinsville Kentuckian, he assigned this happy subject: "The Mayor's Nest."

A meeting of the arrangement committee was held to-day at Hotel Latham, and reports showed that its work was in good shape. The visit to Hopkinsville, which the editors will take, will be a very pleasant feature of the annual outing. There will be attractive entertainment, a visit to points of interest and a supper at the Hotel Latham. The transportation end of the Cerulean meeting is in the hands of Secretary Richardson, and he has taken the matter up with the railroad companies. The duty of seeing after the hotel accommodations of the crowd will be looked after by W. A. Wilgus, who is also in correspondence with the Illinois Central railroad officials in reference to running a special train on the occasion of the visit of the association to this city.

Owing to inability to arrange rail connections without the loss of a day, the Press Association will not include Mammoth Cave in the intinerary this summer, and the programme is being arranged with a view of spending practically all of the week at Cerulean.

Missing Man's Body Found.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 23.—The body of Joseph North was found near the Turtle River by Indians. North had been drowned. It is thought that Alfred Kitson, North's companion, was also drowned as the two departed a month ago in a rowboat across the lake for a houseboat, and nothing had been heard from them until the finding of North's body. Kitson was the son of the late Commodore Kitson, a former wealthy citizen and pioneer of St. Paul.

NO DIVISION

Of Opinion On New Haven Merger Suit.

SUCH IS STATEMENT AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

RAILROAD MEN THINK CASE WILL NOT BE PUSHED.

HAD TIP TO THAT EFFECT.

Washington, May 23.—The White House to-day made public an official denial of a story that serious difference arose yesterday between the President and Attorney General Bonaparte over the question of bringing suit against the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, the story going so far as to say that Mr. Bonaparte had threatened to resign. The White House statement, which goes into detail, is corroborated by the personal statements of Cabinet officers.

The statement made public by direction of the President follows:

"The story is a mere invention. There was no difference whatever between the President and the Attorney General over the New York, New Haven and Hartford suit. Yesterday morning attention was called from Massachusetts to the fact that the Massachusetts State Court had already acted against the trolley lines so far as Massachusetts was concerned, and the suggestion was accordingly made that the action should be brought in one of the other States, inasmuch as the purpose of the suit had already been achieved so far as Massachusetts was concerned.

"The President put the suggestion before the Attorney General and asked him to bring it up at the Cabinet meeting, which was then but half an hour off. As a precautionary measure the newspapers that had the announcement on the bringing of the suit were asked to hold it up.

"The matter was then discussed by the Cabinet and it was decided that the action of the State court in Massachusetts would make no difference in the course of procedure by the Government, and the newspapers were at once notified that the announcement of the bringing of the suit would stand.

"There was no division of opinion in the Cabinet and not the slightest friction or even discussion of any kind between any of the Cabinet officers and the President, or among the officers themselves. The suit in question was determined on some three months ago. The only question discussed yesterday was as to where it should be brought."

NEXT STEP IN SUIT

Probably Will Not Be Taken Before August.

Boston, May 23.—Present indications are that the next step of the Federal Government in its suit to prevent the merger of the Boston and Maine railroad with the New York, New Haven and Hartford system, and also to separate the New Haven road from its street railway holdings in Massachusetts, will not be taken before next August. The nature of the next move of the Government will depend upon the New Haven road's reply to the various counts of the bill in equity filed in the United States Circuit Court yesterday by United States District Attorney French.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Company does not have to enter an appearance in the Federal court until the next "rule day," which comes the first week in July, and the company is allowed thirty days after that time in which to file its answer to the bill.

Although yesterday's bill prays for a temporary injunction against the New Haven road, it is not considered probable that any immediate motion for an injunction will be made. It is pointed out that the recent decision of the Massachusetts Supreme Court concerning the New Haven's control of Massachusetts trolley lines acts as an injunction on that phase of the case, while the so-called Cole bill of the Massachusetts Legislature prevents the New Haven road from voting or otherwise enjoying the ownership of its 109,000 shares of Boston and Maine stock until after July 1, thus effectually enjoining immediate action on the proposed merger.

Boston and Maine officials were reticent to-day concerning the Government's suit. President Tuttle was indisposed at his home and could not be interviewed, and in his absence no other Boston and Maine official cared to make any statement.

SUIT NOT TO BE PUSHED.

Such Is the Impression of Railway Officials At New Haven.

New Haven, Conn., May 23.—As to the legal process which will be followed in the case of the Federal Government against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, it is stated here authoritatively that if the case follows a normal course of procedure the company probably will answer the various counts as soon as possible under the law and under the provisions for sessions of the court. The answer can take any one of several forms. After the first decision in the Circuit Court, appeal can be had to the Circuit Court of Appeals, whose decision in some cases is final, and from which appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States is allowed in other cases. Unless the case is expedited in the Supreme Court it is not regarded here as likely that it can reach a decision in that tribunal in less than eighteen months or two years, and is much more likely to be longer reached than shorter, owing to the complicated character of the various interests involved, as well as the complex nature of the New Haven property itself.

Partly on information derived from a director of the New Haven Company, it appears that the officers of the company have from time to time during the past year received what were considered assurances from the Administration at Washington that the case would not be pressed and this gives strong probability to the report that there is some division of opinion in the matter within the Administration itself. The case in any event will be carried over to a new Federal administration. These features of the suit create a strong impression in railroad circles here, that it is not likely to be hard pressed, and may not reach final adjudication at all.

Star Day, Tuesday, May 26. Watch for the Stations and Wear a Star.

Married In Jeffersonville.

Clifton P. Boyer and Mrs. Mary Ellen Chriswell, both of Louisville, were married in Jeffersonville yesterday by Magistrate Thomas M. Paswater. The bridegroom is a mechanic and was born in Louisville on December 27, 1877. The bride is also a native of Lousville and was born February 16, 1884.

Answer To Leman Suit.

Chicago, May 23.—Alexander G. Hackstaff, a director of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, to-day filed a formal answer in the suit begun against the railroad and its officers by Henry W. Leman. Mr. Hackstaff in his answer denies that Leman is entitled to the relief sought.

IN SCOTT COUNTY

No Liquor May Be Sold After Next December 31.

LAST DEALER THERE REMONSTRATED OUT OF BUSINESS.

PROHIBITION THEN FOR TWO YEARS AT LEAST.

BROTHER-IN-LAW TAKES BODY.

At one period thought to be proof against the attacks of the temperance forces, Scott county, Ind., will become dry on December 31, the last attempt to fight a remonstrance having come to an end in Jeffersonville yesterday. At that time Judge Harry C. Montgomery, of the Clark Circuit Court, ordered the remonstrance returned to the Auditor of Scott county to be filed among the records there in the case of William L. Wilson against James H. Blunt and others. The plaintiff had appealed from the Board of County Commissioners, that body having refused to grant him a license to sell intoxicating liquors at Scottsburg.

Wilson applied for a license at the February term of the Board of County Commissioners and was met by a remonstrance signed by a majority of the voters of Vienna township, and filed during January. The board refused to grant Wilson a license on the ground that a majority of the voters were opposed to such action. Wilson then appealed to the Scott Circuit Court and from there a change of venue to the Clark Circuit Court was taken to get the case out of Scott county. On Friday Judge Montgomery sustained a motion to strike out the verified reply of the plaintiff to the defendant's answer and the case was dismissed on motion of the plaintiff.

This action removes every saloon from Vienna township for the next two years, there not being any in the other townships of the county at this time. There are three saloons now doing business in Scottsburg, but they will be retired before the new year. The first will close in June, the next in July and the last on December 31. Lexington, where a number of saloons formerly existed, has been dry for some time. The town was formerly the county seat, and after it was removed to Scottsburg the latter place became famed for its many drinking resorts, all of which will cease by January 1, 1909, and the entire county will be dry for at least two years.

TO BROTHER-IN-LAW'S HOME

James Metz's Body Taken Yesterday —No Acid Burns.

The body of James Metz, who took carbolic acid after being arrested at Sellersburg Friday night to end his life rather than to be taken to the Clark county, Ind., jail in Jeffersonville, was removed yesterday to the home of Thomas Cannon, a brother-in-law, near Watson, Ind., but up to last night no funeral arrangements had been made. The body was prepared for burial at the undertaking parlors of E. M. Coots & Sons before anyone claimed it. The features were not marred and there was only a slight mark of the acid on the lower lip.

Dr. W. M. Varble, who was called to attend Metz in the Clark county jail and found he was dead, said yesterday that he was confident death came while Metz was on the car. When he arrived in Jeffersonville in charge of Marshal George Hostettler his eyes were wide open, but he could not be induced to talk. Hostettler thought his prisoner was sobering up because he would not talk, and after getting Metz to the sidewalk from off the car Charles Anderson, Deputy Sheriff, was called to assist in carrying the prisoner into jail. Later on one of the inmates said he was sure Metz was dead, and he proved to be.

The poison was taken at Sellersburg after Metz was arrested. He told several persons he had taken the dose from a small bottle of carbolic acid he carried in his shoe, but those about him were uncertain whether he was telling the truth, but he was given several drinks of whisky. It was not the first time Metz had attempted to kill himself, and he had made numerous threats that he would do so. Metz had several quarrels with his wife, Mrs. Martha Metz, to whom he was married September 14, 1882, and she finally applied for divorce. The case was heard on October 8, 1907, and taken under advisement. The two went back together, and had been getting along fairly well until Metz was arrested. Besides his wife he is survived by two sons and two daughters.

WARD SCHOOL CLASSES IN A CHORAL CONTEST

JOHN HOERTZ SCHOOL CARRIES OFF HONORS.

KENTUCKY-ST. AND TWELFTH-WARD NEXT.

CHILDREN SING EXCELLENTLY

The Girls' High School presented an inspiring scene of animation yesterday afternoon when the long anticipated choral contest was given before a large and thoroughly interested audience. Those who heard the concert came away convinced that it is not necessary to travel hundreds of miles to hear a well trained chorus of children.

Nine classes, chosen from the sixth grade of the ward schools competed for three prizes. The test chorus was Barnby's "Sweet and Low," without accompaniment, and in addition each class sang another selection. The winning classes were:

First—John Hoertz school, Miss Addie M. Troll, teacher.

Second—Kentucky-street school, Miss Annie Voegtle, teacher.

Third—Twelfth-ward school, Miss Selma Kranz, teacher.

The selections, beside the test chorus, were, first, "Who Is Sylvia," Schubert; second, "Oh Hush Thee, My Baby," Sir Arthur Sullivan; third, "The Linden Tree," Schubert. It will be seen that the music offered was of a high order and the average of merit in performance was surprisingly good. The other competitors were classes of the Madison-street, Smyser-avenue, Sixth-street, George H. Tingley, Lucia avenue and Fifth-ward schools, the teachers being Misses R. H. Conkling, L. M. Barton, Amelia Seller, Amelia Voegtle, Annie Krieger and Adelia Reibert. The judges were Mr. George H. Wilson, Mrs. K. Whipple Dobbs, John Surmann, T. C. Barr and G. B. Gookins.

At the conclusion of the contest Edward Gleason played two piano solos, and the children, nearly four hundred in number, united in singing a soul-stirring medley of national airs, and nothing in the whole performance was more striking than the enthusiasm of the budding patriots who delivered the strains of "America," "Dixie" and the "Star Spangled Banner" with a force that fairly lifted the audience from its seats.

Miss Caroline Bourgard, the music supervisor, had charge of the affair and is to be greatly complimented on its success.

MAE WOOD TO BE RELEASED ON MONDAY.

Representative of a Surety Company Asks To Be Allowed To Furnish Bail.

New York, May 23.—That Mae C. Wood, who was committed to the Tombs on a charge of perjury at the close of her suit against United States Senator Platt for divorce, is not without friends, was demonstrated to-day when a representative of the American Surety Company called at the District Attorney's office and asked to be allowed to furnish bail for her. The bail was fixed by Justice O'Gorman at $5,000.

The request was referred to Assistant District Attorney Miner, but as it was after 12 o'clock the representative of the surety company was told that Miss Wood could not be bailed out until Monday. He left, saying that he would be back on Monday.

He refused to say anything about who was behind the move to furnish bail.

TO NEW ALBANY

Congressional District's Democrats Will Flock June 20.

COUNTY CHAIRMEN CHOSE IT AS CONVENTION CITY.

WATER COMPANY NEEDS NO PERMIT TO EXCAVATE.

SO HOLDS CITY JUDGE PARIS.

The Democratic congressional convention of the Third Indiana district will be held on Saturday, June 20, in New Albany, the place and date being fixed yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the county chairmen of the New Albany district held at the Hotel Ashland, in New Albany. All of the counties were represented except Orange and Crawford, and besides the chairmen, a number of other leading Democrats of the district were in attendance. The district chairman, Mark Storen, of Scottsburg, presided over the conference and Edward Fitzpatrick, of New Albany, acted as secretary.

New Albany, Huntingburg and Scottsburg were applicants for the convention, and six ballots were taken before a decision was reached. On the last ballot New Albany and Huntingburg had three votes each and Scottsburg one, and Chairman D. Gladden, of Scott county, who had voted for Scottsburg, changed to New Albany.

Mr. Storen announced that the Hon. Thomas R. Marshall, of Columbia City, Democratic nominee for Governor, would attend the convention and would make a speech. As he has never appeared in New Albany the Democrats are preparing to give him a rousing reception. Congressman W. Elijah Cox, of Jasper, Dubois county, who is now serving his first term in Congress, will attend the convention and a re-nomination will probably be given him by acclamation.

Before the conference adjourned yesterday afternoon, Mr. Storen talked to the county chairmen about the importance of a thorough organization by precincts and it is his intention to hold county meetings throughout the district and have conferences with the precinct committeemen who form the central committees and arrangements will be made for nominees of the State ticket to attend these county meetings and perfect plans for effective work during the coming campaign.

NEED NOT GET PERMIT,

So Says City Judge As To Water Company Excavations.

The suit of the city of New Albany against the New Albany Water Company to compel the company to take out a permit each time it desired to make an excavation in alleys or streets was dismissed on demurrer yesterday by City Judge John M. Paris. The city passed an ordinance last April requiring all persons or corporations to secure permits from the City Engineer before making excavations. The water company ignored the ordinance and in order to test the rights of the corporation suit was instituted.

In overruling a demurrer to the defendant's answer to the complaint, Judge Paris held that the water company operates under a franchise granted by the city of New Albany which exercised its police power for the public safety and required the company to assume responsibility for all damages arising from negligence and that the water company is a quasi-public corporation and is bound by the terms of its franchise to furnish water to the city and the inhabitants upon proper request being made.

The court held that the effect of the ordinance is simply to require all other persons, not operating under special contract, to assume a like responsibility as has already been required of the water company by the city. He decided that to enforce the ordinance against the water company would be to say that the City Engineer shall have the power to say whether or not the water company shall exercise its rights and duties under its franchise.

City Attorney Weathers said that he would take an appeal from the decision to the Floyd Circuit Court.

DEFERRED PAYMENT COSTS

Must Be Borne By Property Owners For Street Improvement.

The property holders on East Main street in New Albany, who protested against paying for the asphalt improvement from Pearl to West street on the ground that the work was defective, must pay the interest and costs that have accrued on the deferred payment. This was the opinion rendered to the Board of Public Works yesterday morning by Paris & Trusty, who took the place of the late Judge Jacob Herter, who had been engaged by City Attorney John H. Weathers to give an opinion as to the liability of the property holders for the interest accruing on the cost of the improvement since the street was offered to the city as completed about four years ago by the contractors, the Barber Asphalt Paving Company.

When the city, on complaint of the property holders along the street, declined to accept the street, the asphalt company filed suit against the city for breach of contract, and the case was tried several weeks ago in the United States Court at Indianapolis, the company being awarded judgment for the amount of its claim. Court decisions in similar cases were read by Mr. Paris yesterday, showing that interest followed the principal and that property holders, who declined to pay, litigated at their own hazard. A letter from Henry Dowling, of Indianapolis, written to Judge Herter the day before his death, was also presented to the board. In it Mr. Dowling gave the opinion that the interest followed the principal.

The opinion was placed on file and a resolution was adopted instructing City Engineer S. T. Mann to make the preliminary assessment roll for the street. This work will probably occupy two months, after which notice will be given to the property holders to appear before the board and file objections to their assessment, if there is an error in the amount.

The interest to be paid by the property holders amounts to about $7,000 and the total amount to be assessed against the property is about $70,000. The five-year guarantee contract on the street expires next year, and the board announced yesterday that before the maintenance bond is released at the expiration of the guarantee period the company will be ordered to put the street in thorough repair.

A petition of John W. Gaither for the opening of West Second street from Henry to Cherry streets was received and placed on file. There is no driveway for vehicles between State and West Seventh streets, a distance of seven squares.

Property holders at 1736 and 1738 Spring street, on Galt, between Rear Market and Division streets, and between Ekin and Culbertson avenues, from Vincennes to Thomas streets, were ordered to connect their premises with the sewer system.

COMMITTEE REPORT ADOPTED BY SOUTHERN ASSEMBLY.

NEGRO EVANGELIZATION IS A THEME OF DEBATE.

VISIT TO OLD BATTLEFIELD.

Greensboro, N. C., May 23.—Negro evangelization was again a theme of discussion at to-day's sessions of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. Many of the delegates participated in the debate. The subject occupied most of the morning session.

Among those addressing the assembly were the Rev. Dr. A. B. Curry, of Tennessee, chairman of the committee; W. A. Clark, of Columbia, S. C., and the Rev. C. B. Scott, of Mississippi, the last named being a negro minister and a commissioner to the assembly. The assembly finally adopted the committee recommendation approving the interest in the evangelization of the negro and coming conferences between white and negro ministers, and establishing Sunday-schools for the negroes under the direction of white teachers, etc.

Inter-Church Federation.

The following delegates were appointed to the inter-church federation: Dr. J. R. Howerton, Virginia; the Rev. H. E. Kirk, the Rev. A. J. McKelvey, Georgia; the Rev. Marion Ansel, South Carolina; Samuel M. Inman, Georgia; Dr. J. B. Walden, Florida; Judge R. T. Simpson, Alabama; Dr. J. M. Hunter, Louisiana; Dr. J. B. Horton, Mississippi; Dr. E. A. Long, Arkansas; J. Farley, Texas; Dr. W. R. Debuque, Missouri; Dr. A. B. Curry, Tennessee; the Rev. Edwin Muller, Kentucky.

Recommendations of the committee on revised proof texts of doctrinal standards were adopted. The assembly is to appoint a committee to take charge of the work of editing documents selected with the view of making them of the most interest to future generations. Dr. A. F. Campbell presented a resolution, which was adopted, approving laws against child labor and calling upon Christian parents to obey these laws. The interests of the Indian school at Durant, Okla., were presented by President Hotchkin of the school, and propositions made by citizens of Durant looking to more buildings and better equipment were referred to the committee on home missions.

Calvin Anniversary.

The committee on the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the birth of John Calvin made a report recommending that the day be celebrated by the assembly at its next session, May, 1909, and that every church within the assembly celebrate the event as near the exact date, July 10, as possible next year. The committee also recommended that a memorial to John Calvin be erected at Montreal, N. C., in a building to cost $25,000 and to serve the purpose of the summer associations and the school it is hoped to erect there. It was stated that a subscription of 10 cents per capita within the church would raise the needed amount. The committee report was adopted and the present committee was continued with authority to carry out its own recommendations. The time and place of next meeting will be decided next Monday. At the close of the morning session adjournment was taken until 9:30 o'clock Monday morning.

Members of the assembly this afternoon visited the Guilford battle ground, going there on a special train.

BROTHERHOOD MOVEMENT

Subject of Eloquent Plea By Dr. Landrith At Kansas City.

Kansas City, May 23.—"Christianity is not exclusively, but essentially masculine. The Redeemer of mankind was a man. The Bible is essentially, though not exclusively, masculine. I maintain that the evangelization of the world is the work of men. Every man who starts on a downward course is led by men; men who are to be raised to a higher life must be led by men. I want to see men represent the spiritual power of the churches. The present condition which shows an average of only forty men members in every congregation of 200 must be changed. It is the purpose of the Presbyterian Brotherhood to make the men the active workers of the churches, and such a result will be realized."

In this vein the Rev. Dr. Landrith, president of the Belmont Female College, of Nashville, made a powerful plea in support of the Presbyterian Brotherhood at to-day's session of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America. The Presbyterian Brotherhood movement, ministerial relief and child labor claimed practically all of the attention of the delegates to-day. Continuing, Dr. Landrith said the evangelization of the world depended upon the success of the churches in getting the laymen interested as active workers. He said it was especially necessary to get the young men in the work.

Dr. G. F. Bull, of Scranton, Pa., also delivered an earnest speech in support of the Presbyterian Brotherhood movement. He laid special stress upon the impetus the movement gives to evangelism by organizing laymen for work.

Dr. John Bushnell, of Minneapolis, submitted the report of the Board of Ministerial Relief, which he supplemented by one of the most eloquent addresses yet delivered before the conference. He said that the man who devoted his life to ministerial work deserved every comfort in his old age, and that the church must ever be liberal in caring for him.

Dr. B. L. Agnew, of Philadelphia, secretary of the board, said that for the eleventh year the board was able to report to the assembly that it was out of debt.

After the report was accepted a resolution was offered providing that a committee of five ministers and three elders be appointed to arrange a plan by which every minister in the church will receive a salary of at least $1,000 a year.

In submitting the report of the Assembly Herald, the chairman of the committee said that if Congress would remove the tariff duty on wood pulp the Herald will come to the assembly without a deficit next year.

A great evangelistic meeting was held at Convention Hall to-night, which was attended by 12,000 people. The Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, of Philadelphia, delivered the sermon, and the music was under the direction of Charles M. Alexander, of Birmingham, Eng.

It is expected that the assembly will make plans for an evangelistic campaign, to be begun within a year, to touch every part of the world, to be under the direction of the Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, and the expenses to be borne chiefly by laymen.

John H. Converse, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, Philadelphia, who in the last several years has given more than $250,000 for evangelical work, is said to be the leader in the movement.

TENTH BALLOT TAKEN

In Election For Bishops With No Known Result.

Baltimore, May 23.—No election again was the result from the eighth ballot for bishops which was announced at the general conference of the Methodist-Episcopal church this morning. The vote follows:

Wilson S. Lewis, Sioux City, Iowa, 476; William A. Quayle, Chicago, 471; Homer C. Stuntz, field secretary Board of Foreign Missions, Madison N. J., 443; Charles W. Smith, Pittsburg, 420; Edwin H. Hughes, Greencastle, Ind., 389; Robert McIntyre, Los Angeles, 368; David G. Downey, New York, 339; Joseph B. Hingeley, Minneapolis, 237; Charles L. Goodell, New York, 174; Henry C. Jennings, Cincinnati, 157; R. J. Cooke, New York, 149; Samuel Dorchester, Jr., Pittsburg, 119; M. C. B. Mason (colored), Cincinnati, 115.

There was no election on the ninth ballot for bishops at the Methodist-Episcopal General Conference.

John S. Huyler, of New York, a delegate to the conference and an active supporter of Dr. Goodell, pastor of Calvary M. E. church, New York City, for the episcopacy, has received a telegram protesting against the "injustice suffered by their pastor and desires it to be known that he enjoys their fullest confidence." The message was suggested by G. A. J. Norman, president of the Board of Trustees, and W. E. Heritage, secretary of the official board of Calvary church.

The conference to-day voted to adjourn sine die Monday evening, June 1. The special order for to-day was the report of the Committee on Temperance, which was read by Gov. Hanly, of Indiana. B. Lee Pagett, of Portland, Oregon, followed with a minority report.

The two reports were in perfect accord in denouncing the liquor business and in pledging enmity to all forms of legalized traffic in intoxicants. They differed in their recommendation of the methods to be employed in bringing about its downfall.

The deadlock election of bishops continued in the ninth ballot, which resulted as follows:

Total vote 741; necessary to elect 494; Quayle, 489; Lewis, 480; Stunts, 456; Charles W. Smith, 445; McIntyre, 399; Hughes, 357; Hingeley, 186; Jennings, 157; Goodell, 152; Cooke, 149; Dorchester, 146; Mason, 133.

The tenth ballot was taken, but it will not be counted until Monday. Adjournment was taken with the Temperance Committee's report still under consideration.

President Lewis also announced that on Monday, in company with the Rev. S. E. Reynolds and William Herring, the latter a layman, he would go to Baltimore, Md., and present the report relative to union adopted yesterday to the meeting of the Methodist Episcopal conference now in session in that city.

AT NINE DOLLARS EACH

Converts To Baptist Faith Being Won In Oklahoma.

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 23.—Converts to the Baptist faith are won in Oklahoma at a cost of but $9 each, a record in economy surpassing that of any other State or Territory, according to a statement made at today's session of the Northern Baptist Convention by the Rev. C. J. Stalcup, representing the Home Mission Society of Oklahoma. Dr. Stalcup recounted the history of the mission work in Oklahoma, beginning with the Christian crusade in 1865, and said it had been continued up to the present time without interruption and with very gratifying results.

An impressive memorial service was held this afternoon in honor of the late E. E. Chivers, D. D., formerly field secretary of the Home Mission Society.

Closer Union Approved.

York, Pa., May 23.—The general synod of the Reformed Church today approved the articles of agreement, or plan of federation for closer union of the Reformed Churches in America holding the Presbyterian system. DYING ACTOR

Jests With His Physicians and Friends.

PETER F. DAILEY MEETS DEATH WITH A SMILE.

SUCCUMBS TO A COMPLICATION OF DISEASES.

WAS NOTED AS A COMEDIAN.

Chicago, May 23.—Peter F. Dailey, one of the best-known comedians in the United States, died to-day at the Auditorium Hotel. He had been sick for about a week with a combination of grip, lumbago and pneumonia.

Mr. Dailey for the past two or three years was one of the leading comedians of the Joe Weber Company. He came here with the company, which began an engagement in a burlesque of "The Merry Widow" at the Colonial Theater last Monday. He was scarcely able to take his part Monday night, and had to be assisted to his feet a number of times The audience, however, knew nothing about his illness. He had a temperature that night of 103. He was unable to leave his bed the next day, but it was not thought that his condition was at all alarming. Twice during the week he showed signs of recovery, and not until this morning did it become known that he was critically ill. Joe Weber and his manager, L. J. Rodriguez, called on him this forenoon, and at that time the attending physician informed them there was no hope for Mr. Dailey.

Death Was Sudden.

Drs. Francis W. McNamara and Charles Paddock, both of whom were friends of long standing with Dailey, were at the bedside of the famous actor at the time of his death. They said that Dailey's sudden end was the result of his devotion to his work and his failure to rest through his illness.

"Dailey had been suffering from pneumonia for fully a week," said Dr. McNamara. "When he died only Dr. Paddock and I were with him. We had placed him in a chair in order to give him more air, because he was struggling for breath, and it was while he was sitting up in the chair that he died. The death was sudden, it is true, but in no way sensational or mysterious."

A touching incident connected with the actor's death was the frenzied grief of his old negro servant, who had attended Mr. Dailey for many years. The negro was dazed when told that his employer had passed away. He appealed brokenly to the hotel authorities to "keep people away" and let him be alone with his dead.

Complete arrangements for the final disposition of the body have not yet been made. Robert Dailey, of New York, a brother of the famous comedian and the nearest relative, was notified immediately after the death and a telegram was received from him later in the day requesting that the body be sent to New York. The body will be sent to-morrow and will be accompanied by some of Mr. Dailey's friends in this city.

* * *

Cheerful Invalid.

Mr. Dailey was a cheerful invalid during his several days' illness. He joked and chatted with his nurse and his physician almost up to the time of his death. A few hours before the end Dr. McNamara entered the sick room where the patient lay in bed, and, addressing his nurse, he inquired:

"Well, what have you been doing this morning for Mr. Dailey?"

"Oh, she has been doing her daily task, Doc," interrupted the dying comedian with a smile.

Yesterday morning Mr. Rodriguez went to his bedside and found him in a particularly happy mood. Great hopes were then held for his speedy recovery.

"How are you feeling?" asked Rodriguez.

"Fine and dandy," replied Mr. Dailey. "I just drank two quarts of milk."

"That's fine," said Rodriguez; and, quick as a flash, the patient replied, "Fine for the milkman, all right."

Early this morning, however, Mr. Dailey's strength began to fail, and Rodriguez and Weber were summoned to his room. They left about an hour before the end. Death came peacefully, and for some time previously the actor was unconscious.

PLEASED AUDIENCE HEARS PHILHARMÓNI'CS SINGLE CONCERT OF SEASON.

With Mr. Victor Rudolf as conductor, the Philharmonic Society gave a successful concert at the Masonic Theater last night. This is the only concert given by the orchestra during the present season, and a large audience was attracted by the excellent programme offered. The music was specially adapted to the season, being all of a light character. The Preciosa overture, "Andante" and "Finale" from Haydn's Symphony, known as "La Chaise," Bach's "Air for G String," arranged for string orchestra, ballet music from "Boabdil," and Miss Mildred Hill's "Mermaid's Song," arranged by Mr. Rudolf, constituted the ensemble numbers. The latter, naturally, aroused more interest than anything else on the programme. It is the orchestration of one of the numbers written by Miss Hill for the cantata given by herself and Mrs. Dobbs at the Woman's Club last season, and is a most graceful and fanciful creation abounding in imagination and charm. The vocalist was Mrs. William Davenport, who was heard in a group of songs by Mary Turner Salter, R. Strauss and Veracine, the Strauss song having a violin obligato by Mr. Letzler.

Mrs. Davenport's singing was distinguished by great variety and delicacy of shading and she received a hearty encore. A tasteful accompaniment was played by Mrs. Carrie Sapinsky. Mr. Charles Letzler's violin solo was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. His rich and thrilling tone and complete mastery of his instrument made his solo an important and attractive number. His selection was the Wienlawski Concerto, and his playing entitles him to a front rank among concert violinists.

Mr. Rudolf is a dignified and impressive conductor and managed his effects with skill and judgment.

WANTON KILLING OF AN UNKNOWN NEGRO.

Crowd of Young Men Drove Stranger Out of Williamsburg, Firing Pistols At Him As He Ran.

Williamsburg, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—An unknown negro was killed on the railroad tracks about two miles south of Corbin to-day. For several weeks a crowd of young men have been running negroes out of town and when this negro came in the crowd started him on south, shooting their pistols. No reason has been learned why they killed him. Several men have been arrested. The Coroner has gone to investigate. Residents of that section are much wrought up over the affair and are determined to suppress such violence at once.

He was well known throughout the State and put up many large buildings. His firm built the fisheries and forestry buildings at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893. He was a member of the Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias. A widow and one son survive.

DO YOU WANT AN INVESTMENT THAT WILL DOUBLE YOUR MONEY

We have one which, we believe, will do that—and MORE. There is, of course, a possibility of its not doing so. This must be said of ANY enterprise, and only a fool will claim the opposite. But we DO believe that there is less chance of failure in THIS than in almost any undertaking you could mention—and, if the worst imaginable should happen, YOU WILL AT LEAST GET YOUR MONEY BACK. We own a valuable concession from the Government of Peru, on which we have already expended over $100,000, and which we could sell to a capitalist to-day at a big profit. But we won't do that. We are not large capitalists, and we mean to protect ourselves and those who have gone into the deal with us. The opportunity—A MOST UNUSUAL ONE—will be open for only a short time. It will bear the closest scrutiny of the hardest-headed man. If you want to join us in a well-conducted enterprise, which holds possibilities of profit that we cannot mention without seeming to exaggerate, write us for full particulars.

VICTORY IN COURT

FOR FAMOUS CARRIAGE-BUILDING FIRM OF NEW YORK.

Brewster & Co. Secure Permanent Injunction Against Concern Using Similar Name.

New York, May 23.—[Special.]—Brewster & Company famous for more than half a century as the builders of the finest carriages made, have secured an injunction against a concern calling itself J. B. Brewster & Company, permanently enjoining it from using the name "Brewster" in any form.

J. B. Brewster & Company opened warerooms only a block away from Brewster & Company, and it is alleged that about three years ago they advertised that they were the oldest carriage house in America and that they referred to Brewster & Company as a branch house more recently established.

Brewster & Company then began suit to restrain them from using the name and upon the decision being rendered, J. B. Brewster went into bankruptcy.

St. Louis, May 23.—Mrs. Lillian Lemp, who recently brought suit for divorce from her husband, William J. Lemp, Jr., wealthy brewer, and who has been living at the Lemp mansion while her husband has been residing at a club since their separation, was today ordered to vacate her home by decision rendered by Justice Spies. The Lemp Brewing Company owns the residence and had sued for possession and $150 rental alleged overdue. The title of the suit was "The William J. Lemp Brewing Company vs. Wm. J. Lemp." Lemp, the defendant, is president of the company, the plaintiff.

VERDICT FOR DEFENDANT IN GRIFFITH WILL CASE.

M. F. Gilbert Presented Instrument Making Him Executor, Which Is Declared Bogus.

Paducah, Ky., May 23.—A verdict for the defendant was returned in the will case of M. F. Gilbert against Dr. B. B. Griffith, executor and administrator. The case brought out some sensational testimony.

Attorney M. E. Gilbert offered to file in the County Court a will purported to be that of Mrs. Alma Griffith. Under its provisions he was made executor of the estate and administrator of the two children. Gilbert claimed that the will was signed by Mrs. Griffith at his office, but on the day she was said to have signed it her children swore that she was dangerously ill from pneumonia at home. The County Judge refused to allow it to be probated, and later removed Gilbert as executor and administrator, appointing Dr. B. B. Griffith, an uncle of the children. Gilbert appealed to the Circuit Court.

The jury's verdict was to the effect that the will was bogus and not that of Mrs. Griffith. The appeals on Gilbert's removal were not tried.

The will allowed Gilbert 10 per cent. of the estate, which is valued at $15,000. Gilbert is a young attorney, and has been in Paducah but a short time. He probably will carry the case to the Court of Appeals.

New Corporation Formed With Capital Stock of $200,000 To Take Over Old Companies.

Hopkinsville, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—Articles incorporating the Hopkinsville Milling Company were filed this morning in the office of the County Court clerk. The capital stock is $200,000, divided into shares of $100 each, and the incorporators are James West, W. T. Cooper, R. A. Rogers, Dr. S. H. Williams, M. V. Dulan, C. L. Daniel and Frank K. Yost.

The company is formed for the purpose of absorbing the present plants of the Crescent and Climax Milling Companies and running them under one management. As soon as the legal details of perfecting the corporation, and in dissolving the two companies as they now stand, are carried out the transfer will be made. The business of the new company will be conducted from the present offices of the Crescent mill, but who will be the officers under the new regime is not yet known. The two mills included in the deal have a combined daily capacity of 1,000 barrels of flour, with a corresponding output of bran, meal, etc.

Two Sensational Events Here Monday!

The One Is This Never Before Equaled Sale of Fresh, Crisp

Embroideries Worth Up to 49c at the Unheard-of Price 9½c Yard.

In our many years of merchandising, and we say it candidly and advisedly, we have never offered fine Cambric Embroideries as cheap as we do commencing Monday morning at 8 o'clock. Many a shopper—the experienced, especially—will open their eyes when they see these goods; they will wonder how such beautiful sheer embroideries can be sold so cheap. The astonishment, though, will be no less to you and the army of buyers who will be here Monday than it was to our buyer. He says: "He has been buying embroideries for many years, made many what he considered bargain purchases, but in all his experience he has never come across anything like this." Think of it! 14 and 18-inch fine Sheer Cambric Flouncings and 18-inch Cambric Corset Cover and Allover Embroidery at 9½c a yard. Sounds almost unbelievable, we know, but here are the goods; and mind you, every yard is fresh and clean, and as white as the driven snow.

The reason: A maker in New York was a sufferer for cash; business men, you know, when they need cash, they want it badly, particularly in the present-day conditions. Our buyer had the cash the maker wanted; the maker had the Embroideries our buyer wanted; they exchanged; the embroideries are here and await your coming after them.

All told, the purchase included about thirty thousand yards—more than fifteen miles of these Embroideries, so there will be plenty for everybody who wishes any. Sale will take place in the center aisle of our Market-street store. Tables and extra salesforce have been provided to facilitate selling and to take care of the crowds that are sure to come after these tremendous bargains.

Values up to 49c — 9½C a Yard.

14-inch Skirt Flouncing
18-inch Skirt Flouncing
18-inch Allover Embroidery
18-inch Corset Cover Embroidery
2½ to 9-inch Embroideries
1½ to 2½-inch Insertions
1½ to 2½-inch Corset Cover Beading

Values up to 49c — 9½C a Yard.

The designs are very dainty, some more handsome than others; in blind and openwork designs—some of them are very open, giving them a very showy appearance. The assortment is most varied—sure to please you.

The Other Is the Most Remarkable Selling of

Choice Summer Silks, 39c to 59c Grades, at, yard, 29c

The power of our spot cash purchasing power in these days of perturbed conditions has again asserted itself in a way that will benefit our customers most pleasingly. Our silk buyer, recently in New York, secured for spot cash, at a big reduction, about seven thousand yards Plain and Fancy Silks—kinds that are fashionable and very desirable for summer waists, suits, jumper dresses, etc. Ordinarily these Silks would sell from 39c to 59c a yard, and they would be considered good values at these prices. By reason of this big spot cash purchase you can buy them here Monday and as much as you want (the more you buy, the more you save) at the gift-like price 29c a yard. The selection is very broad, making it a comparatively easy matter for you to find just the Silk, just the style and just the color to appropriately fill the purpose for which you intend to use the Silks. The assortment comprises

Eighteen Hundred Yards 24-inch Raffueve Silk—
In white, cream, black and all of the leading and most popular shades; this and other stores have been selling this same Silk this season at 59c a yard. To-morrow you can save 30c on every yard you buy here.

Eighteen Hundred Yards 19-inch Fancy Silks—
In this lot will be found a variety of the newest and best color combinations in checks and stripes; styles extremely desirable for summer waists and dresses; regular 50c and 59c qualities are comprised in this lot.

Fifteen Hundred Yards 24 and 27-inch Natural Habutai and Plain White China Silks—
Both of these Silks will wash and are very desirable for summer waists and dresses; they are also suitable for undergarments; ordinarily these Silks would sell at 49c yard.

Six Hundred Yards 22-inch Black China Silk—
Superior quality Lyons dye; guaranteed to wash; whether you wish to use for a waist, dress or underlinings, you will find it will give results more satisfactory; 39c is the accustomed price of this Black China Silk.

Nine Hundred Yards Plain and Striped Jap Silk—
In tan, brown, Copenhagen blue, reseda green, helio and old rose. The Silk is 24 inches wide and will make delightful warm weather waists and dresses; the usual price of this Silk is 50c a yard.

In summing up this lot of Silks, considering their desirability, their quality goodness and the extremely low price at which we offer them—we believe that all past selling records will be broken Monday; we know all our previous value-giving records—no matter how great they were—give way to the volume of values this sale affords. So come, build your hopes high, expect much and we will meet your expectations with an agreeable surprise. There will be plenty of salespeople here to wait upon everyone. Of course there are some Silks in this big sale which are better bargains than others and it's only natural to suppose they will be picked up first. Come as early as you can; we are going to commence the selling promptly at 8 o'clock Monday morning. The last Silk sale we held, when the values were not as good and the variety near as extensive as will be to-morrow—we were crowded as early at 8:15 in the morning. Hence the wisdom of getting here at the opening of the doors Monday morning is apparent. Remember that you can buy Silks—the same kind you would buy a little later and pay from 39c to 59c a yard—Monday at the positive bargain price, a yard, 29c.

FARMERS' UNION HOLDS SECRET MEETING.

Only Delegates With Credentials Allowed To Enter Where Tobacco Situation Is Discussed.

Paducah, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—About 125 delegates from the local unions of Graves, McCracken, Lyon, Grayson, Livingston, Ballard, Marshall, Crittenden, Hickman and Fulton counties, Kentucky, attended the State meeting of the Farmers' Union, held in this city to-day. R. L. Barnett, State organizer, presided over the convention, and the strictest secrecy was observed. Only delegates with credentials from locals whose dues were paid in full were admitted and no other members were allowed to look in Central Labor Union Hall, where the session were held.

The meeting was called to discuss the tobacco situation, and it was assured that the union will market all the tobacco of its members this year. Probably Paducah will handle the bulk of the product as it is in the heart of the organization's district, as at present extended. Last night an informal meeting was held among delegates, at which markets and stock handling were considered. It is said that as soon as the union is thoroughly established in Kentucky the handling of stock will be seriously taken up with a view to giving the farmer some of the benefit of the high prices charged for meat and meat products. The outcome of this meeting will not be divulged until all the plans are ready for execution.

CHARES F. POTTER DIES AT FRANKLIN.

Member of Prominent Kentucky Family and Accumulated a Large Fortune.

Franklin, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—Charles F. Potter died at his home here at 2 o'clock this morning from arterial sclerosis. He was 76 years of age and a son of the late Lewis Potter, of Bowling Green.

In early manhood Mr. Potter came to Simpson county, where he purchased a farm, and for a few years engaged in agricultural pursuits. In the '60s he moved to Franklin, where he engaged in the hardware business and accumulated a large fortune. About twenty years ago he retired from active business, invested his earnings in bonds and bank stock. Until about eighteen months ago Mr. Potter had never been ill in his life.

A member of the well-known Potter family of Warren county, in whom the financial trait is highly developed, he was perhaps the best financier and most successful business man this county has known during the past century. Although in active business for fifty years it is questionable if there was a dollar owing him at the time of his death, and with the exception of the expenses incurred during his last illness he did not owe a penny.

Jovial, kind-hearted and warm natured, he was universally respected by all classes and was esteemed as a citizen of high moral and financial worth. He is survived by his wife and two children—Harry Potter, of Louisville, and Mrs. G. Willis Potter, of Warren county.

Mrs. Guilfoyle's Death.

GAY DOINGS

At White House When the Governors Were There.

"COLD TEA" PASSED UP BY THE THIRSTY GUESTS.

MR. LONGWORTH SHRINKS FROM THE LIMELIGHT.

WIFE IN THE FRONT ROW.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

Washington, May 23.—Prince Jonah Kuhio Kalanianaole, the dusky delegate to Congress from Hawaii, whose common or garden name, as you know, that he uses every day, is Prince "Cupid," with his handsome corsort of creamy olive tint, approached Mr. William Jennings Bryan at the last White House reception.

"I'm Delegate Kalanianaole, of Hawaii," said the prince, extending his hand, "and this is my wife."

And Mr. Bryan, with his most beneficent smile, and returning the salutation, echoed the simple word "Hawaii." What he really said, of course, was "How are yo'?" but the greeting bore, unintentionally, a geographically descriptive one, which provoked a smile or two.

The princess, of an Oriental, exuberant type of comeliness, wore an exquisite Paris frock of salmon colored chiffon cloth, elaborately embroidered in its own color, with a huge black, plumy hat. She speaks creamily and gently with the soft vowelness of her own long musical name.

And outside, just at the palace gates, such a melodramatic thing was happening. Just as the carriage containing the pretty daughters of an eminent Southern Congressman was about to unload its occupants at the eastern portals of the White House, amidst a curious, noninvited sidewalk throng that was eagerly watching the gay company assemble, a shambling, slouching man thrust his head suddenly into the vehicle. "Down with the President!" he cried, in language far more explicite than that, shaking a rough fist in the faces of the terrified girls. "And down with all his guests. Why am I not invited, too, I say. Down with you all! I hate you ever, one!" The man slunk away and that was all, but the fair victims of the unpleasant incident dreamed of bombs and dynamite that night instead of primrose paths and lovers' troths, and their afternoon was spoiled.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Party.

The prettiest and most distinguished thing in a social way that has been pulled off this spring was Mrs. Roosevelt's garden party—even if it wasn't a garden party—where all these things occurred. All the Governors and governesses from forty-one separate States were there—a unique aggregation.

The company ventured no closer to the drenched and sodden gardens than the beautiful south portico, cozily attractive in its summer fittings of green wicker furniture and mossy rugs. But the sweep of beauty from this vine-draped eminence was more impressive than if the verdant foreground had been interrupted with tents and powers and band stands and the extraneous paraphernalia of an out-of-doors affair. The monument, mist-draped, loomed between the Virginia hills and the lush, wet greenness of the White House grounds, where the great fountain played exuberantly, the horse chestnuts bore in triumph their white tapers aloft, and the weigelia in full flower seemed a splendid burst of rosy laughter. The Governors and governesses held their breath, entranced at the beauty of the scene.

The indoor out-of-door party gave the company a chance to see the East Room with settings that remained from the lately adjourned Governor's congress. The great eastern window, where everybody gets married you remember, was obscured behind green velvet hangings, only enough light being admitted through a special aperture to illuminate the brilliant transparent pictures framed in a great green velvet box that illustrated the deliberations of the wise men on national resources. The apartment, hung with maps, seemed like a vast school room. Only three women were admitted officially to this remarkable conclave. Mrs. Roosevelt and a few friends usually "ruh-bare" in informally, however, through the Green Room door. Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, of Colorado, was the only woman delegate to the conference. She is president of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs, and an officer in the "Welfare Work."

At her last reception of the season, Mrs. Roosevelt appeared in the same pretty frock she wore earlier in the week at the laying of the cornerstone, a sapphire blue silk voile, the full skirt appliqued in designs of sapphire blue velvet, with bretelles over a white lace blouse. She shook hands with each of her thousand guests, standing beside her husband, a concession she never makes at the large State functions at the White House.

Presidential Candidates Guests.

Receptive presidential candidates were scattered thick throughout the company. Mr. Bryan, quite comfortable in a turndown collar and black string tie, held a little sub-levee all to himself. Mrs. Fairbanks and Mrs. Foraker were richly arrayed. Mrs. Taft, who is gradually leaking out of mourning for her mother-in-law, wore black striped tiecue over white satin, and big black and white hat. She is peculiarly girlish to be the mother of grown-ups. To the many who greeted her with the confidence expressed that before a twelve month she would be hostess where she was that a day a guest, Mrs. Taft laughingly returned, "Oh! there's many a slip, you know!"

Strangers remarked on the striking resemblance between Secretary Taft and the life-sized portrait of former President Cleveland that hangs in the long corridor of the White House.

In the great State diningroom where refreshments loaded the long mahogany table, a Western delegate took a stop-over at a great cut glass bowl glinting with amber liquid afloat with slices of lemon. "A glass of punch, please," to the sable custodian of the tipple. The White House servants are all colored.

"The punch is over there, suh. This here's cold tea."

"Not a moment stopped nor staid he," this Western stranger, before he made tracks boozeward. And the way that chaste, innocuous "cold tea" remained fixed at high water level in the great glass bowl while the puch ebbed merrily, was a sad, sad commentary on things in general.

Nick Keeps In the Rear.

The presidential son-in-law, that afternoon un-Alliced, wore a grey crocheted necktie and his invariable solitaire pearl scarfpin, together with his gentle air of constant affability. Th

WITH THE MOVING PICTURE SHOWS

New Programme At Hopkins.

Patrons of the Hopkins during the warm days of the past week found the theater delightfully cool and comfortable. This result has been brought about partly by the installation of electric fans throughout the house. The management now feels positive that the picture show is destined to become a winner as a summer proposition.

Beginning this afternoon and continuing during the next three days an entire new programme will be offered, and it is one that should please all tastes, according to the opinion of the man who arranged it. Comedy is, as usual, made a prominent factor in the entertainment. Three sketches of the most mirth-provoking sort are expected to be found in "A Lover's Ruse," "The Wrong Billposter" and "An Odd Pair of Limbs."

Two other strong features for the moving-picture part of the bill are to be contributed by "The Legend of a Ghost" and "The Gambler." The former is described as a beautiful colored film, which depicts an interesting mythical story. "The Gambler" is said to be a photographic replica of a well-known drama, given under a new title. Harry Browne will, as usual, provide a pleasing number while he sings a few of a new song or two, accompanied by beautiful stereopticon views illustrating the same.

Big Rush On At Avenue.

The management of the Avenue Theater was hardly prepared for the rush which greeted the opening of the doors of the house as a moving-picture theater last Sunday. The crowds began with the opening day and kept up throughout the week. Two excellent bills of pictures were shown, and the efforts of the management toward pleasing their patrons seemed to have been highly appreciated. The theater has been perfectly ventilated, and opened at the front and back so that the cool air currents can circulate freely at all times. A dozen electric fans have been installed and the auditorium of the theater is one of the coolest spots about the city.

The leading film for the half-week, beginning to-day, is "Peck's Bad Boy," said to be a great improvement in impishness and general devilry over the original creation by Gov. Peck, of Wisconsin. It is a series 1,000 feet in length, and requires about twelve minutes to run. One of the new creations in the line of artistic moving pictures will be seen in the series called "The Japanese Butterfly." This is a bad-colored film, rich in color and delicate in shading. "The Nobleman's Rights" is a thrilling dramatic picture, and tells a strong and gripping story. It should appeal strongly to the patrons of the Avenue. Two good comedy subjects will be seen in "The Unfortunate Pickpocket" and "A Good Medicine."

Emile Weber, who has made a hit with his popular illustrated songs, will give "Captain Baby Bunting" the first half of the week.

* * *

The Marvel.

Always a good drawing card, the Bentley Brothers' Quartet, at the Marvel is to-day backed by a good, strong programme. "Sham Beggars" portrays a group of sham beggars at their work; "A Perfect Nuisance" is a delightful comedy, laughable enough to please everybody, while "Papa's Letter" and the "Amateur Champions" are good views. A boy is persuaded that he is a coming prize fighter by whipping one of his amateur friends and on arriving home proceeds to use his skill on his father. The old gentleman finally lands a knockout blow, relieving him of his colors.

The Bijou.

Nothing seems so popular as the Merry Widow, and to-day the Bijou is featuring a very laughable picture entitled "The Merry Widow Waltz Craze." Everyone catches the craze and the mishaps are so numerous as to cause no end of mirth. If you want to laugh visit this theater, for in addition to seeing one of the most comic pictures given in Louisville, you will enjoy the motion picture which gives you a true story of "The Life of a Cowboy." Strong and true this picture paints the views in such a manner that a lifelong impression is made on the minds of every patron, while the story told by the views is interesting from beginning to end.

* * *

The Victoria.

The picture, "Will Grandfather Forgive?" at the Victoria portrays the life of a wood-chopper who wins the love of a rich girl. They are married. The father disinherits her. The wood-chopper is killed and their little daughter goes to the grandfather, pleading forgiveness for the mother. The old gentleman relents. "After Midnight" is another strong picture. A young girl is run over by an automobile, is rescued by a party of thieves who teach her to steal. She is caught robbing a safe by the owner, who is about to let her go when his wife appears and, thinking he was meeting the girl by appointment, proceeds to upbraid him, when the police arrive. She is sent to prison. The wife repents her hastiness and secures her pardon. These two pictures and four others constitute a very interesting programme.

The Dreamland.

Delightful little Dreamland never lets up. No house shows a cleaner programme or provides for the comfort of their patrons better than Dreamland. To-day they will have an entire new change of pictures. Visit this house at any time. It is as cool as a cold-storage plant. The pictures are clear, strong and of the highest class views obtainable. Not a picture is ever given which would offend. Bring the wife and children to this popular little playhouse for an hour's enjoyment. You are sure to go away well pleased.

ADVERTISERS' CLUB HOST TO CITY'S BUSINESS MEN.

Will Entertain At Smoker Wednesday Night—A. F. Sheldon To Make Address.

The Louisville Advertisers' Club is making extensive preparations for its open meeting and smoker at The Seelbach auditorium next Wednesday night, when it will act as host to the Commercial Club, Retail Merchants' Association, newspapermen and all others who are interested in the work of boosting business or Louisville. The meeting will be open to all who desire to come.

A feature of the meeting will be an address by A. F. Sheldon, editor and publisher of the Business Philosopher. Mr.

A. F. SHELDON.

Sheldon is one of the best authorities on the subject of advertising in America. He will address the meeting on the subject, "Advertising and Its Relation to Modern Business Methods." Daniel E. O'Sullivan will deliver a talk on the subject of "Municipal Advertising," and Hugo Krause, the new probation officer of the Juvenile Court, will speak on "The Foundation Upon Which to Build a City's Advertising."

The time-tried tonic—Wintersmith's.

OH, HOW I LOVE MY BEANY! NIT.

O how I love my Beany, nit—sounds like a song; it's really only the burden of a groan uttered by a fat lady from Washington, D. C. The doctor said she was to climb 4 pair of stairs 40 times before each meal—on every step she was to count from 1 to 40. She balked. Do you blame her?

She found that she did not have to exhaust herself trying to get thin. She takes the sensible and simple Marmola Prescription which helps excessively round ladies and rotund gents to lose "the superfluous" at the rate of a pound or more a day. When you stop taking Marmola—you stop getting thin.

Here is the prescription: ½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, 3½ ounces Syrup Simplex. Dose, one teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime. Any good druggist will fill it for you for a trifling sum.

SOME COUNTIES ONE EACH.

There will be 1,086 delegates in the Democratic State Convention which meets in Lexington June 11 to select delegates to the National Democratic Convention at Denver, Col., and nominate electors for the coming presidential election. The representation in the State Convention will be one delegate for each 200 votes and fraction over 100 votes cast for Alton B. Parker, the Democratic nominee for President in 1904. This has been the custom of representation to Democratic State Conventions in Kentucky for many years.

Louisville, on the basis of the Parker vote, will be entitled to 114 votes in the convention, or nearly a ninth of the total number of accredited delegates. Six counties will only have one delegate vote each, Edmonson, Harlan, Jackson, Lealie, Martin and Owsley.

REGULAR LIST MEANS $25,000

The lion and the lamb will lie down together at the Kentucky State Fair in September when two handsome Louisville Automobile Club trophies will be awarded as an incentive to improve the breed of the natural competitors of the automobile, the horse and the mule.

J. W. Newman, secretary, announced yesterday that the Automobile Club has offered a handsome trophy for the best American carriage horse, according to Government classification, and also a handsome trophy for the best pair of Kentucky mules. In making the announcement, however, Mr. Newman did not specify which was the lion and which the lamb.

Several other special prizes were announced yesterday, including the Highland flower trophy, donated by Gay Bros., of Pisgah, for the best saddle-bred weanling.

The Retail Merchants' Association agreed to donate $250 for prizes, but it has not been decided yet what prizes to offer. A similar donation from the Commercial Club will also be used for special prizes.

M. C. Rankin, commissioner, announced yesterday a prize of $50 for the best general exhibit of vegetables and melons to be divided, $30 to the winner and $20 to the second choice. In the same classification, Woods, Stubbs & Co., has offered $25, and W. Atlee Burpee & Co., $20.

Newbro's Herpicide

More men and women have gotten positive results from the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE than from all other hair remedies combined.

Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ. It eradicates dandruff, stops falling hair and permits a natural hair development by destroying the tiny vegetable growth (a germ or microbe) that causes hair destruction.

Nature constantly struggles to supply life and vigor to the hair, but the dandruff germ saps this vitality and strangles the life out of the hair.

Indispensable Following Severe Illness.

1717 Tremont St., Denver, Colo.

"I was convalescent from a critical illness of pneumonia, and my hair was left in a deplorable condition, falling out and breaking off, dry, harsh and brittle. The scalp lacked nutrition and seemed dead. I used Herpicide according to directions with most beneficial results, and attribute the restoration of my hair entirely to your Herpicide. I can conscientiously indorse it for doing all you claim, and it gives me great pleasure to recommend it."

(Signed) MRS. M. MEGRUE.

For regular toilet use, Newbro's Herpicide easily occupies first place. It is sold in practically every civilized country on the globe, and a single trial will show why discriminating ones prefer it. Contains no sticky substance. It will not stain or dye the hair. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

ROYAL WORCESTER ADJUSTO CORSETS

FOR MEDIUM AND FULL FIGURES

PRICE $3

THE ADJUSTO, styles 610 and 614, for women of full and stout figures is still growing in favor, but the ever-increasing popularity of the long, flat hips and back has prompted us to produce the new ADJUSTO, styles 611 and 615 (see cut).

Fashion attention centres on the hips and abdomen---they must appear long and flat.

THE 611 AND 615 ADJUSTO IS JUST THE CORSET TO PRODUCE THIS FIGURE

---to flatten and support the abdomen, reduce the hips and mould the form into fashionable lines.

The ADJUSTO accomplishes this figure-shaping comfortably, is very serviceable and will not rust.

For all women obliged to stand a great deal the ADJUSTO is absolutely without an equal. A wearer of size 22, who is of medium figure, said recently:---

"My duties require my standing most of the time, and until I wore the ADJUSTO it was difficult to finish my day's work without becoming exhausted. I can now do more work with less exertion, and feel much better. It supports my figure perfectly, and is the strongest and most serviceable corset I have ever worn."

Another remarked---"Since wearing the ADJUSTO my hips, abdomen and waist have become noticeably smaller, and my figure is greatly improved. In all other corsets I require size 27, but I wear a size 25 ADJUSTO with perfect ease."

Look for ADJUSTO trade-mark stamped on inside of all genuine ADJUSTO corsets

SUPPLY OF MEN

Paramount Cause of Uneasiness With All Churches.

MINISTERS DO NOT KEEP PACE WITH THEIR GROWTH.

LEADS LEADERS TO CONSIDER USE OF LAYMEN.

TIMELY RELIGIOUS TOPICS.

In every American denomination the problem of the supply of men for the ministry is a paramount one. Leaders in all bodies are deploring the fact that the annual increase in the number of ministers does not begin to keep pace with the annual increase in the number of churches, and the question is being seriously asked whether the emphasis should longer be placed, as it has been in the past, upon a special education for the man who desires to serve his fellows in the Christian ministry. Many theories are advanced by church leaders to explain the scarcity of ministerial candidates, but it is realized that discussion of causes does not assist in the supply of men, and present thought and effort is being directed rather along the line of supply than of education. A Presbyterian authority has just called attention to the fact that in choosing his disciples the founder of Christianity used the fisherman as well as the rabbi and while he admits that the church needs the scholar, he says the first need is for the man.

In many denominations the possible work of laymen is being studied to see how far the shortage of ordained ministers may be replaced by lay workers. There is no thought that the laymen may supplant the ordained man in administering the sacraments of the church, but it is being said by leaders that the layman is able to conduct services, and to be, in many respects, the pastor of small congregations, even although his week days are spent in business and he has only evenings and Sundays to devote to the business of the church.

The Protestant Episcopal Church has long had "Lay Readers." These are laymen, licensed by the bishop of the diocese in which they work, who are permitted by the laws of the church to read the services from the Book of Common Prayer, and also to read approved sermons to their congregations. Comparatively a large part of the extension work of the Episcopal Church has been the result of the work of such laymen, and in many instances the laymen themselves have found suitable fields for church extension, gathering people together in missions and serving as their spiritual leaders until sufficient strength had been developed to warrant the calling of a clergyman to carry the work forward.

A similar spirit is being realized, is within reach for other denominations. The Presbyterian Church, North, has always had more churches than ministers, but suddenly, as a result of the reunion of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church with the parent body, it finds itself with about 2,000 churches for which it has no ministers. Leaders in the denomination realize that men rather than clergymen are needed. Many of the vacant churches are small affairs, and some of them give no promise of ever being anything else. The Presbyterian Book of Common Worship, accepted two or three years ago, is held to be just as complete an order of service as the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer, and in some minor points the two books are almost identical. So Presbyterians are asking: "Why may not laymen regularly conduct services, in places where ordained men may not be secured?"

The Reformed Church in America, a smaller body similar in doctrine and practice to the Presbyterian, has a liturgy, which was revised a few years ago. This, also, like the Episcopal prayer book, furnishes all the needed material for stated worship, and with its forms and printed prayers a layman may satisfactorily perform the public duties of a clergyman, save in the administration of the sacraments of baptism and communion. This denomination also is in sore need of ministers, many of its Western and Eastern churches being pastorless. Reformed Church leaders, like Presbyterian and Episcopal, are looking to laymen to step into the breach.

The Methodist Church has long had "local preachers," many of whom have not received ordination, but who are nevertheless licensed by the conferences to preach. These local preachers have placed in their charge weak congregations, although in most cases there is assigned to the same church a minister who visits it periodically. Baptists, Congregationalists and some other denominations have always stood ready to ordain laymen who showed themselves capable of preaching, but of late years these bodies also have placed more than former emphasis upon special education for the ministry, and they are showing a disposition to use laymen as such, when the supply of ordained men is insufficient. Several of the denominations having their general meetings this spring are expected to take some action upon the insufficient supply of ministers, and leaders expect them still wider to open the doors of service to laymen.

PROPOSALS OF MARRIAGE

Received In Numbers By the Methodist Protestant Church.

A leader in the Methodist Protestant Church, which denomination is now holding its general conference in Pittsburg, said a day or two ago that his church was in the position of a popular young woman who has many suitors. Delegations from the Congregational, the United Brethren and the Methodist Episcopal Churches have appeared at the Methodist Protestant Conference, and each delegation, in the name of its denomination, has formally "proposed" marriage to the Methodist Protestants. The leader here quoted said that it was general opinion in his denomination that the suit of the United Brethren was more disinterested than are those of the other denominations named, and that if any union proposition is favored it will be that with the United Brethren, which has been under consideration for several years.

It was added by this leader, who is a man occupying an influential position among Methodist Protestants, that he, as well as other leaders of his church, believe that the underlying motive of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as well as that of the Congregational, is a desire to make a great addition to denominational membership by adding the smaller body. "It has been made evident," he said, "through the negotiations which have been carried on between the Congregational, the United Brethren and the Methodist Protestant Churches, with tri-union as the object, that any real union with the Congregational Church must be upon the one ground that we shall all become Congregationalists. Their committees have promised concessions in the matter of church polity, but the denomination, as a whole, has declined thus far to "deliver the goods." The Congregational attitude is the only thing which stands in the way of tri-union.

"The Methodist Episcopal proposition is somewhat different, although I do not expect to see anything definite come of it. The Methodist Protestant Church was a secession from the other Methodist body. Many questions were involved in the dispute which led to the secession nearly eighty years ago. One of these was the episcopacy, to which Methodists still hold and in which Methodist Protestants do not believe. Another was the matter of lay representation in the general conference. The Methodists now have, and as we, in union negotiations with the other bodies, have expressed willingness to accept a superintendency, we are really not far apart in doctrine and polity.

"But in all else we are closer to the United Brethren. They are people like ourselves, and I fully expect that ultimately we shall be united under a plan in which neither Methodists nor Congregationalists will have a place."

CONFUCIAN TEMPLE

May Be Established By Chinese For Chinese In New York.

The project to establish a Confucian temple in New York, announcement of which was made a few days ago in an address made to his fellow countrymen by the Chinese Minister, Wu Ting Fang, has aroused wide interest in religious circles. The announced plan provides for a building which shall be more than a temple; rather an institution to be devoted to a spread of the principles of Confucius. The building will be planned, it is said, upon the familiar Y. M. C. A. lines, with auditorium, lecture rooms, class-rooms, reading-rooms and gymnasium, and it will be used for the Chinese residents of the metropolis. It is not expected that any effort will be made to carry on a Confucian propaganda among Americans.

A strange coincidence brought the announcement of a Christian institution for Chinese in New York at the same time as the announcement referred to above. This, too, will be a sort of Chinese Y. M. C. A., and it is to be erected and maintained under Presbyterian auspices. For some years a Chinese Christian pastor has been gathering a congregation, and now purchase has been made of a former political clubhouse for the Chinese church.

On the other side of the continent, at Seattle, the first Buddhist church in the United States is about to be built by a society composed mainly of Japanese. This also is to have an institutional character, with gymnasium, baths, parlors, reading-rooms, library, etc.

OPPOSITION TO FEDERATION

Seems Very Strong At Southern Presbyterian General Assembly.

The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church is now in session at Greensboro, N. C., and leaders express the opinion that the assembly will be an animated one because of a number of questions to be considered on which there is marked division between the conservative and the progressive elements in the denomination. The fear of union with the Presbyterian Church, North, is ever before the first-named element, and it is to renew the effort to have republished the "distinctive principles" of the church, a document which dates from the days of the Civil War, and which emphasizes the distinction between the two Presbyterian bodies.

An amendment, or at least a restatement of the Westminster Confession of Faith, is also to be asked of the General Assembly, and this is said to be certain to provoke discussion. The conservatives hold to the confession in its present form, and they are said to be unwilling even that a footnote should be added to the effect that no infants dying in infancy are lost, although individually, leaders of the conservative element are unwilling to state the contrary as their belief. There is simply a fear to change any of the standards, for if change is commenced, none can predict where it will stop.

There is said to be a disposition on the part of some leaders to try to secure a review of the action of the last General Assembly regarding the Presbyterian federation, although it is held to be unlikely that the action will be reconsidered, and there are those who hold that the assembly is powerless to reconsider, as its action was based upon that of a majority of the presbyteries. The federation was opposed by the conservatives because of the relations with the Northern body which is involved, and because some Northern leaders had openly asserted it to be their belief that federation was but a step toward organic union.

ITS 225TH ANNIVERSARY

Will Be Celebrated With Religious Ceremonies By Philadelphia.

The city of Philadelphia is making elaborate plans for the observance of the 225th anniversary of the founding of its city government, the celebration of which has been fixed for October 4 to 10. As the first of these days is a Sunday, the exercises of the day will have wholly a religious character, and the day's programme has been arranged by a committee of one hundred clergymen, representing all the religious bodies of the city, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish.

In all the city's churches the military, semi-military and fraternal organizations will assemble in the morning to hear historical sermons. In the afternoon, at an appointed moment, all the Sunday-schools of the city, assembled in their respective buildings, will sing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and later in the afternoon open air services are to be held in many of the parks and squares. The day will be commenced at 6 o'clock in the morning with the ringing of the chimes in old Christ church, which were rung, as was the Liberty bell, to proclaim the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Again, on Tuesday, October 6, observance will be made of the fact that the founder of Philadelphia was a man of profound religious convictions. On the evening of that day the clergymen of the city, with visiting ministers, will assemble in the Friends' meeting-house to listen to a number of addresses on William Penn and the city he founded, considered from a religious standpoint. During every day of the celebration the churches are to be opened between the hours of 5 and 6 for organ recitals.

RETURN OF TAXES

REPRESENTATIVE CLAYTON EXPLAINS HIS BILL.

MEASURE PROVIDES THAT THE STATES DISTRIBUTE MONEY.

THE TAX UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Washington, May 23.—[Special.]—Representative Clayton, of Alabama, introduced into the House May 18 H. R. 21993, which provides that the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the State of Alabama the sum of $10,388,072.10, being for money collected from citizens of said State for taxes on cotton for the years 1863 to 1868.

In an interview to-day Mr. Clayton said:

"For several years I have been endeavoring to get accurate information as to the amount of cotton taxes collected by the Federal Government during the years 1863 to and including 1868. I have ascertained that the amount of such taxes collected from the citizens of the different States were as follows:

* * *

Taxes By States.

Alabama	$10,388,072 10
Arkansas	2,556,638 43
California	430 04
Connecticut	193 64
Florida	918,844 98
Georgia	11,897,094 98
Illinois	379,144 42
Indiana	92,727 23
Kansas	280 15
Kentucky	532,327 45
Louisiana	10,088,501 09
Maryland	51,349 52
Massachusetts	66,679 30
Mississippi	8,742,995 93
Missouri	592,098 30
New Jersey	3,656 42
New York	867,742 68
North Carolina	1,959,704 87
Ohio	447,127 12
Pennsylvania	78,573 06
Rhode Island	2,424 71
South Carolina	4,172,420 16
Tennessee	7,873,467 71
Texas	5,502,401 24
Utah	1,375 34
Virginia	825,859 87
Making a total of	$68,072,396 99

"It will be remembered that these taxes were collected under an act of Congress from the years 1863 to 1868, both inclusive. This tax was imposed on cotton and was required to be paid by the purchaser, owner or holder, as the case might be, and constituted a lien on the cotton from the day of assessment until the amount of the tax was paid.

* * *

Collections In Four Cotton States.

"The collection of these taxes was often and sometimes largely made in States other than those in which the cotton was grown, as the table will show. The returns and books in the Treasury Department show that most of the tax was collected in the cotton-producing States.

"Of the twenty-six States in which these cotton taxes were collected, fifteen are not known as cotton-growing States, and, of course, no cotton was produced in noncotton-growing States, except to a small extent in two or three of the noncotton-growing States, which, during the war, did grow a small quantity of cotton; as, for instance, in the States of Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky. It may be remarked that there is some cotton now being grown in the southern part of Missouri.

"The taxes collected in these States where cotton was not produced were on cotton which had been brought into them from the cotton-growing States before the taxes had been collected on it and the taxes were there assessed on the cotton in the hands of the owner, purchaser or holder, in accordance with the provision of the Federal Statute.

Violation of Constitution.

"It has long been the opinion of lawyers generally, and I may say also the view of the Federal authorities, that the cotton tax was levied and collected in violation of the Constitution. Certainly, if the income tax law was unconstitutional, the tax upon this farm product, cotton, was undoubtedly unconstitutional.

* * *

States Can Distribute.

"During the present Congress a number of bills have been introduced for the purpose of refunding, in one way or another, this cotton tax money. Most of the bills seek to divert the funds to some public purpose—for the building of public roads, for public schools, etc. The bill which I have introduced (H. R. 21993) provides that the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the State of Alabama the $10,388,072.10 collected from the people of Alabama as tax on their cotton.

"The best medium through which this tax money can be refunded, in my judgment, is through the States respectively from whose people it was collected. The State can provide a proper and simple means for its distribution to its rightful owners. The claimants would then have an opportunity to assert their rights speedily and inexpensively in their own local courts. Of course, this would be less expensive and very much more expeditious than to have these claims adjusted before the Court of Claims at Washington.

"The Federal Government ought to pay back to each State the amount collected from the people of that State and let the State hold the fund in trust for the rightful owners of their heirs. Of course, if there are no heirs or beneficiaries of any deceased owner, then that part of the tax money would escheat to the State.

Government Had No Right.

"Certainly the Federal Government had no right to take this money from the cotton growers and cotton owners of Alabama, and I do not think that the money, if refunded, would any more rightfully belong to the State than to the Federal Government. It ought to go back to the people or their heirs from whom it was wrongfully taken. I think this is a sound proposition of ethics or morality.

"Mr. Brantley, of Georgia, has introduced a bill similar to mine for the case of Georgia. So has Mr. Floyd, of Arkansas; likewise has Mr. Johnson, of Kentucky, for his State; and quite a number of other bills have been introduced by members from their respective States. I believe that the day is not far distant when this money will be refunded.

"Who the rightful owners of this money are, I have been unable to ascertain, although I am informed that the books in the Treasury Department will show who paid the taxes.

"It will be remembered that several efforts have been made to pass resolutions calling for this list of people who paid these taxes, but it has heretofore met with successful opposition and, doubtless, for the reason that the idea was that it would subject Congress to a multitude of bills of individual claimants. My proposition is to pass a bill for each State and let the State, without expense to the Federal Government, determine the rightful claimants or owners of this fund."

REPUBLICAN NOMINEE FOR CONGRESS IN THE SIXTH DISTRICT.

Milton, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—John R. Inglis, who is the Republican nominee for Congress in the Sixth district, was born February 28, 1864, in Louisville. At the age of 6 years Mr. Inglis was left an orphan and was brought to Milton by his grandparents, who reared him. After attending the common school for a time he took up the battle of life as a clerk in a drug store, and also carried the mail between Madison, Ind., and Milton, Ky. At the age of 20 years he went to Kansas as a drug clerk, remained there three years, and then removed to Salt Lake City, where he stayed one year. He returned in 1888 to his old home in Trimble county, where he has since resided. Mr. Inglis has always taken an active interest in politics, and in 1890 was elected chairman of the Republican committee in Trimble county, which place he has held since that time.

JOHN R. INGLIS.

Mr. Inglis is proprietor of a drug store in Milton. He is a director of the Farmers' Bank of Milton, president of the Milton Creamery Company, secretary of the Milton Commercial Club and is an enthusiastic member of the Masonic, Knights of Pythias and Red Men lodges.

For many years a graduating class at Annapolis has dressed of its napkin rings in a rather pretty way. After the last meal that the boys eat as midshipmen, each boy takes his silver napkin ring to the class president, who has them all melted and made into a solid silver loving cup. This cup is given to the first baby born to a member of the class.

MEREDITH INFIRMARY AT SCOTTSVILLE.

CALL TO OBSERVE DAVIS ANNIVERSARY

ALL SOUTHERNERS TO HONOR HIS CENTENNIAL.

GEN. LEE INDORSES PLAN TO USE CHIEFTAIN'S PICTURE.

SUGGESTED BY MRS. BEHAN.

Gen. Stephen D. Lee, commanding the U. C. V., has sent out a general order requesting that June 3 be observed throughout the South as the 100th anniversary of the birth of Jefferson Davis, the first and only President of the Southern Confederacy.

The Louisville Confederates will observe the anniversary fittingly. The Rev. Dr. Beauchamp will deliver the principal address and the Daughters of the Confederacy will confer crosses. The First Kentucky Regiment, under Col. W. B. Haldeman, will participate.

The order is as follows:

Headquarters United Confederate Veterans, New Orleans, La., April 28, 1908.—General Orders, No. 89:

First—The General Commanding takes great pleasure in calling attention to the following resolution, which was adopted at the convention held in the city of Richmond, Va., May 30 to June 3, 1907:

"Whereas, June 3, 1908, will be the 100th anniversary of the birth of Jefferson Davis, the first and only President of the Confederate States of America, who for four bloody years guided the destiny of the 'storm-cradled nation that fell;' therefore,

"Resolved, That as a testimony of our reverence for the exalted character and unselfish devotion, and of our undying affection for the great-hearted man who suffered martyrdom for his people, it is hereby recommended that June 3, 1908, be observed with appropriate ceremonies in honor of the memory of our great chieftain by Confederate Veterans, Sons of Veterans and Daughters of the Confederacy wherever they may be found."

The General Commanding recognizes that it is utterly impossible for the Southern people to render too much honor to the great name of Jefferson Davis. To his care and guidance was committed the fortunes of our short-lived republic; on his shoulders rested the burdens of the Lost Cause, and for four trying years, with an ability and fidelity almost superhuman, he directed the affairs of our country with the greatest wisdom and most marked success. With an empty treasury, without credit abroad, with no resources at home, he kept armies in the field, officered by the ablest generals in the land, who led them, poorly shod and clothed and ill-fed, to victory after victory, till worn out with continual fighting overwhelming odds, they gave up from sheer physical exhaustion. When the end came he was called on to bear in his person hardships and insults that should have been meted out to every soldier in the Confederate armies, if to him. Uncomplainingly, and with a fortitude and endurance that showed the man, he bore all, which should have called forth the deepest gratitude and loftiest praise from every person in the South. And now, at this distant day, the people of the South are called on to properly observe the 100th anniversary of this great statesman and patriot.

Confederate soldiers! Men of the South! Young men! Southern Women! Rise up in your might and join in paying simultaneous homage and devotion to President Jefferson Davis, so that this day may stand out as one of the most remarkable in the history of America. When you honor him, you honor yourselves.

Second—The General Commanding desires most heartily to indorse the movement started by that zealous woman, unwearying in her devotion to and work for the cause, Mrs. W. J. Behan, of New Orleans, to have a picture of Mr. Davis in every school in the South, and to have portions of his writings read. No better plan could be devised to have the young of the land made familiar with his features and to learn something of the beauty and purity of his English. He hopes that this plan will be carried out in all sections of our dear Southland.

Third—The General Commanding makes his usual appeal to the newspapers of the country, ever the friends of the Confederate soldier, to second this effort to honor our dead chieftain by giving a wide publicity to this order. By command of

STEPHEN D. LEE,
General Commanding.
WM. E. MICKLE,
Adjutant General and Chief of Staff.

It has cured thousands of cases of eczema and eradicated facial and other disfigurements of years' standing. The terrible itching attending eczema is stopped with the first application, giving proof of its curative properties at the very outset.

In less serious skin affections, such as pimples, rash, herpes, blackheads, acne, barber's itch, etc., results show after an overnight application, only a small quantity being required to effect a cure. Those who use poslam for these minor skin troubles can now avail themselves of the special 50-cent package, recently adopted to meet such needs. Both the 50-cent package and the regular $2 jar may now be obtained in Louisville at the Taylor-Isaacs Drug Company, Third and Jefferson streets, T. P. Taylor & Co. The Shelby County Killing.

Some time ago, when Mr. Hawkins, of Fayette, and others were promising "365 days of hell" to tobacco growers who should disobey the edict of association planters against growing crops in 1908, the Courier-Journal ventured to prophesy that the barn burning and bluster of that stage of the "tobacco war" would, if unchecked, result in assassination about the time of tobacco planting, that the assassins would not be upon one side of the argument only, and that criminals desiring to even scores would take advantage of the disorganized condition of society in the tobacco counties to wreak private revenge, using the methods of the night riders. The prophecy has, unhappily, been fulfilled. A number of outrages have been perpetrated from opposite sides of the fence, and it is impossible to say with definiteness how many so-called "night rider" crimes are properly chargeable to the knowledge that local authorities have not met and dealt with the problems confronting them, and the resultant belief that a sort of bad man's holiday exists.

The Shelby county tragedy is typical of the times and the situation. A well-to-do farmer is found dead in the highway with charges of buckshot in his breast. A preliminary investigation gives rise to several theories. He might have been killed while upon his way to join a band of night riders bent upon destroying the property of their neighbors. Again there is a possibility that the killing grew out of bad blood between the victim and others who believed that suspicion might be diverted from them because of the night rider situation. That the man was armed means little until it is ascertained for what purpose he was armed. Anyone in that section might in the circumstances arm himself and fill his pockets with cartridges. That wire clippers were found near the body may mean a great deal if it can be shown that they were not placed there by the men who did the killing. That the wires were cut might mean that they were cut by the man near whose body the clippers were found or that they were cut by the murderers who put the clippers near the body to create the impression that their victim was a night rider.

Shelby is one of the best counties in the State. The assessed value of property within its boundaries proves it one of the wealthiest. There are few large landed estates and few rich men. The distribution of property is more even than it is in most parts of the world. Moderate prosperity is the rule. There is almost no shiftless or poverty pinched element, and contentment with life and obedience to the law are general. Up to the present time there has been little violence assignable to the hot blood of the Bluegrass and in a century of civilization few tragedies traceable to the cold blood that was ascribed to the mountains before a quarrel about the price of tobacco produced a crop of barn burners and night prowling gunstoters in central and western sections of Kentucky where the Pharisees had thanked the Lord for a hundred years that they and their neighbors were not as the mountaineer and his neighbors in point of lawlessness. The invasion of Shelby, like the invasion of Woodford, not as yet rebuked with sufficient emphasis to create wholesome respect for law, is a perfectly logical result of the failure of other counties to take the measure of the movement against organized society by mobs banding together for purposes of tyranny and flaunting the banners of "freedom from oppression." It rests with the citizens of that county available for grand and petit jury service, and with the officers of the law, to make the county too hot to hold anyone or any mob that proposes to destroy the property of planters.

Judge Marshall is a man of force and character. His instructions to the grand jury bearing upon the killing of Hazlett and touching the general situation indicate his purpose to do his duty fully and fearlessly. There is no reason to believe that county officers and jurors will fail in theirs. The outlook is that Shelby county will make a better record against lawlessness than has been made in some of the counties on the other side of the State Capital, for the sake of illustration, Nicholas, where the cold-blooded, unprovoked murder of Hiram Hedges unavenged and practically uninvestigated, remains a disgrace to the State and a rebuke to the local government, or Bracken, where the presence of militiamen is more hotly resented than the depredations of night riders.

Tobacco planters who are guarding their property from assault are within their legal and moral rights when they shoot night riders in the act of destroying tobacco plants, but some other cause must be shown before a killing upon the highway—even the killing of a man bent upon joining a raid—can be held excusable. The investigation of the killing of Hazlett should be none the less searching because of the suspicion that he was allied with the band that is alleged to have threatened to scrape the plant beds in the neighborhood.

No matter who killed Mr. Hazlett, or why he was shot, it is plain that the tragedy was one of the results of the failure of local authorities to stamp out night riding when it made its appearance. Each county in the tobacco section is now suffering for the sins of its neighbors.

Whom the Gods Would Destroy.

If ever a party organism in this or in any country, upon the threshold of a general election, showed itself to greater disadvantage than the Republican party at the present moment, we do not recall it. The inner lights of truth and faith, of wisdom and courage, seem to have gone quite out of its leadership. There may be some reminiscent hatred having a certain sincerity in an implacable, like Crumpacker, representing the dregs of Sectionalism left among the sand-dunes of Northern Indiana; but the spirit of Payne is the spirit of Platt, the spirit of Dalzell is the spirit of Quay—the spirit of sharpers, not the spirit of Statesmen—whilst the Speaker of the House—emulating a famous historic personage of the same Christian nomenclature—sits iron-clad in the Rocker and quizzically murmurs "he's hard-hearted, sir, is Joe—he's tough, sir, tough and devilish sly."

The passage of an Act of Congress to take the lid off the subscription of money for campaign purposes in National elections carries its argument on the face of it. It needs no elucidation. It is a simple, direct proposition in the interest of a clean ballot-box. It deals a body blow at corruption. The scheme to complicate it would in any event be evasive, and therefore dishonest; but the party maneuver, taking the discredited Crumpacker bugaboo for its swivel-gun, is at once bad tactics and worse morals.

It is too transparent and obvious to deceive any but the most ignorant and credulous. It says as plainly as words can say: "We dare not give publicity to the use of money in the coming Presidential battle, because we depend upon it to see us through; but we will put the Democrats in a hole and throw dust in the eyes of the people." God help the people if many of them can be so blinded.

The attitude of the House, however, is something worse than a bunco game. It is the repudiation of everything which the President's many sermons on Civic Righteousness have affected to teach, and both repudiation and denial of the Secretary of War, the coming Republican Nominee for President of the United States, who is quoted as saying to a mutual friend of his and a great Republican statesman of New Hampshire: "You can tell Senator Chandler that I am for a publicity bill."

If this is so—Mr. Bryan being for the same thing—why should Congress hesitate? If it is so, why should not Mr. Taft join Mr. Bryan—and for the matter of that the whole country—in an appeal to the Senate to strip the measure sent from the House of its dishonest rider, and, thus purged and indorsed, to send it back to the Representatives for a unanimous vote on its final passage.

That would give the people some assurance that they count for something. It would give them the assurance that the Republican party holds itself answerable to public opinion. It would convey to all honest men the blessed message that the Chief Magistracy is no; again to be put up at Auction and knocked down to the Corporations which in the nature of things are bound to be the highest bidders, that the fat is not again to be fried out of the Manufacturers as the price of a high-protective Tariff, levying tribute upon the whole body of the Consumers, that Quay and Platt are dead, and that Quayism and Plattism, under the lead of Roosevelt and Taft, have been expelled from Republicanism, which is willing and ready to go to the country on its merits and professions, scorning further servitude to Trustism and longer fellowship with Predatory Wealth.

There was never, and surely there never will be again, a fairer opportunity to purify our political household. More than any one agency, Publicity is the key to that great problem. Apply it to the Corporations and it will unlock the door of every dark-closet. Apply it to the ballot-box and it will lock out every purchased vote. All parties should be equally concerned, and, in the long run, all parties would profit by it. If ever there was a question that ought to be Nonpartisan, this is it; and yet, by a strict party vote, the Lower House of Congress dares to put itself on record as willing to adopt it only under cover of the Bloody Shirt, taking it for granted that the Democrats would hesitate before a scheme at once so sinister and sweeping, aimed at the moral being and economic fabric of the South, involving as the paramount issue of the coming conflict not the responsibility of the Republican party for the Government of the country, but the ripping open of Pandora's box to let fly the wicked passions of the past.

The Courier-Journal is so sure that the Republican party is doomed, and that the Democrats will win the coming battle, that it would accept the issue and pass the bill, even with the Crumpacker rider.

Touching the just, nay, the sympathetic and generous treatment of the black people, the South has nothing to fear from the controversy. On that issue the Courier-Journal has not these forty years in the least equivocated. Nor has any real Southern statesman. Equality before the law to them as to other men; equality of opportunity to live and learn, to labor and progress; the same equality as to every Earthly blessing which will be meted out to us all as to every Heavenly blessing by the God we adore. On that platform the South stands to-day. But that God has raised certain distinct Racial barriers. We resist as visionary and impious all artificial schemes for setting aside those barriers, or o'erleaping them. Experiments to that end have been hurtful to both peoples. They have sprung from theory and sentiment profoundly ignorant of conditions.

Negro Suffrage was one of these experiments. It wrought whilst it lasted havoc incalculable, nowise helping the Negroes. At last it broke down through its own weight and rottenness. If the Republican party wants to reopen that chapter we are ready to meet it on the facts.

If it wants to argue as a Sectionalist, we shall protest that there are no longer any Sections in this great land of ours; but we shall not shrink from the assertion of our equality in the family, demanding that if Suffrage in the South is to be overhauled, Suffrage in the North, and particularly in the East, shall also be overhauled. We deny nothing. We conceal nothing. We simply stand by the Law of Necessity put upon us by a political Georgraphy, taking no account of the Work of God or the Spirit of Christ, equally at variance with wisdom, justice and the organic law of the land.

But, what has a question of such stupendous reach to do with a simple Act of Congress requiring publicity for Campaign subscriptions? Nothing on earth. It is to confuse the issue, to juggle with facts, to escape the obligations of duty, to find a pretext for renewed and continuous corruption. It flies at once the white flag of cowardice and the black flag of piracy, to confess in advance that the Republican party has no hope of electing its National Ticket without the tainted money of the Trusts it is pretending to denounce, but with whose leading spirits it has already entered into alliance.

We recur from the point from which we started: never did a political organism show itself so discreditably as the Republican party in the Congress about to terminate its present inconsequent sitting; its six-months run of comic opera, opening with "Pinafore," to close with "The Merry War"—beginning with the repudiation of Roosevelt, to end with the rejection of the Almighty, impious and impudent, equally impolitic and blasphemous, invoking the fate of those to whom as to itself was revealed but all too late the decree of Heaven "thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting."

A Victory For Harden.

The rather melodramatic and more or less salacious case of Maximilien Harden and the degenerate victims of his bold pen is once more opened in Germany by the decision of the Supreme Court reversing the lower court, which had found Harden guilty of libel and sent him to prison. Harden now comes into the public eye again as a champion of the people against the machinations of exotic courtiers. The decision of the Supreme Court is the second incident of the past ten days which has exposed to the German gossips the scandals which Harden's conviction was expected to hush and end. The other incident was the actual arrest of Eulenburg, who had figured in the scandals but had succeeded in escaping a direct prosecution. His arrest stirred Germany, and the Supreme Court's opinion keeps Germany astir, and from this time until the whole Harden affair is concluded the scandals will be rife and the scandal-mongers busy. It is unfortunate that the high officers of a great nation should become the central characters in a mess so disgusting as this; it is more unfortunate that they should have even the appearance of evil. The disclosures were bound to come, sooner or later, however. Truth crushed to earth is not the sort of thing to stay crushed. The German court will be better off for the cleansing it must undergo, painful as the process itself must be. The Sufiesting an interest which is, of course, preme Court's decision is a great victory for Harden, and when the scandals are over and the degenerates are cast out of grace, Germany will have reason to be grateful to him for his fearless labors against the most powerful opposition in the empire.

Roads and Streets.

It appears from the announcements so far made that the open meeting of the Board of Trade Tuesday is largely planned to give impetus to the work of the Thoroughfares Commission, organized by citizens not long ago to consider the city's need in the way of streets and to exert pressure upon the city authorities. It is a purpose that may be easily commended just as the purpose of the Thoroughfares Commission is one to be approved. As the Courier-Journal has pointed out from time to time the streets in outlying sections are in a sorry tangle. Factories and other buildings have been placed on sites that should have been devoted to the extension of roads and streets. In many instances it is too late to remedy the evil, but in the cases where it is yet possible to undo the hurt or to prevent similar mistakes in future, steps should be taken, and at once. The Thoroughfares Commission has been very faithful in its task and has already developed an interest that signifies good results. It deserves general public support. In formally adding its strength to the commission the Board of Trade is manifesting a loyalty which is of course, of incalculable value to the commission.

Good Plays and Bad.

The dramatic repertory of the Donald Robertson Company, which has its headquarters in Chicago is highly commended by Collier's Weekly, which describes its list of plays as one of which any American manager should be proud. The list is as follows:

"The Miser," by Moliere.
"The Triumph of Youth," by Edouard Pailleron.
"Rosmersholm," by Henrik Ibsen.
"The Coming of Peace," by Gerhart Hauptmann.
"The Intruding Widow," by Charles Lamb.
"In a Balcony," by Robert Browning.
"A Blot in the Scutcheon," by Robert Browning.
"The Intruder," by Maurice Maeterlinck.
"A Night in Avignon," by Cale Young Rice.
"The Law," by Mary d'Este.
"As the Leaves," by Guiseppe Giacoso.
"Madman or Saint," by Jose Echegaray.
"A Curious Mishap," by Carol Goldoni.

Unquestionably the production of such dramas is an enterprise worthy in every way. Unfortunately, the manager who produces such plays remains poor, comparatively speaking, as well as proud, while the manager whose ideals are those of the circus owner waxes rich and pompous by producing "shows" that appeal to a much larger and equally well-to-do public.

Most of the managers are, and very properly, interested in earning money rather than in bringing about a vogue for good dramatic literature, and the judicious who grieve at that which delights "some quantity of barren spectators" cannot reasonably expect many of them to desert a business opportunity for such a principle as the promotion of popular interest in the legitimate drama.

It is futile, as well as unjust, for the discriminating to denounce the commercial purveyors who purvey that which has the highest value in the market. If the public prefers Cohan to Moliere or William Vaughan Moody to Browning, or Milton Royle to Maeterlinck, or George Broadhurst to Edouard Pailleron, it is not to be expected that the managers who labor primarily that they may buy motor cars and cottages by the sea, and who deal in art in a perfectly legitimate manner as other equally honorable and blameless men deal in pig iron or potatoes or green hides, will "put on" such a "show" as "In A Balcony" when three or five times as much money may be made by "putting on" a mighty and moving melodrama that revolves around a popular actress who is a fine figger of a woman, or by providing a "vehicle" for a matinee idol whose clothes set the fashions in what the players call the "cow towns," and whose eyes and hair and attitudes awakes the adoration of thousands of matinee girls upon Broadway.

Mr. Robertson is entitled to the respect of everyone for undertaking to popularize the classic drama. He is entitled to the support of everyone who appreciates blank verse and deprecates the sway of the leg-and-lyric form of entertainment called "musical comedy," and the "emotional" drama that doth cheer, and also inebriate, the masses. If there are enough lovers of the better things in our larger centers of population Mr. Robertson, who selects his players, as well as his plays, with considerable discrimination, will get along. For the benefit of the discriminating—and those who might become discriminating if their fears of the classicists should be dispelled by familiarity, arising from a greater opportunity to become familiar with them—it is to be hoped that he will achieve his ambitions. It will probably be some time, however, before such an eminently worthy undertaking will prosper as it should in the first American city where, as Mr. William Winter announced in disgusted phrases recently, Robert Mantell, now the leading interpreter of Shakespeare in this country, is forced to play in Brooklyn while Mr. George Cohan's "shows," with or without the comedy legs of that progressive American citizen as a drawing card, occupy a great deal of space upon Broadway, harvesting gold by night and by day.

The American public—quarrel with it as you will—insists upon going to the theater to be amused, just as Sheridan feared that a large part of the British public did in the days when he amused his fellow countrymen. Only a small minority find amusement, or even entertainment in the higher forms of the drama. The education of the individual and not the belaboring of the managers may bring about a vogue for better dramatists. Every manager who strives to promote popular interest in such plays as those selected by Mr. Robertson is an educator and an altruist. We can applaud him without utterly condemning the managers who have other fish to fry and other ways of frying them.

The Countryside Horse Show.

A peculiarly unique entertainment for the benefit of a most deserving charity is the Countryside Horse Show that is to be given June 6 for the Home of the Innocents.

A day in the open at Churchill Downs, with pretty women and prancing steeds as essential features, should appeal to the tastes and instincts of Kentuckians generally, and Louisville-Kentuckians particularly. The Home of the Innocents should enlist the generous sympathy of all who realize the good this institution is doing for homeless infants. With the exhilaration of the scenes to interest mankind's inborn love of amusement and the charitable object of the event to touch the heart of the population, the coming show should be in every way one of the most successful of benevolent ventures.

It has been the hope of the management, under the leadership of the president, Charles G. Middleton, to make the event not less meritorious as a horse show because it is given for a charitable purpose. He and the active workers associated with him in the project have procured for the entries in the various classes some of the finest to be had hereabouts. Splendid horses and good horsemanship will be on parade. Some of the best, as well as some of the best-known, whips of Louisville will make their appearance, including a number of women and girls.

But this is not intended to be a press agent's plea for the enterprise. It is simply to remind the public that on its own merit as a horse show and its deserts as a benevolent venture the Countryside Horse Show should receive attention. Since it is to be an all-day affair the event should offer a lively holiday for all sorts and conditions of people. Pictorially, with its gayety and crowds and spirited aristocrats of the horse world, the show, if we are not greatly mistaken, will undoubtedly be worth while. As a way to spend a day in June, of which the poet has said there's naught so rare, it is difficult to see why this should not prove ideal.

According to the London Saturday Review it should be humiliating to every Englishman that it was Francis James Child, of America, who compiled five thick volumes of popular English and Scotch ballads. But as Child did not live to finish the task no Briton will feel personally envious of the man who tackled it.

"The mere mention of our navy makes the bosom of every American swell with pride," says the Sacramento Union. Every American bosom. But the super-American bosom of Mr. Hobson heaves with dry sobs when he ponders the probability of the little thing going out in the wet and getting licked.

The statement of the Memphis Commercial Appeal that whisky is pouring into Georgia at the rate of 1,000 gallons a day is sufficiently conservative to meet with the approval of the prohibitionist, but not sufficiently accurate to be used as a basis for the settlement of bets.

A German-American lady of great physical strength, residing in Pennsylvania, almost choked her husband to death because he presented a Merry Widow hat to an alienator of affections. Gone are the days when Hermia said "we cannot fight for love as men may do."

The Houston Post tells of a cat that "killed a snake which had swallowed its six kittens." Ordinarily snakes do not have kittens, but in Texas, where the fresh water bass swallow the rabbits that come to the bayou for a drink of water, nature follows no fixed rules.

It is commonly said that the genuine humorist is the man who can make jokes at his own expense, but Mark Twain, who, according to a publisher's note, has been paid $700,000 for his is as much of a humorist as most of us would care to be.

London now has the largest collection of anthropoid apes ever gotten together. As a member of the oldest aristocracy a self-respecting ape has a right to mourn the decadence of his race when he inspects the monocled London "swell."

After facing death in a thousand forms as an explorer among hostile savages, poisonous serpents, ferocious wild animals and deadly fever germs, Prof. Lee was slain by his own vermiform appendix.

It is impossible to imagine what the Baltimore Sun's staff verse maker means by a "mint julep bed," unless it is one especially adapted to sleeping off a certain kind of intoxication.

The Bristol-Paddington express having made 118 miles in 120 minutes without bloodshed, we must admit that England is getting up near the head of the procession.

AS AID TO EDUCATION

MALE HIGH SCHOOL BOYS PREPARE THEIR LUNCHEONS.

Afterward "Those Who Need Help" Go Back For Special Afternoon Study Session.

A new experiment in education has been quietly tried at the Male High School this month. The school day closes at 1:30, but all pupils who needed help were asked to report at a special study session lasting from 2 to 4 p. m. Their teachers generously offered to attend to assist them in difficulties.

A desire for such concerted action developed almost spontaneously among all the Male High School teachers. They called the boys together and told them that the High School made its reputation, not from its failures, but from its successes. The boys were told that their attendance at this session should be entirely voluntary. Not only the delinquents, but all who wished to form a habit of mental concentration were invited to attend. And the boys did attend with the same interest with which they played "The Prince and the Pauper." The number at this session frequently rose to 100, and never fell below fifty.

A social feature of this plan included the lunching of the teachers and boys together from 1:30 to 2. It was arranged to make soup on the premises every day, so that both teachers and boys would feel the stimulating effects of something hot. Both teachers and boys donned their white aprons and a different cook prepared the soup each day. The one who made excellent soup was each time voted the degree of C. A. (culinary artist. Prof. Halleck on his day made twenty gallons of bean soup and seasoned it with seventeen red peppers, "to stimulate the delinquents," he said. The boys went around that afternoon with their mouths resembling a capital "O." Some of the boys made excellent soup. They peeled and sliced carrots, onions and potatoes, broke up beef bones with a hatchet, selected good heads of cabbage, bought the best canned tomatoes on the market, and withal had a jolly good time.

Among those who took the "C. A." degree for excellent soup were Kendrick Lewis and Wallis Downing, of the junior class, and Albert Kemp and Alfred Whayne, of the sophomore class.

One result of this experiment has been to bring the teachers and the boys closer together. The parents have written many notes to the school praising the unselfish interest of the teachers in their pupils.

OFF FOR INDIANAPOLIS.

DE MOLAY KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO HELP LAY CORNERSTONE.

Will Be Guests To-morrow of Friendly Rival, Raper Commandery—Big Temple Building.

DeMolay Commandery, No. 12, Knights Templar, leaves to-morrow morning at 8:10 o'clock over the Pennsylvania for Indianapolis to attend the laying of the cornerstone of a million dollar Masonic Temple. Raper Commandery, No. 1, of Indianapolis, extended an invitation to all of the Commanderies in Indiana, as well as De Molay, the only one outside of the State, to be their guest.

A parade composed of all the Knights Templar bodies will escort the members of the Grand Lodge through the principal streets of the city to the site on which the handsome temple is to be erected. One of the features of the exercises will be an address by Vice President Charles Warren Fairbanks, a member of Raper Commandery. In the evening a reception and grand ball will be given by Raper in honor of the Grand Commander of the State of Indiana, to which have been invited all of the visiting commanderies.

Indianapolis is one of the foremost fraternal cities in the country and the building of this magnificent structure is the result of only a few years' effort. It will be located in the heart of the city and in addition to the space allotted for the lodge rooms, reception rooms and banquet halls, there will be stores on the ground floor, while a number of the upper stories will be used for offices. The building when completed will be one of the most complete of its kind in the country and one of the handsomest in Indianapolis.

There has always existed between the two commanderies the most friendly rivalry. De Molay and Raper having competed for first prize at the Triennial Conclaces at San Francisco, Chicago and elsewhere. Upon their return from San Francisco several years ago De Molay was compelled to remain over in Indianapolis for several days as the guest of Raper, at which time a number of entertainments were given in their honor.

The only commandery in the South to attend the funerals of Presidents Garfield and McKinley, both of whom were Knights Templar, was DeMolay, and in each instance they were accompanied from Indianapolis by Raper.

TWO CASES FINISHED.

BOARD OF SAFETY SUSPENDS ONE FIREMAN.

Patrolman Allowed To Resign Under Charges—Councilman Cohen Wondering About Charges.

Of the many cases before the Board of Public Safety yesterday only two were disposed of. John Bowman, a member of Hook and Ladder Company No. 2, was suspended from the service for a period of ten days. He was charged of having partaken of liquor while on duty. Frank Paslick, the patrolman who was charged with having entered a saloon while in uniform, was permitted to resign.

Otto Cohen, a member of the lower board of the General Council, is wondering why the Board of Public Safety does not pass upon the case against Detective Foster, charged with having circulated false reports relative to Mr. Cohen. All the evidence in the case was heard by the board more than a week ago, but the board's finding has not yet been made public. Members of the board assert that a stenographic report of all the testimony has been preserved, but that as yet they have not had time to go over this testimony in detail. Another reason for the delay in passing judgment upon Foster is said to be due to the fact that W. Marshall Bullitt, chairman of the board, was busy with the Parr will case all of last week and prior to then, and consequently had no time to look into the charges against Foster.

A number of other cases are hanging fire with the board, among them those which grew out of the Republican primary convention.

T. A. RASSINIER DEAD AT AGE OF EIGHTEEN.

Thomas A. Rassinier, the 18-year-old son of Octave Rassinier, died yesterday morning at 2:45 o'clock, after an illness of several weeks with a complication of diseases. Besides his parents he leaves the following brothers and sisters: Octave, Jr., Theodore, Edgar, Fernand, Emile, Armand and Florence Rassinier. The funeral services will be held at the residence, 1022 Second street, at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Interment will be in Cave Hill cemetery.

GAY DOINGS.

Nation's Nick is the most unobtrusive of men on public occasions. Madame Alice always sits promptly to the front at any big spectacle, while her lord modestly sneaks in somewhere in the back rows of the chorus. Mr. Longworth has an inherent shrinking from being a part of the national show.

"Mrs. Longworth, of Cincinnati," as she is officially registered, which seems quaint enough, has been going in for philanthropy and good works of late. She is earnestly interested in the splendid new national organization of women co-operating in the labors of the National Civic Federation for the bettering of the social and industrial conditions of the laboring classes of the country. The "Welfare Work" taken up by representative women all over the United States is a significant and commendable innovation. "Life is real and life is earnest" to these distinguished "society" women who have gone zealously into this humanitarian scheme and they are gladly recognizing a wider scope for their activities. The district branch of the Woman's Department of the National Civic Federation elected as local vice presidents Mesdames Taft, Garfield and Straus, all of the Cabinet. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth will take up the work in Cincinnati. Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Wanamaker, Mrs. John R. McLean, Mrs. Bryce, the wife of the British Ambassador, Mrs. Fairbanks, Miss Mabel Boardman and countless other notable women are actively interested in the good work.

Louisville Well Represented.

Louisville is effectively represented among the laborers for the cause. Mrs. Bruce Haldeman, who is identified with the welfare work, visited New York and Pittsburg with her husband before returning home. Mr. and Mrs. Thurston Ballard and Mrs. Gilmer Adams also visited in New York before returning to Louisville.

At Mrs. Roosevelt's last afternoon tea Mrs. Ben Johnson, of Bardstown, wore a chic costume of silvery chiffon satin with big black picture hat. She was accompanied by the handsome wife of Senator Piles, formerly Miss Bernard, of Paducah, in pale blue embroidered broadcloth. Mrs. Seth Shepherd, formerly Miss Jarvis, of Louisville, wore pompadour silk.

Gov. Willson was one of the most distingue and popular of Mrs. Roosevelt's guests—which was perfectly natural.

Mr. Charles Henry Butler, at his home on I street, will give a reception on the evening of June 1, in honor of Justice Harlan's seventy-fifth birthday.

Gov. Harris, of Montana, who attended the recent gubernatorial conference, is a genial Kentuckian. His wife, who accompanied him, was Miss Bettie June Wilkins, of Bowling Green.

Kentucky Graduates.

Graduating this week at Fairmont Seminary, is Miss John Marguerite Mimms, daughter of Mr. J. C. Mimms, of Trenton, Ky., an attractive girl who took her degree last year at Belmont College, in Nashville. Miss Mimms has been making a special study of the piano, and is an expert musician.

Kentucky was handsomely represented in the graduating class at Chevy Chase College this week, boasting Miss Edith Burghard Elwang, Miss R. Elizabeth Vogt, of Louisville; Miss Emily Elliott, of Shelbyville; Miss Alice Foxworthy Glascock and Miss Margarette Waller. Mrs. Alfred W. Elwang and Miss McDonald, of Louisville, were among the guests. Miss Elizabeth Vogt received the distinction of being made president of the Alumnae Asociation of Chevy Chase College.

At class day exercises of the institution Miss Vogt was the witty historian of the class of "naughty eight." She also gracefully unveiled a pedestal which she presented to the principals of the school. Dr. and Mrs. Barker, on behalf of the Phi Mu sorority, of which she is an important member. A particularly interesting incident was Miss Emily Elliott's class prophecy, which she called "The Palace of Dreams," prognosticating the future of each of her twenty-two colleagues. Miss Alice Foxworthy Glascock played the processional, to which the graduating class marched to the campus and merrily made a bonfire of schoolbooks and papers.

Mrs. Charles Darwin Pennebaker, formerly of Kentucky, gave a dinner at her home in Georgetown in honor of the Kentucky graduates, her cousin, Miss Emily Elliott, Miss Vogt, Miss Elwang and Miss Glascock.

DAISY FITZHUGH AYRES.

ON THE FUNNY BONE.

Found a Field.

There once was a journeyman bard
Who worked at his trade very hard.
He was painstaking quite,
But thought it all right
To rhyme nightingale with icewagon.

He couldn't make anything sell
From an ode to a smart villanelle.
His thoughts didn't jibe.

Would couple woodbine with horseradish.

But at last he got into a line
In which he was able to shine.
His friends all allow
He is making good now
Writing sentimental songs for vaudeville.

Perfectly Harmless.

COW-PUNCHER BECOMES A WIFE

HANDSOME YOUNGSTER PROVES TO BE A WOMAN IN DISGUISE.

Pullman, Neb., May 23.—"Bob" Ellsworth, a handsome young cow-puncher, who has been riding in Northwestern Nebraska for nearly two years, has turned out to be a woman, and is now the wife of "Jim" Spearman, a dashing young man with whom she has worked for the last eight or ten months.

Wearing the apparel of a cowboy, her hair cropped close to her shapely head and her face bronzed by exposure to sun and wind, the young woman, whose name was Minnie Turner, was believed to be a man by everybody who worked and associated with her save the young cowboy who is now her husband. To him she revealed the secret of her sex immediately after they became acquainted. A day or two ago the couple mounted their broncbos and set off to be married. They have gone out to the Pacific coast on a wedding journey, and will settle in Montana when they return.

WHIPPING LADDE..

STRIKES AND INJURES MISS STELLA CONWAY.

Extended From Rear of Lighting Company's Service Wagon—Accident On Corner.

Miss Stella Conway, the 18-year-old daughter of J. W. Conway, was struck by a ladder protruding from a service wagon of the Louisville Lighting Company yesterday morning at Fourth avenue and Green street, and dangerously injured. Passers-by carried Miss Conway into Buschemeyer Brothers' drugstore on the corner and Dr. H. A. Jones, of 208 West Chestnut street was summoned. He found the injured woman to be suffering from painful injuries about the forehead and nose and badly bruised about the body.

Dr. Jones says that Miss Conway probably suffered internal injuries and a concussion of the brain is feared. Miss Conway was crossing Green street on the east side of Fourth avenue, so when the lighting wagon turned the corner One of the protruding ladders struck her on the head. The young woman was thrown several feet, falling with great force on the car track. She was carried unconscious into the drugstore and after receiving medical attention was taken to her home, at 2809 Montgomery street, in a carriage.

AARON KOHN PURCHASES BULLITT COUNTY FARM.

Aaron Kohn closed a contract yesterday with the McDonald Co-operative Realty Company by which he acquires title to a farm of 242 acres on the Bardstown branch of the L. and N. railroad, in Bullitt county, known as the old Dempsey homestead. The farm is well improved, with fruit, and has one of the best vineyards in this section. Mr. Kohn has not stated for what purposes he purchased the property, and it is believed he will continue to rent the same to the present occupants. The consideration paid for the land was not given out, yet it is said to be about $10,000.

SELF-INTEREST

Causes Hemenway To Push Fairbanks Boom.

WANTS VICE PRESIDENT TO GET RENOMINATION.

POLITICIANS PLEASED WIIH BEVERIDGE'S DISCOMFITURE.

KERN BOOMED BY DEMOCRATS

Indianapolis, May 23.—[Special.]—Politicians here trace the boom of Vice President Fairbanks for renomination for second place on the National Republican ticket to Senator Hemenway and his friends. They point out that the junior Senator wishes to keep the Vice President out of Indiana politics for fear he might, at the end of his official term at Washington, seek his old position in the Senate, now held by Hemenway. The short term for which Senator Hemenway was elected after Fairbanks resigned from the Senate to become Vice President expires next winter, and the Hemenway people fear that the Vice President might, if not then a holder of office, wish his old job back.

When Fairbanks was a Senator Hemenway was a Representative from the First district. When Fairbanks became Vice President Hemenway was elected to succeed him, and John C. Foster, of Evansville, was elected to take Hemenway's place in the House. Foster has already been renominated, so Hemenway could not seek his place if Fairbanks should decide to seek Hemenway's place in the Senate. Consequently, the Hemenway people are supposed to be anxious to keep Fairbanks where he is.

The Fairbanks boom for the vice presidency came after the Vice President's boom for the presidency had flattened out. It developed suddenly and assumed large proportions without delay. Papers everywhere have commented on the willingness, or the apparent willingness, of the Fairbanks backers to allow their man to be backed a bit from the head of the ticket. This willingness comes from Hemenway himself, who is one of the Vice Presidents lieutenants, and from others who owe just as much allegiance to Hemenway as they do to Fairbanks.

Politicians here understand, however, that neither Taft or President Roosevelt is willing to place Fairbanks on the ticket, for fear he would prove a dead weight, and that Fairbanks will be back in the State next fall seeking to line up the members of the General Assembly, not for Hemenway, who will come up for renomination, but for himself.

The Beveridge Turn Down.

Broad smiles were engaged in when it became known that Senator Beveridge had been turned down for temporary chairman of the Chicago convention. Beveridge thought he had the appointment cinched. He told the members of the Indiana delegation to the National Convention that he did not wish to be their chairman inasmuch as he probably would be selected as the convention's presiding officer. He said, however, that he would regard it as an honor to be named as the Indiana member of the Committee on Resolutions.

Beveridge's optimism is perhaps pardonable inasmuch as he knew that President Roosevelt had personally requested Harry S. New, national chairman and chairman of the subcommittee on convention arrangements, to aid in bringing about Beveridge's selection as temporary chairman. Roosevelt wished a man of his own picking to deliver the party keynote. Beveridge is a warm admirer of the President and a stanch supporter of the Rooseveltian politics, hence he as temporary chairman would have delivered a keynote much to the President's liking. It is understood here that Beveridge and the President had already outlined the speech in part. Beveridge had so intimated to his friends.

Made Politicians Smile.

Republicans smile because of the incongruous situation of an Indiana Senator delivering a rip-roaring speech of the Roosevelt kind to a convention having presented to it for highest honors the name of Vice President Fairbanks. A convention welcoming such a speech as Beveridge with the President's aid might prepare would never for a moment think of nominating the Vice President for the position, nor would a convention anxious to honor a man of the Fairbanks type receive with favor a Rooseveltian speech. Politicians here think that Beveridge knew his speech would be acceptable and that the delivery of it by him would do more to kill the Fairbanks boom for the presidency than anything that might be done. By this method of reasoning, they return to the conclusion always held by them that Beveridge never did look with favor upon the Fairbanks candidacy and that he was only too willing to seize an opportunity to stick pins in the Vice President's boom.

Kern's Boom For Second Place.

Reports continue to be received from different parts of the country that John W. Kern, of this city, is still being talked of as a running mare for Bryan. The truth is Kern is not a candidate, and has not been at any time. He has so declared himself publicly, adding that he could not think of taking the office, even though it should come to him unsolicited. Kern is an enthusiastic Bryan man and a good Democrat, but he is practicing law and leaving politics alone. He will go to the Denver convention as a delegate-at-large, but he will not encourage any talk about himself for the second place on the ticket.

Friends of Kern expected at one time to make an aggressive campaign for him. They planned to communicate with leaders of other States and to line things up for their favorite, but Kern put his foot down and insisted that they do nothing. He was not a seeker of public office, he said, and not a receptive candidate for anything—big or little. Kern's emphatic ness induced his friends to remain inactive.

If Bryan is allowed to name his running mate, Kern may be considered, as he and the Commoner are the best of friends. They carry on a personal correspondence and exchange visits at each other's homes. Kern is always the first to greet the Nebraskan when he comes to Indianapolis and the last to bid him good-bye. The two sat together at a recent banquet, when Kern was introduced as the next Vice President of the United States. Kern appreciated the courtesy done him, but facetiously remarked that he understood the present Vice President, also an Indianapolis resident, spent twice as much for house rent in Washington as he received in salary. Bryan followed Kern and won the hearts of his Indianapolis hearers by declaring that if Kern was Vice President and could not pay the house rent he could move into one end of the White House with him.

Novelist Defeated.

Among the defeated Democrats for the General Assembly at the recent primaries for the nomination of county, judicial, legislative and township offices was Meredith Nicholson, the novelist. He sought a senatorial nomination, but failed by several hundred votes to get on the ticket.

MARK THISTLETHWAITE.

"DOWN HILL TO PORTLAND."

By Frederic J. Haskin.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

Portland, May 19.—The people of this fair Rose City are enthusiastic students of geography. The stranger soon finds that while the conversation may begin with the weather or the roses, it always ends in geography—"its down hill to Portland from everywhere." The population of Portland is 94 per cent. purely American, which is said to be a higher proportion than any other American city can show. Another significant peculiarity is that it is maintained almost entirely by local capital, there being only three buildings among the larger commercial structures of the entire city that were not built by home money. While these and other distinctive points are always brought out during the process of innoculating the stranger with admiration for this ambitious metropolis, the little lecture on geography is always the argumentative ace of trumps—no matter where you come from "its down hill all the way to Portland."

Not long ago a parson from Baltimore was taking a little jaunt through the West, and dropped off at Portland to look over the town. Of course he had not been there but a few hours until he encountered the usual monologue on geography. His attention was called to the fact that owing to the lay of the land everything that breaks its moorings in these parts naturally rolls right down hill into the lap of Portland. The reverend gentleman took kindly to the idea; in fact, he wrote a piece for the paper in which he pointed out that Portland's topographical position was almost identical with that of New York. He made such a strong case in showing the similarity that it seemed the only way the people of the Western city could escape becoming a second Gotham would be to change the face of nature. This clever bit of municipal palm-reading made such a hit in Portland that the Chamber of Commerce gave the parson a prize of $1,000. He said in part:

Like New York.

"Portland is remarkably like New York in several particulars. It lies on the shores of the Willamette River, just above its confluence with the Columbia. The great tongue of land between the Willamette and the Columbia, running down to a point at their intersection, is strikingly like Manhattan Island. On the west bank of the Willamette, representing Brooklyn, now stands the business center of Portland. Across the river, on this second Manhattan, is East Portland, spreading every day outward and downward until it will finally reach the Columbia and face the city of Vancouver, now resting on the northern side of that river in the same relative position which Jersey City sustains to New York.

"Portland is already a notable port. She is the only fresh water port on the Pacific, and fresh water is a strong advantage to a port, as the water itself cleans the vessels from barnacles and other foulness, thereby saving much time, labor and expense. The Government is now building jetties down the Columbia, and making other improvements which will give Portland a clean waterway of forty feet out to the Pacific. The Columbia and Willamette are both navigable already far above Portland, and thus she has one of the natural advantages which have made New York supreme—namely, a fine waterway both in and out.

"But Portland has also the other great advantage which New York has enjoyed—a most favorable topographical situation. Sixty-five years ago New York began its great change into a big city. At that time Albany was flourishing. A railroad was planned to go down the Hudson from Albany, but the papers, thinking that New York was to always be simply a gang-plank to Albany, ridiculed the undertaking as fooiish. The railroad was built, however, and its terminus has now become the greatest city in the United States. Why? Simply because it had a fine port and was a natural gateway that was downgrade from everywhere.

Down Hill From Everywhere.

"Commerce in our country breaks away from the great dividing wall—the Rocky Mountains—and flows east and west along the lines of least resistance. Apart from the Mississippi valley in the east, it moves prevailingly along the line of the Great Lakes, through the Mohawk valley to the valley of the Hudson and down that river to New York. Hence the New York of to-day. The traffic could not go to Boston without crossing the Catskills, nor could it go to Philadelphia without expensive grades, so it went to New York along the line of least resistance. Now Portland has precisely this same advantage—it is down hill from everywhere.

"Take a topographical map of North America and draw a line from lower California to Mt. St. Elias in Alaska, and you will find that your line follows a natural depression between mountain ranges, about a hundred miles back from the coast in Oregon. Now draw another line at right angles east and west, following the course of the Columbia River—the only navigable stream that breaks through the inland mountain walls. This line will also follow a natural depression with a gradual descent from near Lewiston, Idaho, to the mouth of the Columbia. Now Portland is situated just at the point where your north and south and east and west lines cross each other. She has, therefore, downgrade relationship to her immense supporting territory.

"The country tributary to Portland is the final consideration which guarantees her future supremacy. This territory embraces all of Oregon, Idaho, a part of northern California, eastern Washington and western Montana. Its size may be better understood when we say that it equals in area the combined States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Iowa, Indiana and South Carolina. Even the arid portions of the vast region are being rapidly developed by irrigation, and its future riches and greatness can scarcely be imagined."

If that parson ever gets tired of preaching he will make a fine real estate agent. But he had a good subject to exploit. The State of Oregon alone has more arable land than there is in Japan, yet it has only 600,000 inhabitants. The territory known as the Columbia River basin has the natural wealth to support 25,000,000 people, but up to this time the census takers have been unable to report the first million of population. Fully half of this prospective empire is capable of cultivation for wheat, fruit and other crops. It is said that this basin must be depended upon to supply most of the wheat for all the population of the Pacific coast between Alaska and Patagonia.

The present milling capacity of this grain belt is 25,000 barrels of flour a day during ten months of the year. The mills are closed two months during the summer to make repairs and because of the scarcity of wheat. At present half of the wheat grown in the Territory is ground into flour and the other half shipped abroad as wheat. Two-thirds of the grain that is exported goes to Asia. It is said that the export trade in wheat has already reached its maximum because the people who come in to raise wheat also consume it. The annual increase in acreage is now about 15 per cent.

Timber Supply.

Oregon has about one-sixth of the standing timber of the United States. In Portland the forestry building of the Lewis and Clark Exposition has been preserved as a permanent exhibit in a park maintained by the city. Its logs would cut over a million feet of lumber. They were brought from the forests with their bark intact and many of them weighed between forty and fifty tons apiece. Sixty-four of them form a grand colonade 200 feet in length and 75 feet in height. Sixty-seven varieties of Oregon woods are on display, including the Pacific yew, from which the choices bows are made for archery clubs all over the continent; mountain mahogany, which makes such a hot fire that a few sticks of it will melt an ordinary stove, and the chittem bark, from which the cascara of medicine is made. A fir flagstaff in front of the forestry building is 194 feet high, and shows what kind of sticks Oregon grows to make masts for the shipping of the world.

Portland is the greatest lumber port in the world. Its sawmills annually cut about 650,000,000 feet of lumber, which goes to Australia, the Philippines, China and other parts of the world. When the lumber market is normal it is said the sawmills of Portland earn a profit of $4,000 a day. The manager of one of the big local firms, in his testimoney before the Interstate Commerce Commission, stated that his concern had earned a million dollars in five years. The investment in timber lands, mills, railways and equipment in the territory tributary to Portland doubtless amounts to $50,000,000. The notable feature of this section is that the trees will cut 50,000 feet to the acre, while less than 10,000 feet is the rule elsewhere. Some idea of the magnitude of our home market may be had from the statement that less than 10 per cent of the product of the Portland mills is for export. Experts estimate that it will be from fifteen to fifty years before this great supply is exhausted—fifty years if used at the present rate of consumption, and fifteen if the supply should be exhausted elsewhere and this zone become the sole dependence of the general market.

Dairy Industry.

Dairying has developed into the most important purely productive industry in Oregon, its products last year being valued at $17,000,000. Ideal climatic conditions, which permit of pasturing throughout almost the entire year, freedom from storms so that cows are out doors instead of being confined in barns all winter, and the excellent water of Oregon, have given the cream and its products an excellence and richness to be found in no other part of the United States. Many of Oregon's dairymen are from Switzerland.

Portland has become famous as the Rose City because it produces the most beautiful roses in the world, even surpassing those of the celebrated English gardens. The scientific culture of these flowers is carried to such an extent that during the height of summer the choicest specimens are protected with Japanese umbrellas so their delicate tints will not be impaired. The only time in the year when the people of Portland forget their geography is during the rose carnival in June. According to an old story, the two men who selected the site of Portland had a dispute over naming it. One of them was from Maine and the other from Massachusetts. One wanted to call it Portland and the other Boston. They tossed pennies and the man from Maine won. He made a mistake in calling it Portland. It should have been named Rosemary—that's for remembrance.

The Evolution of the Sunday-School.

By Jane A. Stewart.

As far back as 1586, it is known that "Sunday-schools," or schools for the religious instruction of young people, were in existence in Italy. There were schools of this class in Paris in the last part of the Seventeenth century, but the Sunday-school did not become an institution in English-speaking countries until the end of the Eighteenth century. It is interesting to trace the evolution of the Sunday-school from its small beginning in England to the present world-embracing movement uniting Great Britain and America with a score of other countries in the bright bonds of Christian education.

The first "Sunday-school" was neither a mission nor a Sunday-school as these institutions are known to-day. In a small room in a narrow, back street, aptly named "Sooty Alley," there gathered every Sunday the embryo Sunday-school, which was to become famous as the nucleus of a world-Christianizing movement. There were two boys in that first school; their teacher was a motherly woman; and their patron and founder was a stout, handsome Christian gentleman, of comfortable means and philanthropic tendencies, named Robert Raikes.

This kind heart had been touched by the sight of the neglected children, "filthy, degraded, with the pitiable slum-born look written in all over their faces," running wild in the streets, spending their precious Sundays in sports and drinking, in cursing and singing low songs. Weekdays, they were employed in the mills of Gloucester; and there was no opportunity for education or for proper recreation. To get them together and give them the rudiments of an elementary education as a start toward better things was Raikes' idea. As an inducement he offered a hot potato lunch.

The idea took with its proteges; not only boys but also girls flocked to the Sunday-school, which increased in three years that a regular board of overseers was formed. The schools were entirely free. The only requirements for matriculation were persona; cleanliness and abstinence from profanity. Reading, writing and arithmetic were taught. The children were also taught the catechism; to sing hymns, and they were induced to attend church in large numbers.

The need for these institutions is shown by the fact that in four years there were five flourishing schools in Gloucester. At the time of Raikes' death in 1811, the number of scholars in these schools in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, was 250,000. In Newcastle alone there were 5,000. And the idea had extended to America where isolated Sunday-schools were in successful operation in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and many other places.

Much Opposition To Movement.

The Sunday-school did not come into popularity without opposition. At one time the objections were so determined and numerous that Raikes remarked sadly: "It seems as if I had discovered a new country where no other adventurer chooses to follow." Workers were persecuted and defiled. Scathing articles were published. In England, a Sunday-school worker named Caulfield and his associates were pelted with filth of all descriptions as they walked along; and dirty water was frequently thrown out of the windows upon their heads. George Daughday, a Methodist preacher of Charleston, S. C., in 1787, was drenched with water from a pump, for conducting a Sunday-school. The opposition came entirely from the aristocrats who did not wish the common people to be educated, from the conservative clergy who feared the Sunday-schools as a competitor with the family altars and as a menace to the established church. The archbishop of Canterbury once called the bishops together to see what could be done to prohibit the Sunday-school's.

All reformers are stoned before they succeed. The persecution had the natural result of strengthening the cause. Clergymen of the liberal and broad-spirited class viewed the Sunday-school enthusiastically from the beginning and wisely adopted it as a permanent feature of the ecclesiastical system. Horace Bushnell, declared to a Sunday-school worker whom he had earlier endeavored to win into the ministry: "Now I've come to see that the work you are doing is the greatest work in the world. * * * Sometimes I think it's the only work in the world." John Wesley, of blessed memory, was its hearty supporter. So was Whitefield. Public men approved.

John Bright, the famous English statesman once said: "I believe there is no field of labor, no field of Christian benevolence, which has yielded a greater harvest to our national interests and national characters, than the great institution of the Sunday-school."

* * *

Took Public Schools' Places.

The early Sunday-schools took the place of public schools. The teachers were paid. Only the poorer classes attended them. But soon the teachers were giving their services gratuitously as they have done ever since. As long ago as 1827, the American Sunday-school Union estimated that at a "shilling" a Sunday (the sum paid by Raikes), the unpaid teaching force in the United States was contributing over $900,000 a year toward religious education. The same valuation, at the present time reaches nearly twenty-seven million dollars. And many of those enlisted in this voluntary home missionary service are men and women whose services money would not purchase.

The Sunday-school has become successively a "ragged school," a children's school, and a public school for old and young. Even during the life of Raikes a suggestion of the direction of its evolution was given in Wales, where "Charles of Bala," an independent religious instructor, gathered adults as well as children into the Sunday-school and concentrated its instruction on the Bible lessons. He held Sunday-school conventions, and the Sunday-schools which he conducted are said to have been "more of the nature of a church in orderly operation than a school."

It is interesting to note also that the approved methods which have now come into general vogue in the modern Sunday-schools were recognized and adopted in a tentative way very early in the history of the development of the Sunday-school.

Fifty years before the international lesson system was adopted the American Sunday-school Union reported great improvements in the mode of conducting schools, one being "the limitation of the Scripture lessons and the allotment of the same lesson to the class or classes."

* * *

Grading An Early Device.

The grading of Sunday-schools began before the movement had gone very far, and an effort was made to bring groups into classified divisions, each to be taught in separate rooms and on totally different methods. One early plan of grading was: "The infants," from 2 to 7 years old; "the ignorant," those from 7 to 15 who could not read; "the instructed," those from 7 to 15 who could read, and "the adults," all over 15.

Advanced Bible classes soon came into existence for the graduates from the Sunday-schools and others. The Sunday-school library was added. Temperance instruction was an early feature, some of the Sunday-schools having voluntarily formed themselves into temperance associations on the principle of entire abstinence.

All this was accomplished in the first quarter of the Nineteenth century and before the first of the national Sunday-school conventions had taken place. A great leap forward was made when the conventions were inaugurated in 1832.

The first Sunday-school convention was the thought of a somewhat worn and discouraged superintendent, who had gained such cheer and help from the visit of a brother worker that he suggested a general meeting of all the Sunday-school workers in the town. From this small beginning the convention idea has expanded until in North America alone the number of annual conventions runs over 15,000, with an attendance of several millions. Their greatest work has been the revelation of the needy Ones.

Teacher Classes Inaugurated.

Teachers to-day meet in classes for study of the lesson; but most of them find no better plan of preparation than that of a successful teacher in New York, half a century ago, who outlined his plan: First, to secure the affection of his pupils; to spend six hours a week in the study of the lesson, and to visit the boys at their homes at least once a month and secure the co-operation of the parents. He kept a large classbook, in which all entries were made with great care and minuteness. Every morning and night at his devotions he opened this class record and prayed for each boy by name.

Many honored names follow that of Raikes as pioneers of the Sunday-school. The recognition of the Sunday-school as a God-ordained institution came from eminent laymen, as well as ministers, who were drawn into its service. Chief Justice Bushrod Washington, a nephew of George Washington, was one of its early supporters in this country. The president of the first national Sunday-school convention was the Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, chancellor of the University of New York, president of Rutgers College and son of a revolutionary patriot and Senator. The Rev. Courtlandt Van Rensselaer, a son of the wealthy "patron" of Albany, firmly believed "that those men are happiest who devote themselves to God," was an enthusiast in Sunday-school work. Among others who have contributed strongly to its development are Arthur Tappan, the New York philanthropist; the Rev. Dr. Richard Newton, the children's preacher; Gov. James Pollock, of Pennsylvania; William Reynolds and Alex. Lyng, of Peoria, Ill.; Edward Eggleston, Bishop John H. Vincent and Dwight Moody.

In its evolution the Sunday-school has afforded a desirable and much-needed outlet for the layman and his hitherto unused talents and energies. Most significant has been the work of women Sunday-school laborers in the development of religious training for the little ones; and in this field women have themselves been developed.

"To the growth and development of Sunday-schools," declares that noble Sunday-school veteran, the Rev. Dr. Henry McCook, "more than to any other cause, is due the advent of woman into those wide fields of religion and philanthropy and of social service wherein she has wrought such incalculable blessings to our humanity. Under the quickening, uplifting and expanding influence of Sunday-school work, woman has found her larger self."

Patton, one of the secretaries of the Board of Missions, New York, and traveling representative of the missionary department, No. 4, in which jurisdiction is Louisville, will make an address at Christ Church Cathedral this afternoon at the 4:30 o'clock service. He is a speaker of marked ability and pleasing personality, and it is hoped that many will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear him.

INCORPORATED

"BOHEMIAN GIRL" OPERA COMPANY'S ATTRACTION.

POWER'S ELEPHANTS TO DO AMUSING STUNTS.

NUMEROUS VAUDEVILLE ACTS.

After a second successful week in which pleasant weather and a good list of attractions brought large crowds to White City, the management announces features that will, under favorable auspices, keep the interest of amusement lovers on the qui vive for the present week. The International Opera Company made a decided hit with its picturesque rendition of the Oriental comedy gem, "Said Pasha," and will this week present an equally meritorious version of Balfe's beautiful opera, "The Bohemian Girl." The leading roles in this production will afford Miss Grace Lillian Walser and Miss Alta Yolo splendid opportunity for artistic work, and much interest is being displayed in the forthcoming production. For the convenience of patrons of this theater tickets have been placed on sale at The Seelbach, Humler & Nolan's and the Baldwin piano store, and each purchaser of a reserved seat is entitled to free admission to the park. A feature of unusual interest in connection with the theatrical performances is the inauguration of amateur night for the benefit of local aspirants for stage honors and every Friday night, after the regular performance, an opportunity will be afforded amateurs to "make good" in any line of entertainment.

One of the "big" acts secured for White City this week is called Powers' Herd of Hippodrome Elephants, which comes with the reputation of being one of the most unique features of the amusement world. The performers consist of a band of highly trained elephants who execute feats of skill that demonstrate their intelligence as well as their enormous strength. The herd contains the only buck-jumping elephant in captivity and in consideration of her unwieldly bulk the animal is said to display amazing agility. A laughable feature of the turn is a burlesque skit called "The Longworth-Roosevelt Wedding," in which the principals in the White House nuptials are amusingly caricatured by the animals.

The Seven Russells will also be presented for the first time in this city. The Russell family consists of a clever group of comedians, singers and dancers. After the minstrel performance the Russell brothers do some clever whirlwind, buck and wing and clog dancing, little Miss Nellie sings several songs and the elder sisters appear in character work.

Acrobatic juggling that is said to be the acme of sensationalism is the distinguishing feature by the Manning-Hartlett Twins. The twins are assisted by two people and a trained horse and their turn is unusually original. Among the paraphernalia handled by the brothers is bicycles, tricycles, runabouts and automobiles.

Among the free attractions at the park this week will be a spectacular aerial act by the Great Davenports. These performers include several new features in their turn and wind up with a thrilling bicycle ride on a high wire. Prof. Rice's interesting dog, pony and monkey circus has been re-engaged and will repeat their amusing performance afternoon and night during the week.

The big dancing pavilion on the river bank has again been turned over to lovers of the healthful exercise and a good band will furnish popular dance music afternoon and night throughout the season with the exception of Sundays.

An addition to the already brilliant electrical display at White City is an enormous search-light which has been placed on the pinnacle of the electrical tower. This powerful shaft of light gives flash-light views of the surrounding country and reaches a distance of twenty-six miles.

On Saturday afternoons during the season the park management has decided to entertain as guests of the ladies and children of the city, and in consequence no gate admission will be charged them on this day.

A millionaire cigar manufacturer in Illinois has been buying land in Western Kansas of late and now owns 30,000 acres there. He is going to hold it for ten years and see what will happen.

IN LOUISVILLE SOCIETY.

SUMMER TRAVELERS

Where a Number of Louisville People Will Spend the Warm Months—Many of Them Bound For Europe.

WITH the warm days comes the news of the going away of the smart set to the seashore, mountains and to Europe. So many Louisville people have country homes and stay in them during the summer, preferring to make their flights in the autumn and winter, but this summer an unusually large percentage of society people are going abroad.

After all, there seem to be three principal points to which the summer travelers from Louisville turn. Three very different points, it may be added. First, there is the Europe-going contingent, and after Europe there seems to be but two places left for the pleasure and health seekers, Warm Springs, Va., and Wequetonsing.

Wequetonsing has a good hold on a large number of families who, year after year, go back to cottages; the same cottages.

The Robinson family, with its numerous branches and ramifications, always go to Wequetonsing, where they form a good part of the summer colony assembled there.

A VINE FOR A SIGN.

Motto Suggested By Outdoor Art League In Its Crusade Against Unsightly Billboards.

THE chairman of the billboard committee, Miss Merker, was instructed by the Outdoor League to consult the president of the American Civic Association, of which it is an auxiliary. He replies that a wise thing to do is to create public sentiment by showing that ugly advertising is bad advertising, and calls attention to the fine work done in Cincinnati by the Business Men's Club.

The National Clipping Sheet says that certain Louisville merchants, seeing for themselves that glaring advertisements detract from the aesthetic appearance of the city, have voluntarily removed them. Will such merchants kindly furnish their names to the Outdoor League? Is it too much to hope that other firms will follow such examples? Is there a single person in the city who can defend on even utilitarian principles the cruelly ugly signs in the vicinity of the beautiful Presbyterian Seminary on Broadway?

The league thanks the two members of the Church of the Messiah, Fourth avenue and York street for securing the removal of the unsightly bill boards on the alley wall in the rear of the Sunday-school room. Perhaps other churches may be successful in similar appeals. Let the motto be, A Vine for a Sign.

ART LOVERS

Of Louisville Requested To Take An Active Interest In a Loan Exhibition—Some Fine Paintings Owned By Louisville People

THE members of the Art [illegible] heartily endorse the suggestion that there be a free loan exhibit of [illegible] paintings in some room in the new public library, if completed during the coming vacation, provided public-spirited citizens are willing to lend pictures while the houses of the owners are closed.

On such terms the board of the Woman's Club has promised to lend the beautiful gift of Mrs. Susan B. Avery, entitled "A Revery," and several private citizens have signified their willingness to lend pictures.

All necessary precautions will be taken for their safety, provided the plan goes into effect.

A member of the Art Club was instructed to consult Mrs. M. A. Johnston, the chairman of the Arts and Crafts Department of the American Civic Association.

Mrs. Johnston is selected to purchase a picture every summer for Richmond, Ind., and while visiting the great cities for the purchase, the gift of a generous citizen, she also secures loans of valuable pictures. The annual loan exhibit has been held for years at Richmond, Ind., and then goes to Indianapolis, and from there to Chicago.

Last year Muncie, Ind., joined Richmond, and will do the same this year. The high school furnishes the room and lights, the Art Association of Richmond, men and women, furnish gratitious service, and with all this the expense to the two towns is $700.

DR. MOULTON,

Of the University of Chicago, To Deliver An Address At the Cross School "Finals" on Friday Evening At The Seelbach.

PROBABLY no more delightful programme ever marked the close of a scholastic year than that arranged for the "Finals" of the Cross School, which will take place Friday evening at 8 o'clock at The Seelbach Auditorium. Louisville people will then have an opportunity of hearing Dr. Richard Green Moulton, of the University of Chicago, whose subject will be "The Building Up of a Fairy Tale." Dr. Moulton holds the chair of Theory and Interpretation of Literature at the university, and his subject is one that is unique in its fascination.

While Dr. Moulton has an international reputation as an educator and is one of the most charming lecturers in the country, his versatility is so great that in a recent critique of his art, the author said: "A marvelous actor has been lost to the world in Dr. Multon. His keen appreciation of dramatic possibilities and his ability to appeal to the imagination of his hearers explains to a great degree his power to sway his audience."

With each year the Cross School has materially contributed to the upbuilding of the intellectual life of Louisville, and the public is especially invited to attend the finals of the school this year. The following interesting programme has been arranged:

Valse Romantique ..... Greg
Miss Florence Montz.
Slumber Song ..... Gerrit Smith
Miss Grace Coffman.
"The Building Up of a Fairy Tale."
Richard Green Moulton, Ph. D.
The Two Grenadiers ..... Schumann
Mr. William Gray.
Awarding of diplomas.
Elsa's Dream (Lohengrin) ..... Wagner
Miss Grace Coffman.
Reception.

At the close of this programme an informal reception will follow, and the Cross School desires to invite most cordially the members of the College Woman's Club, the Woman's Club and Kappa Kappa Gamma.

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

BY LOCAL COMPANY

MASONIC THEATER WILL BE RUN FOR FIVE YEARS.

Boston Amusement People Sign Lease—Will Maintain High Standing of House.

The Boston Amusement Company, of Louisville, recently organized, with Herman V. Cohn, president, and L. Schuhmann, secretary and treasurer, has just signed a five-year lease with the Masonic Lodge, for the Masonic Theater. Stair & Havelin, the well-known theatrical firm, the present leasees of the playhouse, whose lease expires in August, did not care to meet the offer made to the Board of Trustees of the lodge made the Boston Amusement Company, and forfeited their option.

The new leasees will continue with the same class of plays as have shown in the house since its opening, but expect to give, if anything, a better class of attractions. The stock in the Boston Amusement Company is owned entirely by Louisville men, and any money which the house will make will remain in the city. Col. Charles Shaw, the manager of the house, will remain with the Stair & Havelin interests. He will return to the management of the Avenue Theater, which berth he held before being transferred to the Masonic after it came under the control of Stair & Havelin.

The new company expects to spend $10,000 in refurnishing and redecorating the playhouse before the opening of the next season. Several men are being considered for the position of manager, but no one has been decided upon as yet.

"We made the lodge a better offer than the people now having the lease cared to meet, and the house will be ours for the next five years," said Mr. Cohn yesterday. "We will do everything to keep up the high standard established by the house. Instead of any money that the house might make going to other cities it will remain in Louisville."

The flowers will be received at Liberty Hall, 211 West Walnut street, and the Customhouse, Fourth avenue and Chestnut street, up to 11 o'clock on May 30. All the express companies have kindly consented to carry flowers free of charge from their out-of-town friends if addressed to the Decoration Day Committee. Everyone is also invited to go to Liberty Hall and assist the ladies in arranging the flowers for decoration, especially the Woman's Relief Corps. Ladies of the G. A. R. and the ladies of the U. V. U., together with all kindred organizations, to come and lend their assistance as they have in the past. The prospect for plenty of flowers is good and the committee desires the greatest decoration they have ever had.

He waived examination. The killing occurred last Sunday.

COAL PROSPECTORS ENCOURAGED BY RESULTS.

Glasgow, Ky., May 23.—[Special.]—Another step has been taken in the new coal field at Akersville in Monroe county by the finding of coal on the William Proffitt farm, a short distance from where prospectors have been at work for some time.

Aside from the prospecting nothing will be done until the exact route of the new Danville, Columbia and Scottsville railroad is determined on. If the road runs through that section the work of mining will be started at once.

Those interested in the new coal field say they will be able in a short time to show results sufficient for an inducement to the railroad to go by the new field.

G. O. P. POLITICS

Worked In Lawsuit In Judge Miller's Court.

WITNESSES DECLARE PARTISANSHIP WITHOUT INFLUENCE.

HINESLEY'S DAMAGE JUDGMENT HOLDS GOOD.

ANOTHER TRIAL IS REFUSED.

Republican political differences have been made a side issue in the case of John Henry Reiling against Henry L. Rossler, his uncle by marriage, upon which Judge Miller ruled yesterday. Reiling, about two years ago, filed suit against Rossler to recover certain notes for $7,000 bearing his name, and made out in Rossler's favor. The plaintiff charged that they were forged, and feared that after he died they would be presented for collection against his estate. Rossler declared that he knew nothing of the whereabouts of the notes. However, he filed an answer and counter claim to enforce collection for $8,000 of other notes said to be due him from Reiling. Reiling denied that they were authentic.

To prove his case counsel for Rossler put Allen Ramsey, a well-known and active Republican in the West End, on the stand. He swore that he had seen Reiling make out the notes in favor of Rossler. Wehle & Wehle then undertook to undermine the credit of Ramsey by taking the deposition of Col. Albert Scott, who testified that he would not believe Ramsey, and that when he was connected with the West End Republican Club he had misappropriated certain funds.

On cross-examination by Keith Bullitt, representing Rossler, Col. Scott was asked if it was not a fact that he was a Fairbanks man, while Rossler was a Taft man. Col. Scott confessed that he was, but said afterward that this would not have any influence on his evidence in the case. Judge Miller held in the case at joint session yesterday that a jury would have to hear the questions of fact between Reiling and Rossler.

Decrees of Divorce.

The following divorces were granted yesterday at joint session:

Mary E. Rhodes from James E. Rhodes; abandonment alleged. They were married in Jeffersonville September 25, 1891.

Margaret B. Straeffer from Walter E. Straeffer; abandonment charged. They were married November 3, 1897.

Nannie D. Waters from Ed Waters; abandonment alleged. They were married November 6, 1902.

James M. Carnes from Carrie Carnes; abandonment charged. They were married September 11, 1877.

Mary C. Simpson from Alonzo Simpson; cruelty and infidelity alleged. They were married November 8, 1905.

Nathan Levy from Louise E. Levy; abandonment charged. They were married January 28, 1903.

Maggie Clifton from Charles Clifton; abandonment charged. They were married September 27, 1905.

Two Petitions Dismissed.

In the case of Nora E. Cox from Fred Cox, in which cruelty is charged, the petition is dismissed because it fails to state a cause of action. They were married August 3, 1907, in Jeffersonville.

The case of Rebecca C. Dicks against Oscar I. Dicks, in which cruelty and abandonment were alleged, the petition was dismissed for the same reason. They were married in 1898.

Hinesley's Verdict Stands.

The verdict of $2,500 which was given the plaintiff in the case of George Hinesley, operator of the old English Kitchen restaurant, against Lawrence and Saunders Jones, the Jefferson Realty Company, Herman Probst, Galvin & Fox, John Hoertz and Pamela Beatty was upheld by a ruling of Judge Gordon, who, upon a review of the record, found that no error had been committed prejudicial to the rights of the defendants. The three defendants against whom the verdict was jointly returned were Galvin & Fox, Herman Probst and the Jefferson Realty Company. The other defendants escaped without liability. Excavation for the Paul Jones building caused the eastern wall of the English kitchen building to settle so as to require its condemnation. Hinesley alleged destruction of his business. Gov. A. E. Willson represented him.

Condemnation Permissible.

Under a ruling of Judge O'Doherty, the city has the right to condemn for use as a street crossing a portion of the right of way of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company lying between Pennsylvania avenue, now under construction, and Frankfort avenue. As the use of the new street would be impracticable without it being opened into Frankfort avenue, the city sought to create a crossing over the defendant's right of way by condemnation proceedings. The road contended that the right having been already secured to it through condemnation proceedings, it could not be subjected to further proceedings of this kind. It was also argued that a crossing at that point would so interfere with the operation of trains as to amount to spoliation. Judge O'Doherty denied both views and sustained a demurrer to the answer of the defendant which set them up.

Ruling In Will Contest.

Where a temporary restraining order has been issued against the executor of an estate to prevent him from disposing of it pending a will contest no bond is necessary to make the order binding. This was the substance of a ruling by Judge O'Doherty in the suit of Fred Feldman against the executor of Louisa Harding. The contestant is attacking the will of his daughter on the ground of undue influence. When the suit was first filed Judge Field had issued a temporary order preventing the executor from disposing of the property. The executor raised the point that this order was not binding because no bond had been executed.

Verdict For $5,000 Upheld.

The verdict given some time ago to Albert Wilmoth against the Louisville Railway Company for $5,000 because of personal injuries the plaintiff sustained in a collision between two cars on Greenwood avenue was upheld by Judge O'Doherty. The defendant had attacked its validity on the ground of error in the admission of testimony with regard to the plaintiff's injuries, which it was said had not been set forth in the petition.

License Board Affirmed.

The appeal taken by T. J. Scanlon from the ruling of the License Board, which had deprived him of his saloon license, was reviewed by Judge Pryor in the Criminal Court and affirmed.

MAN WHO IS PROSECUTING THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY

FRANK B. KELLOGG, OF ST. PAUL.

St. Paul, May 23.—[Special.]—The inquiry into the affairs of the Standard Oil corporation will be resumed in New York on Monday. The venue for the inquiry was to have been Chicago, but the Standard Oil people succeeded in getting the place of the inquiry changed. It will be remembered that the inquiry was adjourned from Cleveland, O., last year. At that time the Hon. Frank B. Kellogg, of St. Paul, who represents the Government, had taken voluminous evidence, and the inquiry then rested. The object of the inquiry was to show that the Standard Oil corporation was an illegal corporation under the Sherman anti-trust law, and was a monopoly, and was merely a continuation of the Standard Oil Trust legally dissolved by the courts of Ohio in 1892. The case is almost certain to go to the United States Supreme Court.

NEW JUNIOR JAILER MEANS SPECIAL PROVISIONS AT JAIL.

Prisoners At County Bastile Congratulate Herman F. Monroe, Who Has Another Son.

Herman F. Monroe, the jailer, yesterday wore the smiles that would not come off. The prisoners at the county jail to-day will get double portions of dessert. Which explains the arrival of Chief Jailer Monroe, the Tiny, a ten-pound wonder, and a Republican rooter of no mean lung-power, at his home, 214 Peterson avenue. Just what the youngster is to be called or what walk in life he is to pursue, as soon as he can walk at all, has not yet been decided, and is still a matter of family discussion. Meanwhile, however, Mr. Monroe, prosperous business man and efficient jailer though he is, felt yesterday that he himself had accomplished little compared to the super-presidential heights of success to which his son and successor was destined to scale. The new ruler of the jailer's home came as a welcome arrival to all except his 4-year-old brother, Bobby, who had heretofore lived in undisturbed possession of all the glory that comes to the youngest boy. His uncle, Fred Wilhelm, who owns a large St. Bernard dog, came to offer his congratulations at the happy home. Bobby surveyed his newly-arrived brother with infinite contempt, as he muttered, poutingly:

"Oh, he'll do. But I'd ruther have had Uncle Freddy's dog."

FONTAINE FERRY PUTS VAUDEVILLE AT TOP

TWELVE TOOZOONIN ARABS LISTED AS HEADLINERS.

EVERYTHING ELSE AT PARK BEAUTIFUL IN CLASS.

BIG CROWDS PREPARED FOR.

In presenting a new bill of attractions for the week commencing to-day the Fontaine Ferry Park management places its vaudeville show at the top. The new programme is declared to compare favorably with its predecessors of this season. Numerically speaking, it will be the biggest bill so far presented.

Twelve Toozoonin Arabs will furnish the headline act. Sir Hassan Ben Ali commands the troupe. These dusky whirlwinds of the desert have not previously appeared here. It is declared that their act differs in every particular from similar stunts offered local vaudevillians. Ben Ali's band numbers several comedians—a missing quantity in the average Arabian aggregation—and there are mysterious promises of a climax without a parallel for the performance.

Three soloists are down on the bill. Their talents run in different lines. Bertha Pertina is the dancer. This nimble miss is making a world tour, with Louisville as one of the first American cities in her itinerary. She is inclined to be acrobatic, and her act is described as a novelty. Miss Pertina refers to herself as "Queen of all toe dancers." Mrs. Dan McAvoy is a comedienne. She is credited with ability to sing more new songs than any other girl in vaudeville. Before she became Mrs. McAvoy she won laurels on the stage as Georgia Kelly. One of the attractive parts cited by her manager is that she never sings an old song. All her songs were written expressly for private use by herself. Another star single entertainer booked is Harry Walters. He is a well-known comedian who for the past two seasons has been "featured" in "The Beauty Doctor," a successful musical comedy.

Harry Clarke and Mrs. Harry Clarke will appear as banjoists. They claim to surpass all other banjoists. While their act is interspersed with real music they introduce many specialties. One of their best offerings is an imitation of the human voice on the banjo. This stunt, they claim, has never been successfully imitated. Several comedies without words will be reproduced during the Kinodrome number.

Martin Van Bergen is to appear again with Harry Cook's Band at the free concerts each afternoon and evening. Van Bergen sang at the park during the past week and may be credited with decided success. He possesses a baritone voice well adapted to concert work. Prof. Cook has arranged a series of new popular programmes for the week.

There is every reason to believe that last Sunday's tremendous crowds will be duplicated to-day at Fontaine Ferry. The many attractions of the park make it an ideal resort, in the minds of many, at which to spend a portion of the warm Sunday afternoon or evening. Dancing is the only attraction not running in full blast on Sunday. This pastime may be enjoyed any afternoon and evening of the week, and the dancing pavilion has steadily gained in popularity since the opening of Fontaine Ferry.

Star Day and Tag Day.

On Tuesday, May 26, the Wesley Settlement Home will hold Star day. There is a striking similarity between this and Tag day and therefore some confusion in the minds of the public. Tag day was originated by the King's Daughters and Sons, and was held in Louisville on last November 11. The King's Daughters expect to make Tag day an annual affair, and on or near next November 11 the public will have the opportunity of being tagged again.

The funds raised by Tag day will be devoted solely to the district nurse work, which is carried on by the King's Daughters of Louisville, and of which Miss Jennie Benedict is the superintendent.

STEAMER ISLAND QUEEN.

Johnson's Island, Once Great War Prison, Now Has But a Few Silent Reminders of Great Struggle Between the States---Something of Its History and of the Unsuccessful Plot To Free Those Confined There.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

SANDUSKY, O., May 22.—A small patch of grass-covered land, dotted with hundreds of white headstones, inclosed by a wire fence and shaded by scores of giant trees; two broken-down block houses and a magazine and the officers' headquarters, still well preserved, are all that remain of the famous Johnson's Island prison, one of the greatest and most important of the Civil War.

In the cemetery 206 brave sons of the South sleep in peace and when one stands in the center of it and listens to nothing but the song of the birds and the lashing of the waves upon the shores of the island, a strange feeling of sorrow and regret creeps over him and he wonders what the life story of each of these men might have been had the great clash of the North and South never occurred.

These 206 soldiers constituted the death record in the prison during the four years it harbored 3,000 prisoners. All during that time escape was impossible because the island was so closely guarded. Besides the stockades and constant patrol, the gunboat Michigan was ever on watch, hovering closely to the shore.

The history of Johnson's Island is a long one, but the most interesting part is that which connected it with the war between North and South. The island itself is a strip of land one and one-half miles in length, and containing about 275 acres, lying near the mouth of Sandusky Bay, Lake Erie, and three miles from Sandusky city.

In the early days this body of land was known as Bull's Island. E. W. Bull, a pioneer of the lake region, having been its original owner. In 1852 it became the property of Leonard B. Johnson, and from that date has borne its present name.

During the British and Indian War in 1812, and the brush with the Canadian "patriots" in 1838, the island figured more or less conspicuously, but it attained its real historical importance during the Civil War.

In 1862 Johnson's Island was first used as a military prison post. The extensive grounds serving this purpose were inclosed by a fence or wall twelve feet high, with a parapet around the top, along which sentinels paced day and night.

To the west of the prison were the headquarters for the officers of the guard, a fort, a prison hospital and the burial ground.

There were confined within the walls of the prison 3,000 men—all commissioned officers—representing the flower of the Southern army. Naturally the thought uppermost in the minds of these was how to escape.

The remote little isle, laved upon every side by the waters of Sandusky Bay, afforded slight chance for this, and even though a man scaled the prison walls without being detected, he faced a problem in trying to leave the shore. The only possible opportunity for reaching the mainland was in winter when the bay and lake were frozen. Many an attempt was made to escape during the winter months, but nearly every one failed.

The leading events of a notable conspiracy to capture the gunboat Michigan and lake transports of the Detroit, Island and Sandusky lines, and the simultaneous release of the prisoners confined at Johnson's Island, at Camp Douglass near Chicago, Camp Chase near Columbus and Camp Morton near Indianapolis—in all about 26,000 men—were enacted at Johnson's Island and Sandusky.

Hatched at the Confederate Capital, the scheme was carried forward by a few sworn adherents, chief of whom were Col. Cole, an officer in the army of Gen. Lee, and John Yates Beall. The former was called to Richmond and there entrusted with this secret service. Col. Cole is said to have been a man of wonderful coolness and courage, as well as of ample resources. Beall was a handsome, well-educated young man, a West Virginian, and an officer in the Confederate Navy. There was also a woman in the conspiracy, Annie Davis, a successful spy, who played her part in the drama very skillfully.

The first move on the part of [illegible] was to get into communication with Maj. Trimble, one of the prisoners on the island. This correspondence was carried on through ink-written letters interlined with important messages written in starch, and afterward rendered visible by an application of iodine.

Through Maj. Trimble was organized the society known as "The Southern Cross," having for its emblem a wooden cross entwined with Confederate colors. Its members were bound by ironclad oaths, administered on the open Bible, to hold themselves in readiness, when the time came, to strike at once a blow for personal liberty and the Southern cause. They were also bound to most solemn secrecy.

While Beall and about twenty picked men were detailed to capture by strategy the passenger steamers, the Philo Parsons and the Island Queen, Annie Davis was industriously working up the plot's initial feature—the capture of the Michigan—by first capturing, by the wiles of coquetry, the gunboat's officers and eliciting from them information concerning matters military at Johnson's Island and Sandusky.

In this she was aided by Col. Cole, who employed wine, and a champagne supper served by him aboard the Michigan on the night set for the culmination of the conspiracy came within an ace of placing the vessel in the hands of the Confederates.

The convivial cup had gone its rounds until, as the hours of night wore on, the party had become mellow. For the closing draught, however, was reserved a potion heavily drugged, which Cole was about to deal out when suddenly confronted by the commanding officer, who had been absent at Johnson's Island.

"Sergeant of marines, arrest this man and put him in irons!" he shouted.

Had a torpedo suddenly exploded under the Michigan her officers could scarcely have been more completely dumbfounded. Cole was taken below.

In the meantime, Beall, on board the Philo Parsons, which he had obtained possession of, together with the Island Queen, awaited off Cedar Point the signal agreed upon—a cannon shot from the Michigan—to attack and capture the gunboat and to assist the prisoners at the island, who were to rise at the same time in insurrection, overpower the guards and make their escape. The signal having failed to come, and realizing the plot had failed, Beall headed with all speed for Canada. It was claimed that the conspiracy was disclosed to the Union officers by one of the prisoners on the island.

Cole was confined on Johnson's Island and later tried by a military court and sentenced to be shot. Friends, however, secured his pardon. Beall, on the contrary, was executed as a spy at Gouverneur's Island, in New York Bay.

There were many other attempts to escape, but this was the greatest. Had not the commanding officer arrived at the critical moment there is no doubt but what the plot would have been successful.

To the visitor there is little left to tell of the tragic scenes enacted on Johnson's Island. The cemetery is, perhaps, the most impressive and recalls to the former prisoners confined in the prison, who come to visit the island every year, the time they spent with their dead comrades and the thrilling days of the war. Previous to 1890, when a party of Georgia men visited the island and sent headstones for the graves, the cemetery had been in a neglected condition. Later the Daughters of the Confederacy leased the little tract of land and now the burial ground is being well cared for.

Every year, on Memorial day, a detachment of the G. A. R. visits the cemetery and strews flowers and wreaths on the graves. Prayers are said, a benediction given by one of the Sandusky ministers, who also delivers a brief address, and the dead are again left to the shadows and the silence. Of late years, since the Daughters of the Confederacy secured the cemetery, a committee of the ladies accompanies the G. A. R. and assists in the services.

Long Line of Gifted Men Have Just Missed the Presidency.

THE most brilliant and gifted aspirants for the presidency have often been put aside for the lowly and obscure, and the history of the republic for more than a hundred years is studded with the names of men most worthy of the office whom chance or fate, or what you will, denied it. Clay and Blaine again and again came almost within reach of the prize only to miss it; so did Calhoun and Douglas, and Webster died of a broken heart because the most cherished ambition of his life was sacrificed on the altar of availability.

Aaron Burr stands first in point of time among the gifted men who, by a hair's breadth, missed the headship of the Nation. Early in 1800, a caucus of the Republican members of Congress, what is now the Democratic party, being then known by the name Republican, nominated Jefferson for President and Burr for Vice President. The Republicans won in the campaign that followed, but at its close their arose a sudden and unlooked-for dilemma. The Constitution then conferred the presidency on the person receiving the highest number of electoral votes, and it was found that Jefferson and Burr, having been voted for as nominated, had each received an equal number of votes in the Electoral College. The body failing to make choice, the election was thrown into the House of Representatives, where, at the outset, Burr's chances of success seemed as good as those of Jefferson. Burr so counted them, at least, and he pushed his schemes with such adroitness and audacity that before the House began to ballot on February 11, 1801, the friends of Jefferson threatened armed intervention in his behalf.

How Burr Lost the Prize.

Eight States voted for Jefferson and six for Burr on the first ballot, while Vermont and Maryland cast no vote, half of the members from these States being Federalists. A week's balloting worked no change in the result. Then the Republican member from Vermont induced his Federalist colleague, who had previously voted for Burr, to cast a blank ballot, thus assuring the vote of that State to Jefferson. Alexander Hamilton, who opposed Burr as the greater of two evils, likewise induced the Federalist members from Delaware and Maryland to put in blanks, and on the thirty-sixth ballot Jefferson secured the votes of ten States and with them the presidency. Burr charged his defeat to Hamilton, and in due time, the latter paid with his life for his part in the election. A less tragic sequel to the contest was the passage by Congress of a constitutional amendment providing that in future electors should designate their ballots as for President and Vice President.

De Witt Clinton's Case.

Second on the roll of gifted men who have sought and missed the presidency, stands the name of Burr's long-time and unyielding foe—De Witt Clinton. Gifted with commanding intellect and prophetic vision, Clinton held many high offices—Mayor of New York, Federal Senator and Governor of his State, and in 1812, prior to Madison's renomination by a caucus of Congress, he was put forward as the candidate of the war wing of his party. He had in fact been promised the party nomination in case Madison did not yield to the demand for war with England, and when the President's tardy change of policy brought him a renomination, Clinton scouted his sincerity and refused to quit the field. His nomination by a Democratic caucus of the New York Legislature was later indorsed by an assemblage in New York City, the first gathering of the kind in this country which closely resembled a political convention. The Federalists also formally indorsed him. He made a stout fight and up to the last seemed to have a chance of winning, for there was great dissatisfaction over the manner of Madison's nomination. Many of the Pennsylvania Federalists, however, supported Madison, and the vote of that State decided the election in the latter's favor. Clinton's after career was one of the greatest usefulness, but never again had he a substantial prospect of reaching the presidency.

Following the death of Hamilton, Rufus King was, till its dissolution, the ablest leader of the Federalists party. He was more than forty years in public life, and he held during most of that time high legislative and diplomatic positions, but when, in 1816, he was a candidate for President against Monroe, he received only thirty-four electoral votes to his opponent's 134. But his was a party rather than a personal defeat, and the Federalists never again figured in a National campaign.

The contest of 1824 at one and the same time destroyed the presidential ambitions and ended the political career of William H. Crawford. He had been prominent in politics for a score of years, holding at different times the posts of Federal Senator and Minister to France, and the Cabinet portfolios of war and the treasury. Adams, Clay and Jackson were his opponents in 1824, and, none receiving a majority in the Electoral College, the election went to the House. There is little doubt that Crawford would have been elected, but for the fact that during the campaign he had suffered an attack of paralysis so severe as to shatter his health. This caused Adams to be chosen in his stead.

The campaign of 1824 also witnessed the first of Henry Clay's many defeats for the presidency. When the election devolved upon the House choice had to be made from the three candidates—Jackson, Adams and Crawford—who had received the most electoral votes, and this rule debarred Clay, who stood lowest on the list. Had he been one of the highest candidates, his popularity in the House, of which he was then Speaker, would have assured his election. In 1832 Clay was beaten by Jackson, and in 1836 and in 1840 he was put aside by his party for other men, but in 1844 he was the enthusiastic choice of the Whigs and at the outset there seemed every prospect of his success.

Defeat came to him solely as a result of his own acts. The leading question of that time was the annexation of Texas. Before the campaign began Clay wrote a letter taking ground against annexation, but about the middle of the canvass, fearing that this declaration would injure his prospects in the South, he wrote a second letter stating that he was not opposed to annexation in itself, with or without slavery, but was opposed to it while Texas should continue to be claimed by Mexico. This letter cost him the support of thousands of anti-slavery Whigs in the North and gave to Polk the electoral vote of New York, and with it the election. Thus by his own hand did Clay forever destroy his chances of becoming President. He was passed by for Taylor in 1848, when he could have been elected, and had been four months in his grave when in 1852 the defeat of Scott marked the passing of the Whig party from the field of national politics.

When in 1828 John C. Calhoun was reelected Vice President on the ticket with Jackson, it was believed that at the end of four years he would succeed his chief in the presidency, for the South, then dominant in national affairs, had no abler man in public life. But when, in 1832, South Carolina, following the doctrine he had promulgated that a State, while remaining in the Union, had the right to nullify a law of Congress, passed its famous nullification ordinance, there arose a controversy which forced Calhoun from the vice presidency, earned him the bitter enmity of Jackson, and forever destroyed his chances of becoming the head of the republic. Van Buren supplanted him in Jackson's regard and in due course succeeded the latter in office. Calhoun, after he resigned from the vice presidency, served nearly eighteen years in the Senate, but never again was his name seriously mentioned in connection with the presidency.

Webster's Will-O'-the-Wisp.

For nearly a score of years Daniel Webster was an avowed and eager aspirant for the presidency, and fitness alone considered, no statesman of his time better deserved the office, for from 1830, when he made his reply to Hayne, onward till his death his was easily the most masterful and commanding intellect acting upon public affairs. And yet in 1836 he received only fourteen electoral votes, as compared to eleven given to Magnum, twenty-six to White, seventy-three to Harrison and 170 to Van Buren. Though Webster was never again a formal candidate for the presidency, he continued to seek the office until near his death, but a less able man always carried off the prize. This was because its peculiar position on the slavery question compelled the Whig party to treat its leaders with demoralizing and cowardly ingratitude. Clay was the only one of them ever nominated for President. In 1840 the Whigs nominated Harrison and in 1848 they put forward Taylor. The latter had had no political experience. Harrison had held political office before reaching the presidency, but a military record gained him, as well as Taylor, the nomination. Webster's friends in 1852 made an earnest effort to secure his nomination, but on the first ballot in the Whig convention he received only twenty-nine votes, while there were 131 for Scott and 133 for Fillmore. Wounded to the heart, Webster refused to support Scott's nomination, and took no part in the campaign. He died before election day.

Lewis Cass, during his half century in public life, was thrice a candidate for the presidency, and thrice seemed to have it within his grasp. In the Democratic convention of 1844 Van Buren was the choice of a majority of the delegates, but lacked the two-thirds necessary to nominate. After the sixth ballot his support began to go to Cass, who doubtless would have been nominated but for an adjournment. During the night a combination was effected which resulted next day in the nomination of Polk—the first political dark horse in our history. Made the candidate of his party in 1848, Cass was defeated at the polls by the defection of the New York Barnburners. Van Buren as the candidate of the Free Soil party did not obtain a single electoral vote, but he was able to prevent Cass from Carrying New York, and that circumstance insured the election of Taylor. Again in 1852 Cass was the most conspicuous aspirant for the Democratic nomination, but in the end the honor went to Pierce, whose name before the convention met had not been considered except by a small group of Southern politicians seeking a candidate who was "safe" on the slavery question.

Stephen A. Douglas earnestly and adroitly sought the presidency for a dozen years, but in 1852 the envy and personal hatreds provoked by his career as a leader in the Senate prevented his nomination; in 1856 he was put aside for Buchanan, who, as Minister to England, had been out of the country for several years and had thus kept himself free from the dissensions which were rending the Democracy in twain, and when, in 1860, he was nominated by the Northern wing of his party it was to face sure defeat. The slavery men fought him in the South and in the border States, the Lincoln men in the free States, and the Buchanan Administration all over the country. Attempts at a fusion of the Democratic factions failed in nearly all the States, and the election gave Lincoln 180 electoral votes to 72 for Breckinridge, 39 for Bell and 12 for Douglas, who died within the year.

Greeley Beat Seward.

The campaign of 1860 also ended William H. Seward's hopes of reaching the presidency. When the Republican National Convention met in that year Seward's nomination seemed a foregone conclusion. He was then easily the most conspicuous and popular of the Republican leaders, and he had as adviser and supporter a very Saul among the politicians in Thurlow Weed. His candidacy, however, had to face the unrelenting opposition of Horace Greeley. When the New York delegation to the Republican convention was chosen, Weed saw to it that Greeley did not have a place on it; but the editor of the Tribune appeared at Chicago with the proxy of an Oregon delegate, and worked in season and out of season undermining Seward's strength. His chief argument was a singular one. Seward, while Governor of New York, had signed a bill granting a portion of the school funds of the State to Catholics, and this act, Greeley declared, would cost him thousands of votes should he be nominated for President. Greeley's arguments, with the menace of Knownothingism then hanging over the land, made men pause. Coupled with the declaration of Curtin and Lane, Republican candidates for Governor of Pennsylvania and Indiana, that they could not carry their States in October if Seward was nominated, it drove enough votes from the New Yorker to defeat him. Lincoln, on the fourth ballot, was nominated in his stead, and Seward lives in history as chief of Lincoln's Cabinet.

Never was the presidency more eagerly coveted than it was by Salmon P. Chase, a man in many ways splendidly equipped for the post. He was a candidate before the convention which nominated Lincoln, nor did his appointment as Chief Justice in the closing days of the Civil War lull his ambition to be President. Chase had been a Democrat before slavery became the dominant issue in politics, and in 1868 some of the shrewdest politicians of that party secretly organized a movement to make him its candidate against Grant. Their plans, save for one man's craft and cunning, would have been carried into execution when the Democratic National Convention met in New York City. That man was Samuel J. Tilden, who, believing that Chase's candidacy would spell defeat, planned with subtle and masterly strategy to nominate Horatio Seymour. It had been arranged that Seymour, who had been chosen president of the convention, should leave the chair to nominate Chase.

That moment was chosen by Tilden for the fulfillment of his purpose, and when Seymour called another to preside, an Ohio delegate, shrewdly selected for the occasion, sprang to his feet and demanded the nomination of Seymour, the acknowledged leader of the Democracy. Men in other delegations, previously assigned to the task, swelled the hurrah for Seymour, and when some of the New York delegates joined in the cheering the end became evident to all. Against his will Seymour was made the nominee by a practically unanimous vote, and Chase went to the grave with the great ambition of his life unfulfilled.

James G. Blaine, the Republican leader of his period best beloved by the masses, sought the presidency for sixteen years only to be disappointed in the end. He had a majority of the delegates to the Republican National Convention of 1876, and a majority of the convention voted for him at one time or another; but never at the same time, and the clever maneuvering of his enemies resulted in a landslide on the seventh ballot to Hayes as a compromise candidate. Put aside for Garfield in 1880, Blaine was nominated in 1884 only to be defeated at the polls—counted out, some of his friends charged. The election that year turned on the vote of New York, and that State was lost to the Republicans by the narrow margin of 1,047 votes. Gen. Butler, who in 1884 was an independent candidate for President, charged that thousands of votes cast for him in New York were counted for Cleveland, and if this were so, and these ballots had been differently counted, some think Blaine would have been elected.

It is also probable that in 1888 he put the presidency from him when he could have gained it. Ill health compelled him to refuse the candidacy of his party in that year when he could have had it by a vote that would have been close to unanimous, and when, there is good reason to suppose, he would have been as strong at the polls as Harrison, who was nominated and elected. But when in 1892, after quarreling with Harrison, Blaine entered the field at the twelfth hour, his candidacy was foredoomed to defeat in a convention already committed to another, and he ended his public career a disappointed and embittered man.

John Sherman was three times a conspicuous candidate for the Republican nomination for President, and each time saw it go to another man. Veteran Ohio politicians, however, are wont to declare that had he not thrice declined the governorship of that State he would have achieved the presidency. Had Sherman, they say, accepted his party's nomination for Governor in 1879, when he was offered it, he would have been the Republican candidate for President the following year. With Hayes in the White House, a loyal lieutenant in the Treasury and himself in the executive mansion at Columbus, Sherman would not have been betrayed in the Republican National Convention, and Blaine would have nominated him as he did Garfield, had the Ohio delegation born true to him.

Sherman's Lost Opportunity.

In 1883 the nomination for Governor of Ohio was again offered Sherman. Had he accepted he would have been elected, and had he been Governor in 1884 the Republican nomination for President would have been his, for Blaine, it has often been asserted, took it only because Sherman could not beat Arthur in the convention. Had Sherman been Governor he would have beaten Arthur and then he would have beaten Cleveland; for with him as the Republican nominee there would have been no Mugwump revolt. In 1887 Sherman was a third time urged to run for Governor. Had he done so he would have been elected, and in 1888 he, not Harrison, would have been the Republican candidate for President. Thus did he bar his own way to the great prize to end his public career in the Cabinet of a former follower, who had twice placed him in nomination for the presidency.

Clay, Webster, Cass, Douglas, Chase, Blaine and Sherman all sought the presidency, and all were defeated either in the convention or at the polls. Not one of the men elected to that office since 1856 belonged in the category of persistent presidency-seekers. Buchanan, in truth, was the last of them to reach the White House. Will the campaign of 1908 furnish an exception for the rule?

Prize Winners.

For the cleverest rhyme in answer to the picture in the Contest department two weeks ago the first prize, $1, is given to Mattie Marshall Curd, of 1218 Fourth avenue, Louisville. She sent in the following:

Two lovers stand in fond embrace
And view each other face to face;
The spring moon stares in admiration,
Encouraging their adoration.
"Will you be mine? I'll be your lover;
We'll live like little pigs in clover."

The second prize, a book, is given to Mary Troy, of 507 West Chestnut street, Louisville. Her contribution follows:

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.
And mostly he's encouraged by the shining moon above.
The man said to his lady love, "Now, be agreeable, do.
Please give me just one little kiss—you know I love you true."
The girl just answered shyly: "I'm very fond of you."

The third prize, also a book, goes to Allen Shoenfield, of 1021 Fourth avenue, Louisville. His rhyme follows:

A fat man, whose name was Dick,
By the spring moon was made lovesick;
To the girl, said he,
"Will you marry me?"
And she answered, "yes," mighty quick.

Notice—Prize-winners living in Louisville will please call at the Courier-Journal editorial rooms on Tuesday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 5, else the prizes will be forfeited.

BOY'S ESSAY ON CLERGYMEN.

Bishop Potter, at an ecclesiastical dinner in New York, read a Cooperstown schoolboy's essay on "Clergymen." The essay, which created much amusement, was as follows:

"There are three kinds of clergymen, bishups, recters and curats. the bishups tells the recters to work and the curats have to do it, a curat is a thin married man but when he is a recter he gets fuller and can preach longer sermons and becums a good man."—[Exchange.

THE HUNGARIAN PIG SHEPHERD.

Besides the horse and the sheep shepherd the pig shepherd also belongs to the typical characters of the Hungarian folk life. To the horse shepherd belong the Puszta, to the pig shepherd the wood, which is really his dwelling place. This savage son of nature resembles not at all his brothers of Western Europe, but is of a primitive and independent tribe which can be seen only in Hungary or in the woody mountains of Servia.

The hatchet is to him an inseparable companion, like the checkered mantle, ornamented with tufts, called "szur." He has his dance, the pig shepherd's dance, but advancing civilization is slowly driving away the old, savage dance, and only now and then one can see it, when on holy days these pig shepherds, coming down from the mountains to their friends, in the evening will light a big fire and, dancing around it, throw their hatchets high in the air and catch them again.

Usually they are handsome, well-shaped fellows, but as there are no schools in these great woods they have no opportunity to study. They are brave and harmless. At the World's Fair in Paris in 1900 they created quite a sensation and their round little hats became the fashion.—[New Orleans Times-Dispatch.

EDGAR'S SECRET

By SUSAN CHENERY.

EDGAR and Ralph were cousins. They did not live very far apart, if the space between their homes had been measured as the bird flies. But as a long, steep, thickly wooded ridge lay between the houses and the road went around, instead of over it, the distance was more than three miles.

When their schools were in session Edgar usually spent one Saturday afternoon at Ralph's house, and the next Saturday Ralph returned the visit.

One Saturday when Edgar was due at Ralph's house the weather looked threatening, and before he reached his cousin's the rain began to fall. So their various outdoor plays and expeditions were prevented, and they betook themselves to the garret. They put rollers under a large box and sailed backward and forward across the floor. Then the old-fashioned chimney gave the best of opportunities for bears' dens, and the family were so far below that the bears could caper and growl to their hearts' content. But after a while the clouds began to clear away and the sunlight streamed through the southwest window.

"It's all cleared off," cried Edgar. "Look out there! That wasp will sting you," he added, as Ralph approached the window on which were several of the insects.

Ralph gave no heed to Edgar's warning, but went nearer than before—quite up to the window, in fact. Then he took one and placed it in his hand, greatly to Edgar's astonishment.

The wasp did not sting. Ralph laid it down and took another; this time he began to provoke it to attack him. He held it by one leg and enraged it greatly. But its virogous attempts to avenge the insult were of no avail. It could not pierce Ralph's skin. Edgar could not understand how his cousin escaped. He watched closely as Ralph repeated the performance, but could discover nothing.

"Come, tell a fellow," he said at last, and Ralph told, having kept the secret till it was burdensome. Edgar was soon doing his full share of irritating the wasps.

"I don't believe there are any wasps at our house, so I'll take some of these home if I can find a box," he said. "I'm going to take some to school next week."

So a colony of wasps was selected to settle in the garret window on the east side of the ridge. On Edgar's way home he met Joe Temple, one of his school fellows.

"Halloo, Joe," he exclaimed, "look here!"

"Well, what of it?" said Joe, when he saw a specimen of what the box contained.

"I'll hold any of them in my hand and not get stung," said Edgar.

"Don't believe it," returned Joe.

Edgar was as good as his word, holding the wasp close in his palm, letting it escape, and catching it again, and finally poking it back into the box.

"Now, how'd you do it?" asked Joe.

"That's my secret," Edgar answered.

"You can't do it again."

"Can't I? Now, you see, he tries to sting and can't—whew!" suddenly shaking off the insect and performing a series of capers; "who'd suppose a wasp could sting quicker'n you could catch your breath?"

"Ha, ha, ha!" roared Joe; "so your secret don't work every time!"

"I almost told him how I did it," Edgar said to himself, as he trudged homeward; "but I guess he didn't notice."

Meanwhile, Joe at home related his meeting with Edgar. "But how he did it the first time I don't see," he concluded.

"I know," little Charlotte exclaimed; "I could hold the wasps myself."

"You know?" said Joe. "Well, out with it, Sis."

"Why, you know I was down to Uncle Pratt's last summer, and you never did see such big mosquitoes; and the way Sally and I used to catch 'em was to let 'em light on our arms and hands and begin to bite; then we'd hold our breath and they couldn't get away and we'd kill 'em. If we could have held our breath all the time they couldn't have bitten us at all. And that's how Edgar keeps the wasps from stinging."

"I see," said Joe, slowly.

Edgar had work to do Monday morning and arrived at school just in time to avoid being tardy. But at recess he carried out his box of wasps which he had not forgotten to bring to school, and with which he meant to astonish the other boys. He was somewhat astonished himself, however, to find that almost every one of his playmates had a box or a bit of paper rolled up, containing two or three wasps, and to see that every boy could handle his captives without injury to himself.

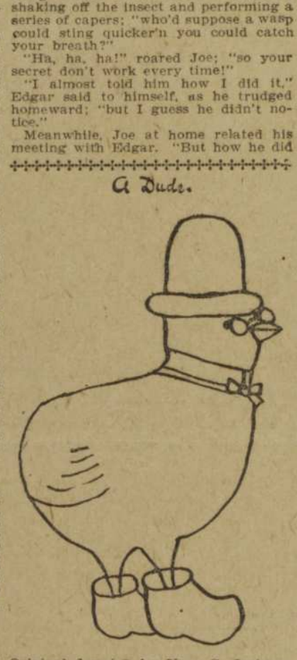

"You see, we can handle 'em and not get hurt; you got stung the other day, eh?" said one boy to him, while the others laughed.

At the afternoon recess one of the boys who had obeyed Joe's injunction, "not to tell Ed," as long as he was able, informed Edgar how the boys came by their knowledge.

The wasps in the neighborhood suffered persecution for a time, but in a few days the survivors were unmolested in their travels over garret and barn windows, and the whole affair of Edgar's secret was forgotten.

THE HANDY BOY.

In Germany it is the custom for every father who can afford it to supply his boy with a few tools after he has passed the age of 10 and encourages him to use them about the house. He will have a hammer, saw, plane, pincers, chisels, bits, screwdriver and so forth, and though he may never take up the trade of carpenter or machinist, he will become a handy boy.

It is seldom that a German householder has to send for a carpenter or plumber, and he does his own paperhanging and painting. Many of them can fix a lock or clean a clock. A handy boy will become a handy man and save himself many a dollar every year.

AN OBEDIENT DAUGHTER.

James Stimpson, farmer, living near Vincennes, Ind., had to go to town to sell some produce, and as there were many tramps around he loaded a shotgun with bird shot and told his daughter Martha that if any one of them came to the house she was to shoot. He was detained in town until a late hour, and upon reaching home he tried to enter the house without calling out. The daughter was on the alert and fired on him from a window and filled his leg with shot.

It is good to have an obedient daughter, but it is not safe to trust her with a shotgun. She may be too obedient.

MISS BARCLAY SEES GENOA.

Genoa, May 12, 1908.—Dear Boys and Girls: Most of us free born American boys and girls think of Genoa only as the birthplace of Christopher Columbus, and perhaps sometimes as an Italian seaport of no mean importance.

Genoa is a city of about the population of our own Louisville. Whether or not it spreads over as much ground as Louisville, I cannot say. For it is built upon cliffs in a semi-circle around a very beautiful harbor. The old part of town is a network of uneven, narrow streets, put in wherever they might make walking more difficult.

We are stopping at the strangest hotel which I have yet encountered, though Auntie tells me there are some much funnier ones to come.

It bears a simple name, "Smith's," and if from that you would expect anything modern and English you are doomed to disappointment.

There is nothing modern about it. There are neither gas nor electric lights, there are no baths. But there is a lift; an elevator, you know. It is very dignified, but is strangely out of place in the queer, rambling old building, which 500 years ago was a monastery, and so has odd courts and corridors, and an old refectory; decorated by the best of Genoese masters, who were not very good, where the modern traveler struggles with spaghetti and worries over wine being cheaper than water. Yesterday afternoon when we arrived here, the town was glorified with sunset.

So instead of going at once to our hotel we drove about the old part of the town. We were going for a view, the cabby said, and we went up hill, up, until we could look far out over the water, all purple and gold and sail-dotted, and could see Genoa lying beneath us, and between Genoa and the water, the harbor, where the masts of hundreds of ships presented a confused mass. We could see San Sorengo, a beautiful cathedral, originally Gothic, but with additions in every style of architecture which has been prevalent since its erection in the Thirteenth century.

The old town looked so queer and confused with its narrow, crooked streets and its palaces and churches rising suddenly from what appeared to be slums. Away to the south, beyond the old wall over which so many a bloody battle has been fought, stretches new Genoa with broad, straight streets, meeting regularly at right angles, and buildings whose construction, even from a distance, speak volumes for their newness.

Away back on the hill we could see the Campo Santo, the Italians prettily call their cemeteries holy ground, where a few of the larger shafts and monuments, catching the last of the golden light, stood in bold relief against the darkening blue sky. Auntie says the Campo Santo is very interesting, and that we must try to go there, but that it is hard to see, because the hours for sightseeing are changed frequently and without warning.

We watched the sunset fade and the purple twilight settle over the town, and then started on what I believe was the most perilous journey which I have ever taken.

The lean, long, little caballo (Italian horses are not much larger than ponies), which I had believed incapable of anything which approached speed, started on a mad tear down that steep, narrow, crooked street, dashing wildly around corners, while the carriage reeled on one wheel.

"Oh, stop, stop!" we screamed to the cocher, who in turn would scream to the horse, and the horse would put all his energy into a mad leap around a sharp corner.

We were so relieved when he was quite exhausted, and could not go faster than a walk. It not only made us reasonably sure that we would see another sun rise and set, but gave us an opportunity to observe some of the very interesting buildings which we were passing.

Genoa seems to have an astonishing number of beautiful old rennaisance palaces. As we drove by in the half-light, we could not see that they were in any wise despoiled, and they were redolent of the life of a bygone age.

The little balcony with its gothic arcade seemed to tell of a love that was dead and gone. The great carved doorways bespoke the pageant and pomp of another day. The narrow entries and sudden turns were disagreeable reminders that much blood had been spilled in the very streets through which we drove, in the old days when Guelph and Ghibelline hated and fought to the death.

Our driver pointed out to us the Palazzo Ducale, the Palazzo Bianco, the white palace, and the Palazzo Rosso, the red palace, which stands across the street from it, and is built of a fine red limestone, in much the same fashion that its neighbor is made of blocks of fair, white marble.

The three palaces which I have mentioned, and many others in Genoa, were designed by Galeazzo Alessi, a pupil of Michael Angelo's, whose style was followed by later architects.

In spite of occasional defects, Alessi's architecture is of an imposing and uniform character, and displays great ingenuity in making the best of an unfavorable and limited site.

The palaces too, contain some fine pictures which I must see to-day, as well as the Campo Santo.

We saw a great deal on our drive last evening, for beside the palaces, the coachman pointed out to us a queer ramshackle little old house in which he said "Chris Colombo was born."

Auntie says she is quite sure that it is not the same house which another coachman designated to her as having the honor of being Chis' birthplace, so we doubt its authenticity.

Then, too, we saw the monument which Genoa erected to her famous son. It represents him looking westward over the sea, with America crouching at his feet, and Wisdom, Wealth, Virtue and several other admirable bodies making themselves useful in completing the composition.

The sun is pouring into this quaint little room where I am writing while I wait for Auntie. Our bags are packed and we leave at 2:40 this afternoon for Pisa. Haven't I a day before me?

Very sincerely your friend,
EVELYN CLAIBORNE BARCLAY.

THE GALICIAN WAX MINES.

[Exchange.]

The day of the wax candle is supposed to have gone by, with the advent of kerosene, gas and the electric light; but, as a matter of fact, an enormous number are used every year all over the world. But the wax candle of to-day is not the wax candle of our grandfather's day.

The busy bee is as busy as ever, but very little of the wax he secretes is made up into candles. Mineral wax—generally known as ozokerit—has taken the place of beeswax, and is dug from the ground in Utah and California in this country, and in Wales, Galicia and Roumania in Europe. When found, it has a dark, rich brown color, slightly greenish and translucent in thin films, but when refined it resembles well-bleached beeswax.

The wax mines of Eastern Galicia form one of the most curious fields of industry imaginable. They are at and around Boryslaw, which is also the center of the eastern oil district of that part of Austria.

The wax lies in beds, like clay, at depths of from 350 to 600 feet. Shafts are sunk to the beds.

The Boryslaw wax field is only fifty acres in extent, and upon that 1,000 shafts have been sunk. Six thousand men live and work on that tract. The owners of the deposits have made immense fortunes from the product, as it is very valuable, bringing 8 cents a pound at the pits.

Its use until within a few years was confined solely to making candles, but the manifold uses to which paraffine has been adapted has given this Galician deposit a much wider utility.

The ozokerit lies in veins sixteen inches thick. It is dug out with shovels and raised from the shaft with buckets and windlass.

A RUNAWAY BOY.

If you come across a red-headed, blue-eyed boy of 16, who has the scar of a burn on his left cheek and can whistle like a lark, ask him if his name is Luke Hastings, and if his home is in England. If he answers in the affirmative, tell him that his father and mother are dead, and that as soon as he is of age he will come into possession of an estate valued at about $75,000.

Three years ago Luke ran away from home and came to America on a tramp steamer, and he is supposed to have fallen in with a gang of hoboes and to be traveling about the country at this time.

TOM, THE JAILBIRD

Or

The Story of the Boy Who Won Out

IT IS a voyage of from 90 to 100 days from Boston to the mouth of the Canton River and the port of Hongkong. If the winds are contrary, the run may be spun out ten days longer. But little of interest happened on board the Albatros until she had completed four-fifths of her voyage and was in the China Sea. Tom had been seasick for the first three days out of Boston, and was then able to attend to his duties. The ship had met with pretty rough weather here and there, but had come through safely. She had at last reached a point in the China Sea opposite the Palawan Islands when the breeze deserted her and for two days she lay almost without motion. During the first day it was simply looked upon as a calm, but the morning of the second day dawned to fill the heart of Capt. Edwards with anxiety.

The heavens were murky, the ocean flat and greasy, and there were plenty of sailors aboard who felt that a typhoon was brewing and trouble ahead. The ship was made as ready for it as could be, but it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon before the storm burst. At that hour the sky was so black that it seemed as if night had fully come. When the wind came it was with a wild shriek, and with such force that the good ship had no chance at all. It was like a mountain moving down on a settler's cabin. It took her broadside on and heeled her over until the ends of her port yards touched the water, and there she hung for a moment. If the wind had abated for only ten seconds she would have righted, but it increased in force instead, and slowly the big ship heeled over and over until she was bottom up. There was a loud cry from fore and aft as the men felt her going, and then every one was swept into the sea. Ten minutes before the disaster Capt. Edwards had called Tom on deck and said:

"We are going to have a typhoon, and there's no telling whether the ship will come through all right or not. You had best be on deck for awhile and mind that you get a secure hold of something and hang on."

There was no hanging on after the ship began to turn turtle. The thirty-two men of her crew went into the raging sea together, and within five minutes thirty-one of them were no more. That Tom alone should have escaped may be looked upon as marvelous. He could not swim a stroke, but had he been the best of swimmers it would not have helped him at all. The ocean was foaming in an instant, and the waves got up until the mightiest ship would have been tossed like a cork.

How, then, was he saved? I cannot tell you, and he remembers little of what happened after he was thrown into the sea. A few years ago a British training ship, having over 400 boys aboard, went down in the English Channel in a moment on a fair day, and of all that number only a lad was saved. He couldn't tell how it was done.

The Palawan Islands were at least fifty miles away when the disaster happened to the Albatross, and wind and sea drifted everything in that direction. When Tom was swept into the sea he must have become entangled in a lot of wreckage and been supported by it. Only once or twice as he floated was he dimly conscious of his surroundings. He knew that he was in the raging waters and being buoyed up by something, but he was so sleepy that he did not want to work his brain to think. When he came to his senses he found himself mixed up with a lot of wreckage on the sandy beach of an island. He judged by the sun that it was about noon. Almost twenty-four hours had passed since the foundering of the ship.

The boy was as stiff and lame as if he had been pounded. He lay for ten minutes looking up at the sky before he could believe that he had been saved or before making any effort to get up. Then he staggered into the woods in search of water. Fortunately, he had only a short distance to go before finding a creek that came from the interior and emptied itself into the sea. His thirst was so great that it seemed as if he could never satisfy it, but when he had he felt altogether a new boy. There were bananas on a tree near at hand, and he ate until he could hold no more. Then he was ready to look about him and see on what sort of a place he had landed. He had heard the captain telling the mate that the ship was off the Palawan Islands when they were waiting for the typhoon to burst, and so he judged that he had landed on one of the groups.

Returning to the shore, Tom found that a great lot of wreckage had come ashore with him and been left high and dry by the receding tide. He was afraid that he would find dead bodies, but he came across none. Living or dead he had been the only one to reach the island. He could not tell whether it was inhabited or not, but fearing that it was not, and that he would have to depend solely on himself, he began saving whatever he could handle.

There were two topmasts with their rigging, one of the boats badly smashed a lot of ropes, two hatch-covers, a part of the cook's galley, some barrels of beef and flour and some boxes of biscuit, the roof of the cabin, the carpenter's tool chest, a lot of the men's clothing and many other things. Farther out at sea he could see a lot more barrels and boxes floating about. Everything he could handle was drawn above high water mark by sunset, and then the boy was so tired that he fell down and slept the night through, having no care as to whether there were wild beasts in the forests or not.

It was sunrise when Tom opened his eyes again. He found the beach covered with more stuff, and after a drink of water and a breakfast on bananas he went to work again. With only an hour's halt at noon he worked the day through, and when night came again he had saved and piled up a great heap of stuff. The typhoon had ceased blowing and nothing more would come ashore. His friend the captain was gone, crew gone, ship gone, and he was alone on an unknown island.

Scientific Town-Planning Now England's Fad.

LONDON, May 14.—This month the Right Hon. John Burns, former hired boy in a public house, as the English saloon is called, and now one of the principal members of the British Cabinet, is going to introduce a bill that will be of almost as much interest across the Atlantic and on the continent as it will be in England. If it passes and works as well as the keen-witted and practical Right Hon. John thinks it will, it is going to make a big difference to the next generation, and quite a lot of difference right away.

The idea is to make a science of town-planning, and to put the Government in charge of the job. It occurred to broad-minded Americans long ago that you can make a better, and healthier, and more attractive town if you lay out the scheme for it beforehand, than you can if you leave it to grow up anyhow, guided only by land speculation. Various American efforts were made in this line, and some of them highly successful, too, but it was over in Germany that town-planning first became a kind of science. Lately England caught the craze, and now the writer is informed that Mr. Bryce—unofficially, of course, and not as British Ambassador to the United States—is deeply interested, and wishes to see the latest system introduced into the United States. He has even sent a representative to England—also unofficially—to study English projects with a view to interesting prominent Americans in the great idea.

But the most significant fact is that the British Government proposes to take a hand in the game. It is John Burns' pet hobby. He looks to it as a practical solution of many of the toughest economic problems of the day. His new bill on the subject, which will soon be the topic of discussion throughout England, is calculated to put a stop to all ill-considered, ramshackle building and land operations. The hand of Government authority is to be laid upon all property management which, henceforth, must be conducted with a view to the public weal, and not to individual interests.

Local authorities are to be authorized to conduct town-planning operations; and the Local Government Board, as a central court of final appeal, is to decide as to how all these measures are to be carried out. Local councils in every city are to be empowered to acquire land for town-planning purposes; and even to take over compulsorily any land or buildings which they may require. If any private interest is injured, it is to be compensated, but only in accordance with Government ideas. For instance, should one property owner be benefited at the expense of another, the injured party is to be indemnified, not by the Government, but out of the benefit which accrues to the lucky owner.

LONDON "TOWN-PLANNED" STREET.

THE RT. HON. JOHN BURNS, WHO WILL OFFER NEW TOWN-PLANNING BILL

LONDON SLUM STREET IN CROWDED DISTRICT.

The writer has recently had a long talk with the Rt. Hon. John Burns over this new scheme from which he anticipates so much. In England Cabinet Ministers must not talk for publication; but it is very evident from Burns' entire attitude that he looks to town-planning to do wonders. If it accomplish only half of what the president of the Local Government Board expects, the millenium is not so distant as the professional pessimist would have us believe.

One of the principal features of the bill relates to local control of housing. Under existing conditions local authorities can exert no authority either as to the number of houses per acre, or the style of architecture. Up to now the housing problem has been attacked on matters of detail; but not as a comprehensive whole. Though John Burns has the credit of introducing this epoch-making measure, its further progress does not altogether depend on him. This scheme is popular with all political parties; and even if the Liberal Government went out of office, as there are rumors of resignation, the Conservatives would probably adopt the bill.

In addition to the powerful interest of the British Government, which is fostering town-planning, private individuals are vying with each other to make it a success. No less a person than George Bernard Shaw has backed his faith to the extent of $27,000 in hard cash, which he has just contributed to a town-planning society; while Leopold Rothschild has put up $10,000. J. S. Nettlefold, of the famous Birmingham firm associated with "Joe" Chamberlain, has contributed $22,500 and written a book which makes town-planning so attractive that, on reading it, you feel like rushing off into the wilds and beginning something of the sort forthwith. Another enthusiastic town-planner is Miss Sybelle Gurney. She has invested $30,000, a big sum for an individual to put into a venture of this kind.

Hitherto it has been the idea of the mere builder to erect square or oblong structures on square or oblong patches of ground at the rate of fifty-six per acre. These semi-cave dwellings in canon-like streets have been let by the mere landlord at rack rents. But now all this is to be changed. All future plots of ground are to be laid out with a view to artistic effect and healthgiving requirements. Twelve houses per acre are deemed sufficient, and every other acre is to be devoted to an open space for children. Heedless hands shall no longer be laid upon trees, nor is beautiful scenery to be recklessly demolished.

In Germany there are now no less than 718 town-planning societies, with 115,000 members. In Berlin alone there is one society which has put up 1,654 dwellings at a cost of $6,250,000. Most German towns are acquiring all the suburban property surrounding each town site, and plotting it off into beautiful, artistic, "landscapey" building lots, on which commodious dwellings are erected at nominal cost to tenants.

In England thriving settlements are now in full swing at Garden City, Ealing and Hampstead, near London; Manchester, Bourneville, Cardiff, Port Sunlight, Earswick, Oldham, Leicester, Harborne, Fallings Park, Sevenoaks and elsewhere, the total amount of private capital invested in present undertakings being more than $1,250,000. In addition to those mentioned, six other projects are in course of formation. Before the end of the year there will be twenty towns growing up on "planned lines."

The main idea is to acquire land in the suburbs, or within easy reach of great cities, and to plot this land in accordance with certain fixed principles of scientific procedure. For instance, in comprehensive town-planning schemes the area embraced is expected to comprise any land near a city that might be built upon within the next thirty or fifty years. Municipal authorities and private individuals are encouraged to plot out this land in such a way that wide avenues are provided for the main traffic between centers and outskirts, narrower streets are allotted for ordinary traffic, while less expensive roads and narrow drives are provided for purely residential districts. While the main thoroughfares are as direct as possible, the private drives are made to conform to artistic standards. Parks and ample open spaces are provided for before the property reaches high value; and—departing from the usual procedure—most of the parks are in what is known as "back land;" that is, in residential, and not in business, districts.

All factories are assigned to localities on the opposite side of the town to that from which the prevailing winds blow, while railway lines and water communications are designed to tap these factories at their most convenient points of access. This takes the traffic away from the residential districts.

The future town is divided into sections which are graded. High buildings close to each other are allowed in the center or main arteries, while in the residential portion buildings are lower the further they are removed from centers. All warehouses and business offices must be placed in the center of the town, as should also all municipal buildings, which latter are expected to be handsome and imposing in order that citizens may take pride in their corporate existence.

One of the first essentials to an efficient town plan is to have dotted about at frequent intervals on cheap land, many small plots of open ground where children can amuse themselves without being a nuisance to others, or in danger themselves, as they are now in the properly planned town no children will be seen playing in the streets.

Of course, in settled cities, such as London, it is impossible to adopt this scheme entirely, owing to the enormous cost of land, but wherever possible, even in congested areas, many things are being done to alleviate present conditions. For instance, local authorities are converting bare, unsightly courts into pretty parks; streets, wherever possible, are being widened, and houses are being altered. Many slum houses are radically changed in such a manner that more windows and larger doors are being added, and, as a consequence, more light and air get into the structures.

Wherever possible, working people are encouraged to leave the congested districts and go to "town-planned" lands on the suburbs. With cheap street car and railway fares, the suburbs of the great cities in England are rapidly opening up. Instead of private land speculators being allowed to capture and hold for speculative purposes all the cheap lands in these suburbs, workingmen's societies are purchasing property wherever possible.

Most of these societies are run on what is known as the "Co-operative Tenants" principle. In this way the land is purchased by a private association of more or less philanthropic individuals, who agree not to take more than 4 or 5 per cent. on their investment. The land is plotted by the most up-to-date ideas, and houses are built and let to only such tenants as obtain stock in the Co-operative Society. The tenant pays his rent in the ordinary way, but instead of its going into the pocket of an individual landlord, it is paid to the society in which he himself holds stock. In the course of time, when he has acquired sufficient stock to cover the value of his house and land, he becomes practically his own landlord. The attainment of this ideal state is the ultimate object, the "ulterior design"—as it were—of everyone who goes into the project.

In addition to becoming eventually their own landlords, co-partnership tenants have many other advantages, if they choose to partake of them. For instance, two families can take what are called "paired houses"—that is, a single large house divided up for two families, and with a common dining-room. Thus two families, by combining, may eliminate the drudgery of keeping up separate cooking establishments. One may cook for the other, or they can take "turn and turn about." Several of these paired houses are already in successful operation at Garden City.

At most of the settlements springing up all over England the idea seems to be for the various families in any one settlement to have as many interests as possible "in common." Thus, the houses usually inclose large spaces of open ground in the rear, and this ground is used by all tenants whose houses abut upon it. The "back fence" is becoming a thing of the past. In its stead one sees small wire boundaries a couple of feet above the ground. How this is going to work out where families of growing children are springing up remains to be seen. But still, people with copartnership ideals need not necessarily be retarded by such trifles as children.

Probably the man who knows more about town-planning than anyone else in England is Ebenezer Howard, founder of Garden City. There is a proposal on foot to send him to America to lecture before economic societies in St. Louis, Chicago and elsewhere.

When asked by the writer for his views, he made the following statement:

"The powers given to the local government board—of which Mr. Burns is the head—are very far-reaching, even to the extent of enabling it to frame provisions which may suspend parliamentary enactments. The Government may make provision for town-planning in all places where improvements are likely to be carried out, and local authorities are even empowered to purchase lands compulsorily for these purposes. Money may be borrowed by local authorities throughout the country for the purpose of building towns in accordance with the highest ideals.

London a Big Magnet.

"Wisely administered, this Government measure will usher in a new and splendid era. London, as it exists today, is an enormous magnet, and it might be said that the people who are attracted to this vast city and, indeed, to all other great cities, are human needles which are drawn almost irresistibly by this great magnetic force. What we propose to do in building towns that combine the advantage of the city with the country is practically to demagnetize cities like London.

"If, with our town-planning, we can make our new cities so attractive that they form opposition magnets to London, we have solved the problem. We are not building cities, but are making what we call 'Town Countries.'

The demagnetizing of London and other big cities by forming centers of counter-attraction all over England where men can pursue their lives under healthier conditions will be followed by some very remarkable results. In the first place, the ground values of London, so enormous to-day, will disappear. The spell of London will be broken and the great bubble burst. Today the life and earnings of Londoners are in pawn to the owners of its soil, who kindly permit them to live upon it at enormous cost.

"While the removal of a vast body of people from London to our town-planned cities will reduce the value of land in London the rates will fall on a smaller number of people, and even these people will ultimately be forced away from the metropolis. As the land of London is not owned by its inhabitants, but by private landlords, the consequence will be that the people cannot afford to live in the metropolis, and will go to our towns where they can have an interest in the property, which they will purchase from their municipalities. In time, the bondholders, who to-day are masters of London, will be unable to collect their interest, and, as the bottom will have already dropped out of land values by the migration of people, so will the rate collectors have to reduce their rates, or get none at all. The consequence will be that all people now dwelling in slums will have a large number of good houses at their disposal at cheap rents and lowered rates. And thus the problem of London's overcrowding will be solved."

HAYFIELD AND ITS MEMORIES OF DAYS LONG PAST.

BY J. STODDARD JOHNSTON.

MEMORIES of men and women prominent in by-gone generations cluster about "Hayfield," one of the most interesting of the old homesteads of Jefferson county, located four miles from Louisville, near the Bardstown pike.

The original tract of which this was a part was known as the Ward place, and belonged to David L. Ward, an uncle of the late Robert J. Ward, the father of Mrs. Grayson, who lived in the quaint old house on Sixth street, near St. Paul's church. In 1834 it was bought by Col. George Hancock, who named it Hayfield. It then comprised 600 or 700 acres. He sold off various tracts to Daniel Doup, Mortimer D. Robards, Hamilton Smith, Dr. Llewellyn Powell and Bishop Smith. The old Ward homestead was near the present handsome residence which was built by Col. Hancock. At the time of its erection it was, as it still is, one of the finest residences in the county, and was the seat of a profuse and elegant hospitality. Col. Hancock was a Virginian, whose father, of the same name, was a member of Congress in Washington's term. He came to Kentucky in 1818, was a model and progressive farmer, a gentleman of refined culture and strikingly handsome. His first wife was Eliza Croghan, of Locust Grove, at which place he lived a number of years, bringing many family servants from Virginia. His second wife, whom he married in 1834, and who survived him, was Mary H. Davidson, of New Orleans. He died in 1875 at Glencoony, his residence in this county, thirteen miles from Louisville, on the Bardstown pike, aged 77 years. He had no children, but reared several to whom he was a father, of whom the writer was one. He was fond of children, and his home was a favorite place for them to visit, his farm presenting all the attractions possible for boys, such as treading out wheat with horses, riding on hay-cocks, swimming, fighting bees' nests, and all the rural pastimes of the day which boys indulged in with negro boys of the same age for playmates.

One of Col. Hancock's sisters was Mrs. Caroline Preston, the mother of the late Gen. William Preston, who owned a large boundary of land between the Bardstown and Newburg roads, extending to the river front above the Galt House. His daughter, Henrietta, was the first wife of Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston, and died at Hayfield. Another sister was Mrs. Griffin, whose daughter, Eliza Griffin, was the second wife of Gen. Johnston, and who survived him, a resident of Los Angeles, Cal. Still a third sister was the wife of Gov. William Clark, of Missouri, who, with Meriwether Lewis, made the celebrated expedition to the Pacific in 1804-06.

I recall vividly the old-fashioned hospitality of Hayfield, with its dining and bright company, as well as the informal entertainments when it was the rendezvous for the goods people of the neighborhood and from the city. Gen. William Preston, Henry and John Churchill, Dudley Haydon, Andrew McKinley, John Thompson Gray and John I. Jacob, Jr., were among the beaux whom I remember, while there were many attractive belles. Hayfield was a great place for hunting. In those days wild pigeons in winter darkened the sky in their migration, and filled the woods in search of beechnuts and acorns. Partridges abounded, and guests from the city would form parties and hunt for several days at a time, I occasionally meet some of the well-preserved survivors of that day, for whom I used to carry the game and be rewarded by a shot now and then with a fence rail for a rest. Among other visitors whom I remember was a German friend of Gen. Preston named Leutze, a tall, athletic man, remarkable for his strength. It was said he could bend and plait a poker with his naked hands. He married a sister of the Hon. Oscar Turner, changed his name to Mansfield, and became a general in the Federal army during the war.

There was a terraced garden at Hayfield sloping toward Beargrass creek, with broad walks and well-kept avenues lined with roses, syringas, snowballs and calycanthus, making its rear a quiet and secluded spot. In those days dueling was in vogue, and I remember well seeing Gen. Preston and my uncle, Albert Sidney Johnston, practicing with dueling pistols just before the duel between Robert Wickliffe, known as the young Duke, and Cassius M. Clay, in which Johnston was Wickliffe's second.

It was from Hayfield that I first went to school, a barefooted boy, walking through woods full of heavy canebrakes, a mile and a half in the direction of Louisville, to the school taught by that good old Virginian, the Rev. Francis Thornton, and wife, where I afterward boarded for a year or two.

Judge J. J. Marshall, father of Gen. Humphrey Marshall, lived near there at Rondale, later known as the Tilden place, and his son John and beautiful daughter, Anna Maria, were scholars. William H. Pope, president of the Bank of Kentucky then, lived at the Bonnycastle place, and his son Wallace and daughter Cynthia attended the same school. Judge Speed, the father of the Hon. James Speed, Attorney General, lived near, but his boys were too old for this school. Dr. Jonathan Clark had a rope walk adjoining the Thornton place, and there were several attendants from his family. He had also fruit trees, and we regarded him as a veritable ogre in his resistance to our depredations, but twenty or thirty years later, when he was spending the cheerful days of an old man's life in Louisville, I found him one of the most genial companions I ever met. It was a mixed school of bright boys and pretty girls, and while most of them have joined the great majority, I not infrequently meet some of the survivors, and to me they are still bright and pretty, according to their sex. It was a good old-fashioned school, where the rod was the emblem of authority and where there was no school board to interfere with its hearty and wholesome use.

But I am straying away from Hayfield. I remember well when the stately brick house was built with its marble mantelpiece and other architectural adornments which brought visitors from far and near to see it. Its cost far exceeded the estimates, and the crash of 1837 was followed by a depression similar to that which we are now experiencing. In 1840 Gen. Hancock sold Hayfield for $35,000 to Gen. M. M. Rollins, who was from Illinois. Gen. Rollins is said to have made a considerable sum of money by negotiating for the State of Illinois an issue of stocks or bonds. In the early '40s, when the Oakland racecourse was in its prime, he was a breeder and runner of race horses. On one occasion a horse with which he expected to win was badly beaten, when Prentice, in the Journal, remarked that he had too much Illinois stock in him to contend with the Kentucky thoroughbreds.

Rollins sold it to Dr. C. W. Short, who for many years maintained it as a delightful home. Of its change of ownership until it became the property of Mr. George Danforth and then of Mrs. Robert Tyler and family, I have not kept the run. I have seen it but once in fifty years. The last time I was there was before the war, when I was a guest at the wedding of Dr. T. G. Richardson and a daughter of Dr. Short. The bride of that night perished in 1866 with several children on a burning Mississippi steamer. The groom, with whom I served as fellow staff officer on Gen. Bragg's staff, became an eminent professor and citizen of New Orleans, and died there a year or two ago.

Such are some of the memories which the name of Hayfield brings to mind, many bright and joyous, others turgid and sorrow and sadness, some of which have slumbered unrecalled until awakened by the thread of this narrative. And if to me who knew it so long ago and for comparatively so short a season, what volumes there must be opened to the large number of others who in the past half century have occupied its halls and chambers as residents or guests and enjoyed the fair views which everywhere greet the eye.

AMERICA'S INFLUENCE UPON A FAR-AWAY VILLAGE.

BY ANTONIO MANGANO.

(Mr. Mangano is a native of Italy who has spent most of his life in this country. He spent last summer in the southern hill towns of that country and made a particular study of the effect of emigration on Italy. This article tells of his visits to Toritto, a small town that has sent thousands to America.)

EMIGRANTS from the large cities of Italy are few, but in the capital towns are kept the records of population for the entire province. With this in mind, I stopped one day at Bari, a beautiful city on the eastern coast, the capital of the province of the same name. The modern buildings, fine public squares and general appearance of prosperity promised little of value for my purpose, and the surmise was correct. The people have good homes, business, chiefly manufacturing, is good, and there is little need for anyone to become an exile.

The secretary's statistics furnished the usual array of facts—hundreds departing from the hill towns, a high percentage of them young men. I closed the book.

"There is," said he, "a small town west of us that has literally sent thousands to America within a very few years, and as a result there are great changes. The town is being entirely rebuilt. No, it is some distance from the railroad but you can probably get a donkey or a diligence." It was as he said.

The first part of my journey was by train, through well-tilled country, which at this season was all aglow with the delicate pink and white blossoms of countless almond trees. Then a little, jolting stage stage carried me from the railroad to Toritto, my destination.

Toritto is not built upon a hill; it is in the heart of a fertile valley. Its streets, though characteristically dirty, frequently emerge in spacious open squares. The houses, placed together in a tenement-like row, are of stone, covered with white stucco, and the streets are paved with a light, glaring stone. Not a blade of grass is to be seen, only an occasional dwarfed tree with dull green leaves, which are a great relief to the eye. It was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, yet the streets were empty, so I stepped into the only cafe on the principal square.

Four sleepy-looking individuals seated about a round table sipping black coffee roused a little at the sight of a stranger, for anything American interests the dwellers of Toritto. I singled out the postman as the most wide-awake of the group and asked, "Where are all the people?" The entire town looked as lifeless as old Pompeii.

He took another slow sip of coffee before he replied: "At this hour the children are at school, the contadini, such as have not gone to America, are out in the fields; the men in offices and stores are taking their daily nap."

No strenuous life, nothing to be learned in haste here. So great has been the fever for emigration that there is not a single family of the 2,000 in the town that has not some relative in America.

But emigration is diminishing, and will of necessity be light for the next few years. Four thousand able-bodied workers have gone, and few of the remaining men can pass the physical examination or come up to the standard required for admission to the United States. The work in the fields and house-building is done by laborers who come from more crowded towns nearby. Many of these also catch the emigration fever and depart for America.

The effect of this remarkable exodus upon the town has been two-sided, like the effect upon the nation. The emigrants and their families have been benefited. There is no suffering in the town, and there are no beggars. Large amounts of money are coming in every year. Some men have returned with from 2,000 to 10,000 francs ($400 to $2,000), and between 700,000 and 800,000 francs ($140,000 and $160,000) are sent back through post-office orders each year. Some of this is left on deposit in the post-office, but most of it is being invested in real estate and in building an entirely new town outside of the old one. There are no less than 200 new cottages already built, and many more are in process of erection, all called "le case Americane," the American houses. Everything aspires to be American in Toritto. These houses are built either for the father or mother of the emigrant, or are awaiting his return, when he and his family expect to pass their days in comfort.

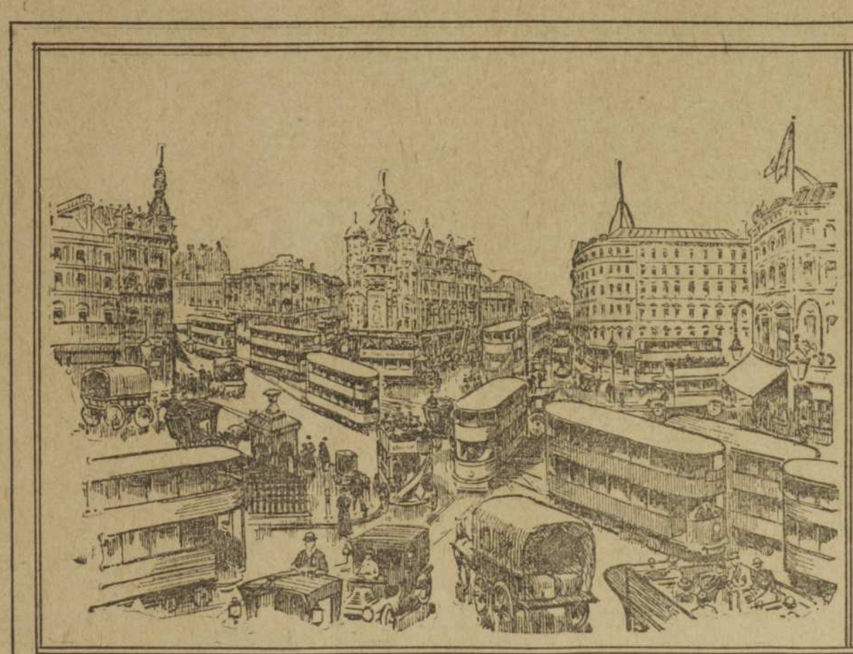

Unfortunately, the builders have no new ideas; the new houses are no improvement architecturally upon the old. They are all alike, one-story high, with a provision for a second story when needed. But they are larger, all provided with good-sized windows, and are finished more smoothly. They present a much neater appearance. There is no industrial awakening in the town, no apparent change in the mode of living. Except for the sums spent in the erection of new houses, paid to workmen from other towns, there is no money in circulation. Probably this is due partly to the fact that so few have as yet returned to remain in Toritto—barely thirty men with their families, all told.

One good influence which America is exerting upon Italy can be seen plainly in Toritto, the awakening desire for an education. The percentage of illiteracy was formerly very high, 90 per cent. Very few of the emigrants could either read or write. Now some have learned by dint of hard work in night schools, but all appreciate the value of schooling, and Toritto's schools are filled with children. The remarkable part of it is that Toritto has now a larger percentage of her population at school than any other town, or even city, in Italy, even the famous old university town of Turin, with its thousands of students, taking second place. But it must be remembered that Taritto's population now consists mainly of women and children. Young men are scarce, but boys and girls are in abundance.

I happened to be standing in the central piazza when the children were dismissed from school. The moment they spied me they all started on a run toward the stranger, crying "Un Americano, un Americano!" I tried to get a snapshot of them with my camera, but they kept so close to me and were so curious about the working of the "machina" that it was impossible until I discovered a flight of steps near by. From this vantage point I was able to get a fairly good picture of this group of future American citizens. As I turned to leave they ran after me, many shouting out English words, especially "Good-bye, Good-bye." I learned that here, as elsewhere in the small towns, the lower classes of the schools are crowded, but the children leave as soon as they have learned to read and write. Out of all this throng there were only six children in the sixth grade. America has done much for Toritto. Much more might be done but for the ignorance of the people. Perhaps it will be accomplished by the oncoming generation of bright, active children.

Busy London Crossings Where the Pedestrian Has His Troubles.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

BY HOLBORN TOWN HALL.

—[Daily Graphic.

"YOUR EXCHANGE contained lately an article headed 'Timely Meals for a Week.' It—and particularly your terse comment upon it—moves me to get into print if possible.

"I know that the table may be set for two for the amount named ($3.80 per week). Moreover, I can better it considerably.

"First, I would say that we are a family of three adults, and that all are 'hearty eaters.' We do not need to be 'tempted' when we come to the table. We like our food well-cooked and well-seasoned. I never 'skimp' my cookery, but use plenty of butter and milk.

"I go regularly on a certain day each week—usually on Friday—and buy my groceries. My order amounts to $2.50. (Two dollars and fifty cents.) I always pay cash down. This varies a few cents, of course, but I make a list of articles needed for that week and keep the prices down to that, knowing what these are. I don't mean to say that $2.50 spent in any old way will supply three people with food for a week, but judiciously expended it will, and it does!

"If your pantry is well-stocked, try it! If you are short of everything, you will either have to 'stock up,' or begin and work into this plan gradually. I have kept house on this basis for three years, and began at first to get 'stocked up.' For instance, spices, of all kinds, a half pound at a time, etc. One half pound of spice, except at pickling time, will last six months, and some kinds, such as cloves and allspice, longer. Have baking powder, condensed cream, raisins, citron, rice, barley, beans and peas always on hand. They do not deteriorate. Get one at a time, as you can, and replenish whatever you use up each week. You won't run out of everything at once.

"I keep a few things upon an 'emergency shelf,' and if I use from it, I fill it up again. For example—a can of mustard, sardines, salmon, corn, peas, a package of cheese wafers, a pound of soda biscuits, etc. You have no idea how many possibilities such a shelf affords for 'rounding out' a dinner or luncheon.

"I have never figured out the cost of each article and the whole amount down to a cent, as 'One Housemother' has, because I am always stocked up and could not tell exactly. But the total is what counts, and my total is $2.50 for groceries, 25 cents for milk and the same for incidentals. This gives $3 per week, against 'One Housemother's' $3.80.

"I wince, in anticipation, at your comment, but I am not as parsimonious as that sounds. There is a good deal in saving everything. Nothing goes to waste in my kitchen.

"I offer a sample of our weekly menu. It is plain, but wholesome. I include luncheons. The menu is bona fide. I'm carrying it out this week. Never a week passes in which we do not have somebody at our table. We rarely have more than two.

"I have a host of good and economical recipes that I'll send if you would like to have them.

"Miss C. (Detroit, Mich.)."

We shall be glad to have your recipes and to use them.

I am grateful to you for writing at length and so clearly. The more pleased because you have made so plain that the wayfaring housemother, though a novice, may not err in perceiving why there is such a discrepancy between estimates of current expenses supplied by you and the $4-a-week disciples and the woman who has a stated monthly stipend she cannot exceed, yet which will not set forth her table for the sums you name.

When I put my finger upon that emergency shelf, or what corresponds to it in other households, I designate the root of bitterness and the core of the apple of discord. It is an admirable adjunct to refrigerator and market basket. No home should be without it. I survey my well-stocked shelves with complacency. I buy sardines, canned tomatoes (we buy no other canned vegetables or fruits), spices, soaps, sugars and sealed packages of tea, crackers, cottolene, flavoring essences, mustard, vinegar and alcohol at wholesale prices and salad oil in half-gallon cans.

One compartment holds jellies, another pickles; two or three shelves are devoted to my homemade canned fruits.

For mine is a cupboard, not a shelf. I heartily applaud your system of reserves against the day of surprise or accident.

BUT (the printer has not capitals big enough to convey the importance of the monosyllable!)—BUT every dollar that goes to the "stocking up" you denote as of great value should be added to the sum paid for table expenses and accounted for in the total of each week's outlay. Say that I spend $5 on the first day of the month in replenishing the shelf, filling up the gaps made during the last four weeks. I should divide that sum by the number of weeks in the next month, adding a certain sum to each report of a weekly outlay. You may not use up all the gap-fillers; but you have spent that $5 for table expenses. And, unless John allows his wife an emergency fund, the money has gone for daily living. I do not wish that you or any other of my fellow-toilers in the domestic field should "wince" at an utterance of mine. Heaven forbid! I am here to help, not to hurt.

If I have smiled in affectionate amusement when one has appended to the painfully accurate "list of household expenses": "I had butter in the house"; or another: "We have a garden that helps us out"; or a third, "We keep a cow," or: "We raise our own chickens and don't have to buy eggs," yet is modestly proud of keeping expenses down, without thinking of computing what they would have been had the butter tub been empty, or if she had to buy vegetables or milk or eggs, I am not inclined to ridicule or to sneer at the oversight.

Here lies the truth: Every dollar spent in the purchase of household stores during the year should be equitably apportioned in making up weekly and monthly accounts. I have been sharply taken to task by wives made sore-hearted by the comments of husbands upon the failure to bring down table expenses to the standard set by the "$4-a-week cranks," as one goaded correspondent names them in a recent protest against the publication of "any more of those pestiferous reports of how ten people can live and fatten for what wouldn't keep a family of three like my husband from starving."

I believe honestly that unintentional omissions, such as I have pointed out, are responsible for most of the misunderstanding and uncomfortable feeling that have attended upon correspondence on this subject.

The emergency shelf is a capital thing, and "Miss C." has given us a capital letter. Her menu will be found below.

May I commend the list and the author's readable communication—given elsewhere on this page—introducing the menu to our practical housemothers?

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

BUT for the annoyance caused to certain respected correspondents by a single word in an article upon "Honey and Its Uses," published in the Exchange several weeks ago, I should find much amusement in the fact that that one disputable head has brought a swarm of protestants about my ears.

I was assured by more than one person who assumed to know all about honey and its uses—especially its abuses—that artificial comb is filled with manufactured honey and put upon the market. I did not animadvert upon the cheat. The head and front of my offending was the substitution of "parafine" for "wax." I should not waste time and space in explanation had not the flood (swarm) of corrective protests convinced me of the necessity of setting the matter straight to the best of my ability.

Noticing your article on honey and its uses, I would like to ask you where you can find comb honey manufactured by man, or the comb made of parafine and filled by the bees. There is a $1000 offer for one pound of comb honey made without the intervention of bees. If you would inquire into the facts of the case or visit a house where beekeepers' supplies are sold, you would find that the foundation of the story that comb honey is manufactured was started twenty-five years ago by Dr. Wyatt, at present the government chemist, who afterward retracted his story, but that retraction was not seen by one-tenth of the people that saw the statement at first, and it is still believed by many.

The story is probably founded on the fact that thin sheets of comb foundation made of pure beeswax are used as starters. The foundation is rolled so thin that it takes thirty-two sheets of the thin comb foundation and more of the extra thin, 4 inches by 16, to make one pound. Beekeepers place in the section box or box in which comb honey is started a strip the length of the box and one inch wide, and it is placed in the center of the box. This gives the bee a straight start and the box of honey when completed is even and well shaped.

In the frames used for extracting honey, the frames being large enough to hold ten pounds, a full sheet of the foundation is used of the heavier weight, and is firmly wired in, so that in extracting, the comb will not fall out. When the combs on these frames have been built out and the bees have filled them with honey, the frames are placed in an extracting machine and the honey thrown out by centrifugal force. The empty combs are then replaced in the hive to be refilled by the bees, and these are the combs that save the bees the work. C. H. A. (Chicago).

In regard to this artificial comb manufactured for the bees, we will say that the only comb manufactured up to this day is the comb foundation, or simply the base of the comb on which the bees build their cells. This comb foundation is oftentimes called "comb starter," as it is used principally to guide the bees and get them to build their comb straight in the little square boxes or sections.

This comb foundation is made of pure beeswax and not of paraffine. It is not a question of choice with the manufacturer as to whether to use beeswax or paraffine. The bees will not accept paraffine foundation or any other foundation, excepting that made of absolutely pure beeswax.

Besides, paraffine would not stand the summer heat inside of a beehive. Beeswax melts at 150 degrees Fahrenheit, while paraffine melts at a much lower temperature.

We are enclosing a small sample of this foundation, which is the only kind that has been made so far for the use of the bees. L. C. D. (Hamilton, Ill.).

In re-reading the foregoing communications, I incline to be glad, if not sorry, for the blundering word that was the innocent means of laying before our housemothers information upon an important subject that, I fancy, will be as new and full of interest to most of them as it is to me. The bees should be grateful to the ingenious coadjutors who save them the main part of the drudgery of their summer work. We will, henceforward, drop out from Dr. Watt's machine-made jingle

"How neat she spreads her wax," and congratulate the busy bee upon having no more to do than to

"Labor hard to store it well
With the sweet food she makes."

A Hint and a Question

I should like to tell "Mrs. W. B., of Lincoln, Ill." how to keep the bowl in the bathroom closet clean and white. I have a bottle of vinegar close at hand and every night I pour a little in the bowl and let it stand until morning. If the bowl be very brown, "Mrs. W. B." would better put a quart in for a beginning. It will clean it beautifully.

Please tell me who stands in the receiving line at a wedding reception, and in what order?

AMERICA (Washington, Iowa).

The mother, or the hostess, stands beside the bridegroom; the father, or host, by the bride. Beyond these on either side are the bridesmaids.

Preparing Hardwood Floors

For the benefit of correspondents who are getting ready to open country houses or to clean and make ready for summer use the homes in which they live all the year, I print admirable formulas for preparing hardwood floors, always a problem in the sum of housewifely duties.

For Staining Floors.

Raw linseed oil, one quart; turpentine, one pint; color to the desired shade with raw sienna or French ocher. Mix thoroughly and apply hot with a flat brush.

The floor must be perfectly dry. Rub in well and until the oil ceases to stain the rubbing material.

For any needful quantity of stain, mix above materials in the proportions herein given.

For Waxing Floors.

Beeswax, four ounces; paraffine, four ounces; turpentine, two quarts.

Heat to the melting point of the beeswax and paraffine and incorporate all the ingredients thoroughly. Apply hot.

Pour any remaining waxing compound into a suitable dish to cool. It will form a solid cake with which you may, from time to time, renew the surface by rubbing it on cold. Afterward, go all over the floor with the rubber. For ordinary renewal of the surface the ordinary paraffine is preferable.

How to Make the Floor-Rubber.

Prepare a piece of wood from four to six inches thick and about two feet square. Attach a handle to the middle at an angle of 45 degrees. The handle should be about 4½ feet long. Cover the rubber with two or three thicknesses of old blanket or carpet. The floor should be polished daily with the above after a good sweeping. J. E. W.

Lest the mention of daily polishing should dismay the busy woman, I slip in the intimation that the work is a fine gymnastic exercise for the half-grown boy or girl. Ten minutes of it will do as much to strengthen back and limbs as half an hour with the dumbbells.

Rice Patties and Fish

How would rice patties go with fish? We love it! Cheese, butter, pepper and salt go into the mixture.

A MERE READER (St. Louis, Mo.).

Rice, of itself, is an insipid accompaniment of fish. Dressed and seasoned as you suggest—in Sydney Smith's words, "animated" (see his salad)—it would not be amiss. In fact, it should go well.

"Aid and Comfort"

Members have been more than usually generous with "aid and comfort" this week. Witness the goodly array that follows:

Laxative Gems.

One quart of wheat bran; one pint of flour; one pint of sour milk; six tablespoonfuls of New Orleans molasses; one or two teaspoonfuls of baking soda. Be guided by the sourness of the milk.

Mix the soda with the molasses; add sour milk and flour. Bake in heated gem pans in a moderate oven.

This makes twelve gems.

Steamed Liver.

The most delicious way of cooking liver. Use calves' liver, cut over one-quarter inch thick. Wash the same; remove outer skin and arteries; place in graniteware or porcelain dish; sprinkle each layer lightly with salt and pepper; add a few very thin slices of bacon and put in steamer. Cook from one to three hours, as desired. Quite an amount of gravy will form in the pan. When steamed remove the bacon and put [illegible] it desired) into a hot frying pan and cook it carefully. Remove the bacon; then fry the liver a very little. Remove the liver from pan, put the gravy into the pan with all or part of the bacon fat; season with a little onion, if desired; thicken with blended flour. Pour gravy on platter; place liver thereon; decorate with the bacon and serve hot.

To Wash Comforters.

Melt one bar of white soap in one-half bucket of water. If the comforter is very soiled at edges, place the same on large laundry table or clean floor. Pour on part of the soap and rub gently with the flat of the hand, taking care not to disturb the cotton. Turn gently, if necessary, and repeat operation on the other side. Then fold the comforter lengthwise to fit the wringer; fold again crosswise to fit the washtub; put it in the tub with good strong suds, rubbing the layers as they can be reached with the flat of the hand. See that it is in a perfect fold, without twisting in the least. If this is done where there is hot running water, the water may be changed as often as desired. Wring and put on line on a windy day. If good cotton is used and crossed in the making, a comforter may be washed many times and be as fluffy as a new one. If not much soiled, the first rubbing may be omitted.

Soaking Clothes.

I think few people realize the help to laundress and the saving to garments in having them well sorted and soaked in strong suds the day before washing. We use one tub and three galvanized buckets for soaking clothes. We melt one bar of family soap and one-half bar of white soap for a large washing, and rub a little more on soiled places.

Remove the fruit stains from table linen with boiling water poured through them; put in a pail in clear water while attending to other things; then pour on fresh warm suds, leaving them in the pail. Then put sheets and underwear in tub with warm suds, towels in one corner. Put handkerchiefs in a bucket with cold suds; put bucket on the fire long enough to heat the water, but do not let it boil. Then put handkerchiefs through the wringer, and all disagreeable mucus will be gone. Then they can be placed with the rest of the clothes.

In the morning the suds may be removed, if the clothes are very soiled; if not, just add hot water to start the washing. I will not finish process on account of lack of space. I find so few know how to use soap in hard water. For two years a washboard was unknown in our laundry. Plenty of suds and rinsing will do the work.

Appreciation and Suggestion

I enjoyed reading your useful, sensible and interesting article, "Vegetables That Go With Certain Meats," and in which you ask your readers to suggest adjuncts to a fish dinner. Accordingly, I venture to suggest that, to my taste, spinach or any kind of greens, lettuce or coldslaw combine well with fish; also onions, cooked in any manner. A horseradish creamed gravy as a dressing is delicious with boiled, steamed or baked fish. I should imagine that stewed celery, creamed or with butter dressing, would be a good dish to serve with fish.

By the way, every scrap, however, unappetizing-looking, of a bunch of celery, when cooked helps to make a dainty dish alone, or is good put into the soup or gravy. No part of celery that is unspoiled should be thrown away.

Thank you for kind appreciation of our humble efforts to meet the needs of our members. Our California constituency counts for much in my estimate of the working capacity of our corporate body. I am always glad to hear from it.

Cooking Cabbage

DO YOU know that cabbage may be boiled without emitting that objectionable odor, which so often causes us to drop that vegetable from our menu?

The method is a very simple one, and well worth trying. Into the midst of the cabbage place a good-sized onion, which has been peeled; then on top place slices of stale bread, cut thick.

Do not add too much water to the cabbage at one time, or it will soak the bread and cause it to separate and mix with the cabbage, but, rather, add water from time to time in course of the boiling process.

Upon the back of the stove, where it will just simmer, set a small vessel containing vinegar and sugar.

The bread and onion absorb the odor, and the vinegar and sugar are a precaution to make assurance doubly sure.

Marion Harland's Recipes.

Seafoam Fudge.

[Kindness "M. B. E."]

PUT three cupfuls light brown sugar, a cup of water and a tablespoonful vinegar into a saucepan. Heat gradually to boiling, stirring only until the sugar is dissolved, then boil without stirring until a little forms a hard ball when tested in cold water. Remove at once from the fire, and when the syrup stops bubbling pour gradually into it the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, beating constantly. Continue beating until the mixture will hold its shape, then add a teaspoon of vanilla and a cupful of English walnuts or any other kind of nuts cut into small pieces. Drop in small rough-shaped piles on paraffine or buttered paper.

Salt-Rising Bread.

DISSOLVE a half teaspoonful of salt in two cups scalding water and beat in gradually enough flour to make a very soft dough. Beat for ten minutes, cover and set in a very warm place for eight hours. Now stir a teaspoonful of salt into a pint of lukewarm milk and enough flour to make a stiff batter before working it into the risen dough. Mix thoroughly, cover and set in a warm place to rise until very light. Turn into a wooden bowl and knead in enough flour to make the batter of the consistency of ordinary bread dough. Make into loaves and set these to rise, and when light bake.

* * *

Bohemian Butter Cake.

[Kindness "A. L. H."]

DISSOLVE one cake dry yeast in one cup lukewarm milk, then add another cup warm milk, one and a half cups flour, half a teaspoon salt and beat to a smooth batter. Let rise till very light. Cream together one-half cup butter (lard or butterine will do for the economically minded), one-half cup sugar, two eggs and the grated rind of a lemon. Add this to the sponge and enough flour to make a soft dough. Let rise again to double its size, divide into three parts; handle as little as possible. Put each part in a buttered pan and let rise again to double its size. Pour over each two tablespoonfuls melted butter, sprinkle with three tablespoonfuls sugar and a little cinnamon. Bake twenty-five minutes.

Potato Salad.

TO 12 cold boiled potatoes cut in dice add a stalk of celery cut in small pieces, a small raw onion chopped fine. Make dressing of two tablespoons vinegar, one egg, one tablespoon flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon ground mustard. Let come to a boil, then add one pint sour cream, pour the dressing over it and mix thoroughly. Line a dish with lettuce leaves, fill in with salad, garnish with cold boiled eggs cut in slices.

* * *

Boiled Sauerkraut.

[Kindness "N. M. W."]

PUT pork spare ribs in boiler, boil slowly three hours. After boiling one hour add sauerkraut, slice potatoes and boil with the rest about three-quarters of an hour. If the sauerkraut is very sour wash before boiling. Ten minutes before taking from stove add a few dumplings.

* * *

Bran Bread.

[Kindness "L. M. J."]

ONE quart clean bran, one pint white flour, one pint sweet milk, six ounces New Orleans molasses, one egg, two teaspoons bicarbonate soda. Bake in gem tins.

* * *

Bran Gems.

[Kindness of Mrs. L. L. C.]

BUTTER the size of an egg. Three-quarters cup brown sugar, or one-half cup white sugar. One cup sour milk. One cup flour. Two cups bran. A little salt. Teaspoonful soda dissolved in warm water. One cup currants. Bake about twenty minutes.

* * *

Bearnaise Sauce.

BEAT the yolks of two eggs very light, put into a round-bottomed saucepan and set in boiling water. Stir into it a few drops at a time three tablespoons salad oil, beating as you stir, then add gradually, the same quantity of boiling water, next one tablespoon lemon juice, a dash of cayenne and salt.

* * *

Almond Torte.

[Kindness "S. L."]

ONE-HALF pound almonds, one-half pound sugar, one-half pound butter, one-half pound flour, yolks of six eggs, two teaspoons cinnamon and cloves, two teaspoons vanilla. Chop almonds very fine, then beat together butter and sugar, add yolks, then flour, almonds and spices. Bake in jelly cake tins in a slow oven for an hour. Put jelly between layers. The cake is better if made two days before serving.

* * *

Quince Honey Again.

[Kindness of Mrs. "D. I. W."]

PARE and grate three large quinces, add three pounds white sugar and one quart cold water and boil twenty minutes. Seal while hot.

* * *

Fried Steak.

[Kindness Mrs. "V. V. C."]

I HAVE seen so many recipes for stewed steak, I am tempted to give mine for fried steak, which always proves a success. Into two pounds of round or other cut, rub salt to taste and a light teaspoon of soda. Let it lie overnight for breakfast, then, before frying, rinse in two waters, dip in flour and fry in boiling fat until well done. Serve at once either with or without gravy poured over it.

* * *

Graham Bread.

[Kindness "M. C. J."]

DISSOLVE one-half cake of yeast into a pint of lukewarm water, add a pinch of salt and enough wheat flour to make a batter like cake. Set it to rise, and when light add a tablespoon of sugar and one of shortening, then enough graham flour to make it fit to be kneaded into a loaf. Put in a little baking powder and let it rise again. When light, bake in a slow oven about half to three-quarters of an hour, according to size of loaf.

ORANGE MARMALADE.

This is the best time of the year for making orange marmalade, because the navel oranges are most delicious now. Select oranges rich in color, and with a juicy peel. Slice thirteen oranges very thin without peeling, but discard the ends, the white string in the middle and the navel. To these add seven pints of cold water and let them stand for twenty-four hours. Then boil for an hour. Add seven pints of sugar and boil one hour longer, then add the juice of three lemons and boil for ten minutes. If one desires the marmalade to be a stiff jelly, the first cooking should be continued until the water is boiled out. This oft-tried recipe has never failed to give good results.

CORRESPONDENCE PAGE OF FASHIONS & BEAUTY

The Fine Art of Departing.

WHEN I told an intimate friend that I thought every book on etiquette should contain one entire chapter devoted to the graceful and little practiced art of leaving a house gracefully, she was greatly amused.

"Why, everyone knows how to leave a tea or dinner or dance. You just say something that everyone else says to your hostess about what a splendid time you have had, and then you run along and say the same thing to another hostess."

Now, that is a very lucid and distinctly feminine explanation or description of the trick, so to speak, but unfortunately its weakness lies in the last phrase. So few persons really know enough to "run along." They linger and make their departure a period of agony to everyone concerned.

For instance, I paid a Sunday afternoon call not long ago at the home of a woman with whom I am on most friendly terms. I arrived just as other callers had arisen to depart, a pretty girl and her fiance.

And simultaneously with my arrival came the family parrot, a creature of amazing vocabulary and violent temper. My hostess had arisen to speed the parting guests and receive the new arrival. The young lady and her fiance were standing and so was I. The psychological moment for their departure had come—when, as I remarked before, the parrot walked stolidly in.

Immediately the man began to tease the bird, greatly to the annoyance of my hostess, though she held herself admirably in hand. Every minute or so the girl would say something like "Come, Dick, we must be going," and my hostess tried tactfully to break up the conversation between the angry bird and thoughtless man.

And it ended in our standing there, the three women of us, changing from one foot to the other, the girl fumbling at her gloves in an agony of embarrassment while that young man amused himself with the parrot for eighteen long, weary minutes. My hostess and I marked the time on the clock.

When they had gone, we two women looked at each other, sighed and dropped gratefully into easy chairs.

"Do you think she can ever make anything of that man socially?" asked my hostess, and then we both laughed.

Again, I was invited to dine with friends who live at an apartment hotel, where dinner is served on Sunday evenings from 6 to 8. After dinner we were going to an organ recital, so we had planned to go to the dining-room directly the doors opened at 6.

At fifteen minutes to 6, a young woman arrived on the scene, and after a few minutes was urged by our hostess to remove her wraps and remain for dinner. She declined, saying she had another call to pay. Quite tactfully, a few minutes later, our hostess gave forth the information that we were going to Prof. Blank's recital.

Naturally, if the girl had only come to call formally, she would have taken the hint, for the church was at some distance from the hotel. If she wished to accept the invitation to remain to dinner she would have accepted it at once. But she did neither. She sat and talked interminably while those of us who had begged recital tickets sat in nervous suspense.

Each member of the family as he or she appeared in the living rooom urged the girl to take off her wraps and have dinner, but, no, she must be going very soon. It was twenty minutes past 6 when she left. We got into the Sunday night crush in the dining-room, reached the church so late that we were seated far back under the gallery, and missed the opening number. And all because a thoughtless girl had not mastered the fine art of taking her departure.

There is nothing more ill-bred than outstaying your welcome and I am quite sure that many young people do this simply because they do not know when or how to take their departure.

Never say you are going until you are ready to start. Do not rise to make your adieu and then remember somthing you want to talk about and keep your hostess standing indefinitely. Once you decide to go, go! Say good afternoon or good evening to others in the room, go directly to the hall, gather up any wraps you may have left there, and depart at once. Do not expect your hostess to accompany you into the hall and stand and chat interminably with you, leaving other guests in the parlor. Once you have said "good-bye," her place is with those who are still her guests.

If you stumble upon a dinner party, when you are making a late Sunday afternoon call, do not apologize. Simply make a very formal call of ten minutes or fifteen at the most and depart, as if you had never intended to stop longer. A formal call should never run less than ten minutes or more than thirty.

If other guests arrive just as you meant to depart, do not embarrass your hostess by going with her to the door as she starts to receive the newcomers. Give her time to receive them and introduce you, then after a few conventional remarks, you can take your departure and leave the newcomers to the attention of your hostess. Never try to outsit a new arrival. It looks as if you were afraid you might miss something.

The taciful man or woman always recognizes when the call is made at an inopportune moment and times her departure accordingly. However gracious a hostess may be, a new arrival can damp it in the very atmosphere that her call should be shortened.

—PRUDENCE STANDISH.

Tea Punch.—The following recipe will make twelve large glasses. Squeeze the juice of six large lemons and grate the rind of three or four of them. Add to this juice three quarts of water and brown sugar enough to suit individual taste. Let it come to a boil. In a large pitcher put ten teaspoonfuls of Ceylon tea, pour the boiling lemonade over it, and let it steep for ten or fifteen minutesutes. Then strain and let it get perfectly cold. When ready to serve, fill glasses with cracked ice and into each glass put a thin slice of orange and a tiny sprig of mint.

Stunning Lines In Linen and Lawn Costumes.

FIG. B—SHIRT WAIST SUIT OF ECRU LINEN AND WHITE BRAID.

TUB costumes this season go to extremes. Either they are extremely tailored and severe, or extremely ornate and fluffy. For street, morning and athletic purposes, tailored lines appear, with trimming applied as to silk or cloth gowns. In the typical lingerie frock, princess lines prevail with such masses of insertion, both embroidery and lace, that the term "tub frock" seems almost a misnomer, and the services of a dry-cleaner are more necessary than those of a laundress.

While many costumes of plain linen and lawn are noted for both morning and afternoon wear, some stunning effects in fine hair line stripes, dots and bordered goods are also displayed. The woman who invests in a bordered material must expect to patronize the dry-cleaner when her suit needs refreshing. Very few of the tinted borders will really wash. The exception, however, is the white fabric with a single tone striped border, and vice-versa, the single tone fabric with white border.

For instance, in linen you will find a white ground with a border of navy blue in bands of graduated width, or in pale blue lawn you will see a border made of diamonds in pure white. These bordered tub fabrics come in dress lengths of twelve yards each and the border appears about 46 or 47 inches apart, which for a short woman will admit of a princess effect.

The preferred trimming for tailored linen suits is braid and buttons. For dressy afternoon wear, coats and entire suits are inset with quantities of heavy lace to which fancy wash braids and buttons are added.

Wash braids come in many styles, from the narrow soutache and flat Hercules braids to marvelous combinations of cotton or linen braid and lace, the latter set on the edge or in medallion, surrounded by braid.

Buttons for trimming may be made from molds covered simply with linen like the costume, or the linen may be criss-crossed with narrow braid, or the buttons may be crocheted or embroidered. For very fussy frocks you see buttons covered with crocheting or lace or embroidery and then finished all the way round with a flat frilling or plaiting of Val lace.

Pink and blue in half a dozen shades, lavender, green and yellow are shown in linens for suits, but far smarter this season are the soft shades of gray and tan made up with heavy white lace or bias bands of self tone or even white.

For tailored wash suits, plaited skirts, either with or without the yoke, according to the height of the wearer, and cutaway coats are shown. In more fussy costumes, the looser Louis coat is offered, with the circular skirt.

The very smart coat suit shown today is in Copenhagen blue linen trimmed with bands in which braid and embroidery are combined. The skirt is cut on a circular pattern with a seam, covered by a band of the trimming, down the front. For the very short girl, the trimming around the skirt should be dropped to its foot, and it also outlines the entire jacket. In the model shown this trimming was of the linen braided in self-tone, while the embroidery; tiny conventional figures inserted between the braided circles, was in a peculiar shade which was neither amber nor coral pink, yet suggested both. To make this costume even more dressy, white linen could be employed, and the banding should then be of heavy imitation Irish lace, which, by the way, washes excellently.

FIG. C—SHIRT WAIST WITH BRETELLES IN BLUE AND WHITE ZEPHYR GINGHAM.

FIG. E—POPULAR DUTCH NECK FOR SUMMER DINNERS AND DANCES.

The shirt waist suit is extremely natty and shows how a little of the popular braiding can be used to relieve an otherwise severe costume. This skirt of ecru lawn was laid in plaits stitched very flatly over the hips with many rows of stitching above the hem. The shirt waist was laid in broad tucks front and back, with a double box plait down the front. The shaped collar, cuffs of the plain shirt sleeve, the double box plait, and the girdle, were all braided in a simple but effective design in white washable soutache. The braiding on the box plait was finished with two ornaments of white mercerized floss which will wash if developed in pale gray with white braid or any of the more delicate tones, like blue, pink or lavender. Lawn, linen, batiste, zephyr ginghams, percales, almost any of the tub fabrics will work out well in this design.

FIG. D—STRAPPINGS OF INSERTION AND LACE EDGING.

FIG. A—SUIT IN COPENHAGEN BLUE LINEN WITH EMBROIDERED AND BRAIDED BANDS.

A remarkable feature of the present season is the use of bretelles in wash fabrics, and while this means work for the expert laundress, it certainly adds to the effectiveness of the average wash costume for the slender girl. In figure C. will be seen a pretty development of the bretelle design in a checked gingham. The bretelles can either be sewed tightly under the outside tucks of the blouse or they can be simply basted into place and removed when the waist is laundered. The latter is by far the best method, as the iron's point can then get well into the gathers of the sleeves. The model in which this pattern was employed combined greyish-blue and white check, with only a hair-line of the white, and trimmings of plain blue with large buttons covered with the plain blue. It could also be made in white, with ruffles of lace or embroidery and lace-covered buttons.

Figure D shows the possibilities of shoulder straps in wash materials and was prettily developed in white batiste with narrow Cluny and Val. lace. The shoulder straps can be made from odd bits of lace or embroidery or tucking edged with lace.

Figure E shows a type of waist of which every summer girl should have at least one in her wardrobe. The simple Dutch neck emphasized by square insets of lace is the daintiest of finishings for a summer dinner blouse. This blouse, and a skirt trimmed with deep tucks and insertion, will make a costume quite suitable for the summer night dinner or dance.

Care of Hands In Summer.

VERY often it is the things that we do not do, rather than those we do, which mar a pretty hand. This particularly true of the girl who lives a sheltered life all winter and goes to a summer resort for the warm months. The city girl thinks it smart to drive a team of farm horses without gloves, and when her hands are blistered she runs to the local druggist for a patented cure. It would be much easier to don an old pair of large gloves and protect the hands rather than experiment with unknown lotions.

One of the most baneful practices among young girls is the indiscriminate use of highly-scented soaps. In nine cases out of ten these eat up the natural oil of the skin and leave it rough. Use only warm water, and soft water, with a plain, unscented pure soap. If the water is hard, add a few drops of benzoin to it. If the hands are stained use lemon juice. Do not, as I saw a young girl do not long since, take a bottle of peroxide of hydrogen from the shelf and literally pour it over the tips of her fingers to remove berry stains. Within the next two or three days most of her finger nails broke off.

If soap does not agree with your hands, try using the following almond meal in its place. It will tend to keep the skin soft and white:

Bitter almond meal, 6 ounces; orris root (powdered), 4 ounces; wheat flour, 4 ounces; white castile soap (powdered), 1 ounce; borax (powdered), 1 ounce; oil of bergamot, 2 drachams; extract of musk, 1 drachm; oil of bitter almonds, 10 drops.

Mix all the powders thoroughly and sift them before adding the perfumes. Stir them in and sift a second time. Keep in close-shut jars. It is convenient to keep a small quantity on the washstand in a jar with a perforated top so that the powder can be shaken out upon the hand or cloth when used.

Certain physical canditions cause abnormal perspiration in the hands, making them cold to the touch and keeping them moist, thereby ruining gloves of any sort. The following lotion is very efficacious for arresting this condition. It can also be used on the face in warm weather to absorb excessive greasiness:

Rosewater, 6 ounces; elder-flower water, 2 ounces; simple tincture of benzoin, ½ ounce; tannic acid, 10 grains. This lotion should be well rubbed into the skin, and if gloves are to be put on immediately, it is well to powder the hands with talcum.

Mingled with the delights of picking wild flowers in the woods, is the danger of coming in contact with poison ivy. This obnoxious vine grows in the most unexpected places, and to some skins its contact means weeks of suffering. If treatment is given immediately the inflammation can ofttimes be allayed. As soon as you reach home, bathe the affected parts in a solution of one quart of lime water in which has been dissolved a teaspoon of soda. If the pain is intense, add a few drops of laudanum. If you are far from a drug store and cannot get these remedies, bathing with strong buttermilk is sometimes very efficacious, and good results have been obtained from rubbing fresh and very thick cream into the skin. But all of these remedies should not be applied at once.

The girl who has abused her hands by digging in the garden, or by helping with the housecleaning, and has neglected that much-needed protection of an old pair of gloves while at such work, will need a paste which will work a hurried cure. This paste is invaluable to the girl in business who has just two weeks' vacation and whose hands have become roughened from climbing, driving, picking wild flowers. It will tend to whiten and soften the hands with the least possible delay. At night literally spread the hands with a thick coating of this cream, then draw on a pair of old gloves several sizes too large, and in the morning wash in warm water and pure white soap.

Myrrh, 1 ounce; honey, 5 ounces; yellow wax, 2 ounces; rosewater, 6 ounces. Melt the wax in a double boiler over a very slow fire, but do not let it boil, just melt; now add the myrrh, which must be in powdered form. Beat these two ingredients together thoroughly, then stir in the honey and the rosewater. Then, drop by drop, add enough glycerin to make a "spreadable paste," heating the mixture constantly.

Tanning, sunburn and freckles are much easier to prevent than to cure. If the skin of your hands is sensitive, rub it with cold cream before you start outdoors, or wear a thin silk glove. There is no heat in silk gloves, and if worn sufficiently large, they leave the hand quite as free as if it were bare. The simple home remedies for tanning and sunburn are quite as good as the patented articles, put up under fancy names and sold for fancier prices. Washing the hands in fresh buttermilk is very good.

American women are generally in such a hurry that few of them really take time to dry their hands properly. If they would not put the towel on the rack until they were perfectly sure that their hands were absolutely dry, as a nation they would have prettier hands and softer skin the whole year round.

NEW WAY TO KILL ROACHES.

A florist has discovered by accident a new way to catch cockroaches, says the Chicago News. A pint fruit jar containing a scrap of bacon happened to be left over night in one of his greenhouses. Next morning a dozen or more cockroaches were vainly trying to climb the slippery sides of the glass jar. The florist has succeeded in ridding his establishment of these repulsive creatures, which formerly ate such high-priced plants as orchids and gardenias.

It is necessary to paste a piece of paper on the outside of the jar so that the insects can get sufficient foothold to climb up into the trap. In the original case the label of the manufacturer supplied this need.

Ribbons and Their Uses On All Sorts of Dainty Attire.

DAINTY ribbon garnitures seem particularly suited to the spring season, and this year they are being used in charming variety.

Faille ribbon has displaced taffetas for all purposes where a plain color is needed, while in fancy ribbons the pompadour effects remain in high favor. The tinsel ribbons which were popular during the winter are now passe, and, barring the pompadour designs, the only fancy patterns shown are two weaves in the same color, perhaps a satin polka dot on a faille ground, or vice-versa. Little or no moire ribbon is being used, but even on lightweight summer frocks, touches of the effective velvet ribbon may be seen.

Enormous quantities of soft faille ribbon are used for millinery purposes, and eight yards are considered none too much for winding round the crown and making one of the new big bows. At the beginning of the season, flowers almost crowded ribbons out of the millinery field, but the reaction in favor of bows has been pronounced. The bows are either long loops and many of them, or they are arranged in fat, thick choux or rose effects, with short, sharply notched ends behind the choux.

For Panama hats come wondrous ribbon scarfs in soft, Oriental colorings, or the pliable Italian or Roman striped scarfs and ribbons may be used for this purpose.

While the lingerie or net tie is much used with the linen collar, for summer wear, and especially with the broad, turn-over collars affected by the out-door girl, the soft ribbon tie or scarf will be much used. A very beautiful quality for this purpose is a soft grosgrain with a satin edge of about an eighth to a quarter of an inch in self-tone. The ribbon thus used is not tied in a bow, but in a knot or four-in-hand effect.

Ribbons for sashes are as soft as the looms can make them, and most of this season's sashes are worn at the side or in the front as garnitures of the empire gown. Often the sash is laid in folds and tacked into place, like a high girdle all round the waist, then under the left side, it is drawn up high, fastened in a knot or chou, and falls, soft and sweeping, to the foot of the skirt. In net dresses these sashes are made of net and ribbon in alternate stripes with an edging of net or lace all the way round. Beautiful fichus are also made from shirred net or chiffon, alternating with soft ribbon, each strip about an inch and a half or two inches wide.

One of the smartest of extra coats seen in a New York shop this spring was made from eight-inch pompadour ribbon, alternating with strips of filet lace. Such coats are worn with thin lingerie dresses, and are most effective when cut on Louis designs, quite loose and straight of line.

Ribbons in many graduated widths are used for trimming the hems of skirts, to simulate borders. For instance, on a stunning little suit of brown and cream checked silk, the trimmings consisted of seven rows of brown ribbon velvet, starting about an inch and a half in width at the bottom and grading up to No. 2 at the top. Last season, the ribbons were applied in designs, particularly the Greek key design, but this season they are applied in one of two ways, either running straight around the skirt in graduated widths, or up and down, forming points or diamonds.

Ribbon garnitures for the hair are long and sweeping, suggesting an osprey, and this means clever wiring. One of the handsomest new hair ornaments is made from black velvet ribbon, cut and wired in perfect imitation of the long pheasant tail feathers, with a rhinestone ornament where the long bows and ends meet.

The flat, plaited ruffs of maline or lace are in once more, and these are fastened with long loops and ends of soft ribbons. Also faille ribbon is made into flat rose plaitings, finished with long loops and ends and worn so that the latter fall backward over the left shoulder.

Some exquisite effects in bed jackets, fancy aprons and petticoats are shown with wash ribbon playing an important part. For wear under a chiffon or net gown, come wonderful petticoats with flounces of point desprit, decorated with narrow ribbons. If you have a white silk drop skirt which is a trifle passe, make for it a flounce of the net, with white ribbons half or three-quarters of an inch wide, applied in tiny ruchings. Circles at regular intervals, or interlacing diamonds or bow knots, all done in the fine ruching, are the simplest and most effective patterns. These ruffles can be bought ready made and they cost from $12.50 up. A deft-fingered girl can make herself a "dream" for a third of the price. Sometimes, within the circles of ruching will be seen small artificial daisies such as are used for millinery purposes, carefully applied with buttonhole stitcher.

Dainty aprons and matinees are made from alternate strips of wash ribbon and Val lace. For the girl who wears flannel petticoats the year round, there is nothing prettier than a ruffle of wash silk and lace, which, by the way, does not cling to the form as flannel does.

Table Linens Grow Prettier In Design and Cheaper.

COMPARING the table linen of today with that of ten or twelve years ago, there is a marked improvement in design. For years we have had very fine linens in our shops, and there have been many beautiful designs, but not within the reach of the moderate purse. So much progress has been made by manufacturers that now prices are lower and designs are better, says a writer in the New York Evening Post. Of course, there are certain pattern cloths of foreign make that can never be cheap. It is the linens of medium quality, weight and price, but of fine design, that will appeal to the average housekeeper. Some think that the linen made in Ireland has taken the place of that manufactured in other countries. It is good, cheap and often very handsome, and will last for many years, provided, of course, it is not ruined by chemicals in laundering. Designs in all household linens are steadily gaining in artistic merit. The old-time cloth that swept the floor is no longer in fashion.

The best style of table linen for a luncheon is a centerpiece and individual doilies to match. There are, however, beautiful covers, made especially for luncheons, but a regular dinner cloth, no matter how simple or magnificent, should never be used. The centerpiece is only large enough to cover the middle of the table, and the doilies come in different sizes. There are those for plates, two sizes for goblets, those for water and wine, others for different dishes, and still others for the finger bowls. Linen sets with scalloped edges are very durable and practical. Filet lace is handsome, but expensive. The lace is joined with fine linen squares, in long bands or circular. The doilies are entirely of lace. Renaissance is still used for the table.

Japanese and Chinese lunch cloths are liked by many, but the plain white embroidery is more desirable than that into which blue is introduced. These cloths are round, and their beautiful patterns of chrysanthemum, aster or iris nearly cover the body of the cloths and reach to the edges. Some of the centerpieces show artistic introduction of colors. Even the best colored embroideries will fade in time, and their use demands a judicious selection which will harmonize with the table china.

Round centerpieces are popular at present, owing to the general use of round tables, and charming patterns are shown with borders of Maltese, Cluny and Bohemian lace. Then there is shown the beautiful lace from the Azores, known as Fayal. No more lovely handiwork can be seen than this lace, whose designs are executed by darning in the pattern after the threads have been drawn. Some beautiful towels with borders of Fayal lace were recently seen. The purchaser only paid $1.50 apiece for the towels at Fayal.

Luncheon napkins thirteen inches square of Madeira linen, hand-embroidered, can be bought from $7 per dozen up. The linen is very fine, and in their boxes the napkins resemble hand-embroidered handkerchiefs. As some have a buttonhole edge, they would be a practicable and attractive piece of work for the summer piazza, when the cost of the napkins could be considerably reduced if one can embroider well.

A well-known authority says that table linen should never be starched. It is a common mistake that many housekeepers make, and nothing so detracts from the appearance and life of handsome linen as starch. "Elbow grease" is all that one needs to make the proper kind of linen stiff. It should be ironed damp, to get the fine sheen so characteristic of well-laundered linen. If it is ironed when it is dry, or nearly so, it gets fuzzy.

Always darn table damask, as well as various other materials, with a ravelling from the cloth. If there is a hole, put under it a piece of the same damask, matching the pattern as near as possible. Then darn very carefully backward and forward with the ravelling. If the work is done right the darn will hardly be noticeable after laundering.

Mrs. Bryce Noted As Salad Maker.

TO the example set by Mrs. Bryce, wife of the British Ambassador, may be due the general introduction of an interesting fashion from the British dinner table in this country. This is the compounding of salad dressing by the hostess, the trick always being turned without conversation being permitted to lag for a moment. So interested have become many women in Washington society in Mrs. Bryce's handiness with the salad dressing bowl and the superior flavor of her mixing, that they have learned all the secrets of the performance from Mrs. Bryce herself, says the New York Press. However, here is a hint for the hostess content to learn at second-hand. A large bowl half filled with majolica is placed before Mrs. Bryce. In another and smaller bowl placed at her right hand a bit of garlic and several herbs are crushed. A piece of square ice is brought on a crystal platter, and this is slipped into the smaller bowl. Mrs. Bryce then pours about four tablespoonfuls of oil on the ice, permitting it to trickle down on the garlic and herbs. When the oil has all trickled off the ice is lifted out, and Mrs. Bryce adds dry mustard, salt, pepper and vinegar, and gently stirs the whole for three minutes.

Howling Melodrama Called a "Problem Play."

The Conventional Western Characters Are Introduced Again At Luna Park—Gossip of the "Summer Shows" In New York.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

NEW YORK, May 22.—The genuine sky was blue, clouded with white, as though you looked up at it from Arizona, and a full acre of framed-up canvas gulches and ridges were painted in grays, yellows and other hues of aridity to look like miles and miles of landscapes in the Rockies, while in the foreground the shacks of a pioneer settlement bordered a creek of actually wet water. Half a hundred Yankee cowboys and half as many Mexican greasers rode on horseback from the 'way off distances by winding trails down into the valley to carouse. One girl who though pretty, wouldn't be molested in Broadway, made an ado among the men there. She came on a broncho to the post-office for letters, and having got some, she started for her home ranch at a gallop. All the Yankees cheered her merrily as she sped away, while the Mexicans leered wickedly, and one malignant greaser struck spurs in pursuit. He overtook her, demanded a kiss, which she wouldn't give, jerked her from her saddle to his and rode off behind a hill. There wasn't more than time for two or three forced smacks before she reappeared on nimbly running feet, climbed to her horse's waiting back, fell limp across the saddle and was carried back by the beast to the settlement. That filled the first quarter hour of the new melodrama of "The Man Hunt."

"If anyone wants to quit at any time during this play," a ballyhoo bawler at the entrance had said, "his money will be returned to him, and besides that, the management will pay his fare to the nearest hospital, insane asylum or cemetery that he may choose."

All of us stayed another quarter of an hour, and got the worth of our quarter of a dollar by watching the flight of the girl-stealer, the pursuit of him by the Yankee cowboys, the defense of him by the Mexicans, and the up, down and roundabout the rods of peaks that looked like miles. The hunt ended in a capture.

"Can I quit now and get my two bits back?" was a boy's question.

"Sure," was an usher's reply.

The lad mused a moment. "Guess I'll stay," was his decision, "and see what's coming to the greaser."

"If the Man Hunt" was meant for a problem play, to deliver its anti-kissing moral fresh every hour that an audience gathers to hear it, it should hit hard the evil wrought by the soul-kiss, dream-waltz, love-song comedies of the past season; for this abductor of an unwilling kissee is fastened to a stake, heaped around with resinous boughs, drenched with kerosene and destroyed in a big bonfire. It looked like that, anyway; yet I don't suppose they use up an actor at every performance.

Broncho Busting.

That short and very thick western melodrama was the big new thing in the reopening of the Luna Park section of Coney Island. Dreamland, the second assemblage of summer shows, was ready with Bostock's subdued beasts only; while the third, Steeplechase Park, had nothing unfamiliar to offer except broncho riding by cowboys who were paid to do it and visitors who paid to do it; and the chance to mingle with the plainsmen on horseback seemed to delight boys especially. The fun was increased by putting hired riders on bucking bronchos, or even letting amateurs risk their bones on them to amuse the crowd. Showmen at Coney are quick to take a trip from the news of the day. The journals of Sunday morning gave accounts of the excitement in London and Paris by women who rode in the fashionable parkways on horseback astride, yet wearing gowns that, until they mounted their horses, were close-fitting in the Empress style, but on getting seated man-fashion, split front and rear, showing legs from feet to knees in embroidered satin boots. By the middle of the afternoon four handsome girls were astride of horses in Steeplechase Park in skirts hastily made over to conform with the foreign model. Which proves the alertness of the Coney showmen to discover novelty. I traversed Coney's main street, or Broadway, and its side street, or Bowery, with their quarter-mile each of pleasure places, from big spectacles to little fakes, without finding more than slight variations from last year; but many placards promised astonishments for a week later, and so you may count on a letter next Sunday describing new ingenuities that will be duplicated quickly at the suburban resorts through the country. Imitation is the opposition that is the life of the park show business.

Not all, nor half, of the stage shows in New York between now and September will go outdoors, even though the roof gardens and waterside resorts are to be attractive. Many plays that look breezy and sound airy, will be offered in the theaters, and I think that, by another year, many throughout the land will follow the example of New York, Chicago and San Francisco in making no difference between summer and winter.

The week's birth of a play meant to live all summer in the theater bearing the name of Lester Wallack is lightly musical, and contains naught to make the ghost of the modish old beau of an actor-manager stalk the rialto.

"The Gay Musician" hasn't one Tenderloin word, or note, although its theme is locally theatrical, and its principal three young women are actresses. That is its salient oddity—three roles with equal chances for Sophie Brandt, Amelia Stone and Olga von Hartzfeld to sing, dance and grin for the witchery prize. They are a graceful and melodious trio, and the management won't have to nag them, as the competition will keep them keen and zestful. The question of their relative salaries was raised between acts on the opening night. The puzzle of that technical award of superiority, the star dressing room had been solved by tossing a coin. Sophie, Amelia and Olga will have it a month each in the order named.

The inter-act theme for jocularity in the lobby, however, was Julian Edward's performance. The belief of the play sharps was that the libretto of "The Gay Musician" had been taken from a foreign farce, probably Parisian, possibly Viennese, and the unknown adaptor's work of transfer to New York was clumsy. Verses for tunes by Edwards were ascribed in the bill indefinitely to "Siedle and Campbell." But the positive success lay in Edward's music and the clever singing of it. Edwards was received with applause by friendly boomers when he came to the conductor's stand, and he bowed with a confident smile, for a week's try-out in Philadelphia has removed all anxiety. The curtain dropped on the first of the two acts, and its rise disclosed Sophie, Amelia and Olga hand in hand, like sisters loving as well as lovely, and the rest of the company on view, too. The applause held out strongly, with no need of ushers and other rooters helping the real approval of the show's first half. Now, it didn't seem possible that Edwards could have reached the stage from the orchestra. Probably the course had been cleared, and he had trained for the sprint. Anyway, there he stood, smiling as toothfully as the painted dolls of actresses, and bowing as amiably as the daubed puppets of actors. In his elation he hadn't waited to hear a call of his name. He knew that his music had dominated the triumph, and forgot that anyone else had done anything. But he bethought him of his helpers at the third lift of the curtain, and brought out three men, but their identity and the nature of their individual collaboration was left to conjecture. They may have been the backing angel, the adaptive translator and the subservient rhymster. The rounders ridiculed Edward's cheek, yet admired his aptness in making a rythmic lot of tunes for a comic opera, not a musical farce.

The play went on with Sophie Brandt as a monied prima donna whom the "gay musician" makes love to, so that she will produce an opera of his, Amelia Stone is his wife, who reluctantly permits him to figure as a bachelor, while she serves the scheme as a housemaid, and Olga von Harzfield is a soubrette who edges into the row that inevitably ensues, for of course the husband's love of the prima donna becomes considerably genuine, the wife raises the jealous devil, there is a divorce, and a rematching, before a return to peace and prosperity. The all-knowing first-nighters, or the all-guessing, peeked between the mimic antagonists, and peered beyond them, to discern signs of real hatred in the personal rivalry. Nothing of the kind was visible. The three actresses, while pretending to fight like tabbies over a tomcat on a fence, pretended also to be personally as playful as kittens over a ball in a basket. The upshot is that "The Gay Musician" is a welcome variant from the output of shows that are tender Tenderloin in sensuality, but tough with the Tenderloin flavor that is rank to some folks.

In a week or a fortnight, my space will be crowded by big summer productions; so now is the time to mention inconsequential little curiosities. A ring on a girl's toe is one of them. The actress is in Clyde Fitch's comedy of "Girls," in which he illustrates his subject—that is to say, his subjects—by having three of them change their day gowns to nightgowns and go to bed. The youngest, very cute an' cunnin', thrusts her bare foot from under the bedclothes towards the audience, and calls on one of her room mates to tuck 'em in. I told you that in an account of the first performance. Every earnest endeavor in dramatic art strives ever to progress forward and upward. When this actress puts forth her tootsies something glistens on one of them. Eager eyes locate it on her right big toe. Really the toe isn't big, but it is her biggest. A ring is on it, and a diamond shines where a corn might be.

The Burlesquers.

It is a year and more since I wrote a word about the "burlesque" companies, formerly called "female minstrels," that entertain in three hundred American theaters, fourteen of which are here in New York, not counting the summer's score at Coney Island. I have sat out four of their shows within a fortnight to see if in 1908 they are any better or worse than in 1907. They have neither risen nor fallen. The worst of the four was shaped up in the usual form of two plays with some vaudeville between; but I had hope for one of the pieces, as it bore a baseball title promising a travesty of "Casey at the Bat," the rhymed account of "the mighty Casey," who, at the crucial point in a game, lost it for the local club by "striking out!" De Wolf Hopper saw the verses in a newspaper, and recited them between acts for years before finding out its author; and has kept on using them without paying one dollar of the thousands it has earned, reckoning its royalty value by the time it has filled and the laughter it has caused. However, the New England lawyer who wrote it, after having scanned the copyright law in vain for ground on which to base a demand for money, took all the satisfaction that Hopper's eloquent recital yielded, and accepted a sumptuous supper with laudatory speeches.

The author of "Casey at the Bat" should keep away from the touring burlesquers who are misusing his rhymes. Let him not go, as I did, with the expectation of seeing his baseball humor exploited on the stage. He and I and others have thought of a full-length song-and-dance farce developed from mighty Casey's three strikes with no hit. The account of Casey's rise and fall was recited by a woman who had scant ability in her capering feet, none at all in her lisping voice, and distinction only in being the company's one bleached blonde. I said there was no change to note in this theatrical field. That isn't so. A year ago, three-fourths of all the feminine hair in every company was faded to yellow; now nearly all is left in the color that nature gave it, and peroxide of mercury must have slumped in the drug market.

Twenty-five dollars a week in additional salary would have provided an elocutionist to declaim "Casey at the Bat" in tolerable imitation of DeWolf Hopper. A further hoist in the wage of an Irish comedian to personate Casey would have secured a pantomimist to illustrate the humor effectually. To save $50 a week, probably $500 is lost in receipts, because the setting of the scene, the by-play of the spectators and the popularity of the subject need only a comedian with a clownish knack for Casey and an elocutionary hit-off in the Greek chorus sort of reciter to make audiences roar merrily at the deep, dark, classical tragedy of the mighty Casey's three strikes and out. But you are not a manager of burlesquery, and results, not processes, interest you.

The dramatically best of the four shows that I inspected was immorally the worst. I am sorry to say; for it had two genuine Irish comedians and an actress who, poor old thing, retained the skill which, twenty years ago, might have ranked her with Aimée and Judic. Aside and by the way, let me tell you that all concerned in making this show like to have their names read through the smoke of tobacco. The programme not only tells who wrote the libretto and score of the opening play, but also who revised the verses and contributed extra songs; and, after billing the costumer, the providers of "tights, hosiery and footwear" are printed. Ashamed of their work? Why, these men are proud of their agency in the exhibition of women.

That first play is sensual with the arrival of an East Indian prince at a reception given by Mrs. Astorbilt—not the compression of Astor and Vanderbilt in one "best society" name—in quest of fresh young beauties for his harem. Isn't there in that the suggestion of a serious drama? This show, of course, is sung and danced in sirenic abandon. The Mrs. Astor, or Mrs. Vanderbilt—take your choice as to identity—leads a dozen chorus ballet of "flirting girls," and undresses with them for the live tableau of untrammeled diving girls.

The second play had a "love kiss" in it. Are you tired of reading about the erotic waltzing that began with "The Merry Widow," and has been continued here and there and everywhere in stageland? Time was when Emma Abbott's kiss in "Faust," grand opera sensationalized her, and later Olga Nethersole kissed advertisingly in "Carmen" and "Sapho."

"I am dramatically delineative," Olga once said; "my Carmen kiss is Spanish, my Sapho kiss is French, and if ever I enact an American kissing heroine, I will try to depict the typical American kiss."

Miss Nethersole has been renewing "Carmen" and "Sapho" here, and it seemed to me that, feeling she was up against a lot of waltz-soul-love osculation, it was no time to mince matters; so she kissed Spanish, French and cosmopolitan with might and main, and no characterization.

My immediate subject, though, is the "love kiss" in a burlesque show. I don't know how it is in Louisville, but in New York a kiss in an off-Broadway theater is by usage an object of jolly ridicule. If Romeo's lips touched Juliet's on a Bowery stage, the gallery and balcony, if not the parquet, too, would respond with hilarious derision. But this "soul kiss" blended with a "love waltz," done in moonlight by a pair of pantomimic artists—yes, really, artists in pantomime—silences the guyers with its sensuous waltzing, holds them spellbound through the ensuing poses of passion, and doesn't let go of them until the climax kiss, having lasted twenty seconds by my watch—equal to a full minute in theatric' suspense—relaxes the tension and lets laughter have its way. The addition of a hundred dollars a week to the payroll—but who cares for the gains and losses in the show business? FRANKLIN FYLES.

"Our Lady of Dreams" and the Poetry of Motion

Maud Allan's Dancing Entrances All London and a Panegyrist Sings Her Praises Joyously.

MISS MAUD ALLAN is the mode of the moment. "All London," as the posters say, or at any rate as much of London as can squeeze itself into the Palace Theater of Varieties, is making a point of seeing her. For the serried ranks of gentlemen, old and young, equipped with opera glasses, it is easy to account by the rumor—not at all accurate—that the lady is attired for one of her dances in little else than beads, says the London Times. But the mundane dames are there, too, to see and be seen, and a careful scrutiny may even reveal a genuine amateur of dancing for dancing's sake. When Miss Allan's "turn" arrives, at a quarter past 10, there is the sudden silence that betokens eager expectation. The stage is unfurnished save by a few pedestals for flambeaux, and for background there are plain velvet curtains of a subfuse hue. Then the violin bows glide softly into the first strains of Chopin's valse in A minor (Op. 34, No. 2)—and the dream begins. The figure of the dream is a young girl; you perceive her, that is to say, to be a girl when you wake again, but to your dreaming sense she is a nymph or a Tanagra statuette. Timidly she slips through the curtains, and then appears to be drawn unconsciously into movement by the music. Say rather that she becomes part of the music—music made visible. She wears light classic drapery that seems not so much to clothe her as to serve as ambient air wherein she floats. Her limbs and feet are bare; slender and supple limbs, feet that seem rather to caress the ground than to be supported by it. When her arms wave it is a wave in the true sense that they form; a ripple runs along them, slowly dying out at the finger tips. Her hands have something of the leaf or petal about them, gently opening and folding or curving back upon their stem, like Daphne's hands in that picture of Giorgione where the god has caught her and she is just turning to laurel. For exquisite felicity of expression we can only compare them with the hands of Duse—whom D'Annunzio has so well called dolle belle mani. Here they express—how we cannot guess, we merely state the fact—a pensive melancholy, the vague sad reverie of Chopin's music. But the A minor valse, as everyone knows, modulates at times into the relative major, and then the dancer's face changes, and expresses hope and joy, and her hands and limbs and all the movements of her body express hope and joy. Only for a moment, however, for the music sinks back into the minor key and you see the joy fading out of the girl's face, and leaving her arms and hands, and she dances as one oppressed, falling at last into a wan despair. The music ceases; the dancer is quite still, with head bowed over hands that seem lifeless; then she glides quietly through the curtain—and you awake from your dream. It is a strange etat d'ame to have passed through in this Palace of Varieties, amid its worldly-looking crowd of aigretted women and cigar-smoking men—like reading De Quincey on a racecourse or at Ranelagh.

Your next dream is to be the familiar, rather too familiar, tune of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," the dream figure flitting hither and thither—allegretto grazioso—in pursuit of an imaginary butterfly. This is, of course, no time for languorous melancholy; the girl's movements are brisk and rapid; she makes little rushes backward and forward or, like "Camilla, skims along the plain." Now she is on tiptoe with arms outstretched, now swiftly bending to the ground, now "settling" for a moment like the butterfly she pursues—in short, gives you the quintessence of the papilionaceous. This you count a day-dream, you feel the warm summer breeze—again an impression curiously incongruous with your actual surroundings. In the true sense of the word, then, this dancer's art is entrancing. It converts you into a hypnotized subject.

But the dancer has reserved her master stroke for the last. This "Vision of Salome" has not only made her famous, but has so haunting a fascination that, to our own knowledge, many people cannot keep away from it and return to the Palace to see it night after night. For many of us in this world will go anywhere in search of dreams, taking Calderon's vida es sueno for our motto, and caring little whether our dreams come to us through the Gate of Ivory or the Gate of Horn. This time our dream is sensuous, decadent, macabre. To the strains of weird Oriental music Salome slowly descends the palace steps. There are jewels on her neck and bosom, and she wears a tunic of black gauze. It is of the essence, of course, of Eastern dancing to show rhythmic movements of the body round itself, so to speak, as a pivot, which means, of course, that it may become, as in the notorious case of the danse du ventre, something lascivious and repulsively ugly. Now it is obvious that this dancer could make no movement or posture that is not beautiful, and, in fact, her dancing as Salome, though Eastern in spirit through and through, is absolutely without the slightest suggestion of the vulgarities so familiar to the tourist in Cairo or Tangier. She achieves the distinction—we admit it risks being a nice distinction, but she achieves it—between the lascivious and the voluptions. Salome dances as one fascinated, slowly advancing toward the head and swiftly receding from it, gradually drawing nearer and nearer, then falling upon hands and knees and gloating, half savagely, half amorously, over it, then pouncing upon it like a hawk upon its prey. Thereafter she dances fear, a quivering, shuddering dance, and finally collapses, a huddled—but still graceful, still beautiful—mass. And there you have the secret of her art, sheer beauty; every line in it, every rhythm, every movement, every posture, every pause, is beautiful. And so Maud Allan gives you beautiful dreams, and we do not wonder that all the dreamers in London and all the lovers of beauty for beauty's sake are crowding to see her, and return to see her again and again.

Ireland On the Stage In British Capital

As England Declines To Enjoy Anything But the Conventional Stage Irishmen Lady Gregory Looks To America To Support the Genuine Article—Phyllis Dare, the Idol of the Junior Johnnies—Gossip of the London Stage.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

LONDON, May 15.—Twelve or fifteen years ago it was a distinction in the aristocratic feminine world of Great Britain not to have written a novel. It is not expensive—as expenses go in the "smart set"—to publish a book, and being an author was the fad. When playwrighting came into vogue there were not so many who could follow the fashion. The Duchess of Sutherland, with the originality and the daring of the Erskine family, was the first to set the ball rolling with her "Conqueror," a dull, heavy play, which ran for a fortnight. After her soon came the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton with "Warp and Woof," which had a measure of success, as it dealt with a vital subject. The young Countess of Cromartie, a Scotch Celt and a peeress in her own right, the richest woman in Scotland after the Duchess of Roxburghe, emulating the example set by her aunt, the Duchess of Sutherland, wrote one or two mediaeval tragedies, imaginative and dramatic, and hundreds of society women of less exalted position have had their plays performed at their own expense in drawing-rooms or in provincial towns.

Standing apart, distinct from the rest of the titled world, is Lady Gregory, who writes plays not for the fad but from love of portraying character. Lady Gregory is a reserved, unambitious, dreaming mystic. She is of that rare type of Irishwoman who has not, to use an expression American phrase, "the gift of gab."

• • •

America the Promised Land.

I talked to her about the new type of Irish plays introduced by Synge, Yeates and herself, and found that she looked to America for the best appreciation of them. "Americans," she said, "understand Irish sentiment, Irish feeling and the immense complexity of Irish character far better than other nations. Maybe this is because there is so much Irish blood in the United States. I am sure they would appreciate the Irish plays there." According to Lady Gregory, one of the best proofs that the English comprehend only the conventional stage Irishman and enjoy only that type was given last June when some of the new type of real Irish plays were performed at the Queen's Theater, London, to practically empty benches. Even the press gave them but a poor welcome, though the united efforts of Lady Gregory, W. B. Yeates and Synge were displayed in acting, which was granted to be supreme of its kind. The Irish players have been likened to the Sicilians who held London spellbound a few months ago, but why the former failed and the Italians were glorified is inexplicable except, perhaps, that there is still race enmity in England. Rarely will you find an English critic enthuse over anything Irish.

• • •

Gleams of Sunshine.

Lady Gregory's contributions to what are now defined as "the Irish plays" are the gleams of sunshine in the somber, mystical tragedies of the other writers of this group. It is always of peasant life that she writes. The peasants are the people who interest her. She concludes that directly you educate an Irishman he loses his originality, his picturesqueness. In her hands no Irish character, however foolish or indiscreet, becomes a caricature. They are quaint, picturesque, human, and true as life to the country to which they belong. You meet them at every cross road in Ireland. You laugh with them in their joys, weep with them in their sorrows. If you are not Irish, there are times when you want badly to shake them, but that only proves you do not understand the individual or his temperament.

Lady Gregory's plays, like all the others, are staged in the most realistic manner. One can imagine oneself in a "Shebeen" shop in Galway, when watching a picture of such a place. There is not a vestige of color falsely applied by these actor-playwrights who know the scenes that they portray.

Lady Gregory has a hobby—if I might call it such—for planting trees; not a few by way of amusement, but "thousands," as she says, "to keep the Irish moods in order." Her home is in Galway, the spot of all others in Ireland which is full of the most poetic and the most historic associations if also the most tragic. Perhaps this is why she is among the most inspired of modern Irish writers.

• • •

The Maids Revived.

Revival of "The Dairymaids" this week at the Queen's, the newest of London theaters, brings up that precocious little actress, Phyllis Dare, who although she has been an established London favorite for three years, is only 19 years old. She has more "puppy" adorers than any other woman on the English stage. The Junior "Johnnydom" goes mad over her, assures her of a well-filled house whenever she appears, and buys her postcards in thousands. It was the fair-minded Phyllis who was summoned back from boarding school in Belgium when only 17 years of age to assume Edna May's part in "The Belle of Mayfair," when that independent American actress threw up her part because of the importance given to Camille Clifford, the original "original" Gibson girl. The papers made so much of the fact that the little Phyllis' studies had been interrupted by the siren call of Thespis that she packed the playhouse for many weeks with a curious public, many of whom had never before heard her name.

Now I hear that Miss Dare will shortly essay the role of Juliet at a special matinee to be arranged by Robert Courtneidge, her manager.

Courtneidged has grappled with the problem of women's hats and feels certain that he will eliminate one of the most objectionable features of the English playhouses. On every ticket sold at the Queen's is printed the following notice:

"Ladies are kindly requested to note that this ticket is sold on condition that they remove their hats or bonnets during the performance."

What is perhaps more important, the management intends to enforce the rule. Should one of the fair sex persistently refuse to comply she will be politely, but firmly, asked to leave the theater, and her money handed back to her as she departs with hauteur.

Not the First Attempt.

Of course, this is by no means the first attempt that has been made to enforce the ladies to doff their hats for the benefit of those behind. But all previous attempts have failed and it remains to be seen whether this one will fare any better. There is an attempt on record, however, which proved temporarily effective. During the performance at one of the largest theaters in Liverpool a very prominent man-about-town stood up in his place in the stalls and announced in a loud voice that he would remain standing until the hats in front of him which obstructed his view of the performance had been removed. Other sufferers immediately followed his example and finally the manager was compelled to announce that the performance would not be resumed until all hats had been removed. The ladies capitulated.

This city is overrun with classical dancers, all of them giving a sort of sublimated cuchee-cuchee. It is all due to the visit at the palace of Maud Allan, a Canadian, who came to London, via Berlin, Vienna and Paris. She gives a performance of much the same character as that of Ruth St. Denis, who made such a furore in New York a few years ago. She has been followed by a whole drove of imitators and now almost every London "hall" has some kind of a dancing act.

JOHN AVA CARPENTER.

"The Bohemian Girl" The White City Bill.

"The Pirates of Penzance" Next and the Engagement May Be Extended.

"THE BOHEMIAN GIRL" will be sung at White City this week, and that opera promises to be a better vehicle for the company than "Said Pasha," which, however dear it may have been to the hearts of lovers of light opera when it was new, proved very poor comedy as rendered, such poor comedy that the really good singing of several members was lost upon audiences bored by the book and ineffectual efforts of the cast to enliven the piece with exaggerated "business."

• • •

"The Pirates" Next Week.

The first week's bill, "Pinafore," proved quite satisfactory. Next week another Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "The Pirates of Penzance," will be given, and that week ends the engagement of the company at White City unless the weather and the audiences warm up and warrant an extension of the original contract.

The company includes several singers who have made substantial success. Grace Lillian Walser, who sang the role of the captain's daughter in "Pinafore" and "Serena" in "Said Pasha," was a pupil of Bouhy of the Theater of Voice in Paris, and got along well in opera and concert work abroad. Her first success in America was in the title roll in "Louisiana" at Delmar Garden during the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. She has a really good soprano voice. Thomas Richards, the leading baritone, studied in Paris under the teacher who developed Plancon, and last season he was the leading baritone in the Savage grand opera company in "Madam Butterfly." He has a genuine baritone voice that has been compared favorably with that of the late W. H. McDonald, of the old Bostonians. J. R. Phillips, who was recently alternate tenor with Joseph F. Sheehan in grand opera, has a voice of good range and power. He came to Louisville from Chicago, where he filled an engagement at the Auditorium.

Maurice Whish, who sang the Dick Deadeye role excellently in "Pinafore," has a booming basso profundo and is a sufficiently capable actor to make a good impression in any role in which he has an opportunity. In "Said Pasha" Mr. Whish was assigned to a perfectly fruitless role in which he had no songs to sing, but merely came upon the stage in a Rajah costume and stormed about with a sword. He was the leading basso of the Bostonians in the original production of "Robin Hood." He has been in dramatic work for the last eight or ten years and was recently with Blanche Bates in "The Darling of the Gods." Alta Yolo is best remembered in Louisville upon account of her solo work when she was with Sousa. More recently she has been in vaudeville. Her voice is a deep contralto. In private life Miss Yolo is Mrs. High. Her husband is a well-known New York newspaper man, at present a member of the staff of the Sun.

Stage Manager Callahan didn't think when he was discussing the outlook early last week that it was probable the engagement of the opera company would be extended. The skies were black, the mercury was so low that many of the men who wandered to the parks wore light overcoats and most of the women wore wraps, and notwithstanding the fact that "Said Pasha" drew its share of the straggling crowd that came that night, Mr. Callahan was not in a cheerful frame of mind. "We'll give 'em the Bo Girl and the Pirates next week and the week after," said Mr. Callahan. "Possibly the engagement may be extended, but I cannot say that it will." But there has been some sunshine since then and the probability is that there will be quite a good deal of it before the curtain is rung down upon the last performance of "The Pirates," so, perhaps, the summer opera may remain longer than the four weeks for which it was booked as an experiment.

HALF CENTURY'S WORK.

MISS IDA VERNON, who was engaged to be married to Edwin Booth at the time of the noted actor's death and whose career on the American stage has been in some respects without equal, will celebrate in Chicago to-day the fifty-second anniversary of her first appearance before the footlights, says the Record-Herald.

That was in the Boston Theater, then one of the greatest playhouses in the world, when Miss Vernon was a child of 12. She has not missed a season on the stage since. No other actress in the history of American drama has ever equaled this record.

Her first role was that of one of the "blossom fairies" in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." During the season of 1858-59 Miss Vernon played juvenile roles in the Louisville Theater in support of Edwin Booth and all of the great stars of that day.

She starred in all of the principal cities, presenting such plays as "Leah, the Forsaken" and "East Lynne."

Once, in the war, Miss Vernon ran the blockade to take a niece to her sister in New York. In attempting to return South she was arrested at Martinsburg, where she was held four days. She tried again, was arrested and held by Gen. Benjamin Butler six weeks in Fortress Monroe. She then sailed to Halifax, thence to Bermuda and then to Wilmington, S. C. She was noted for her work as a volunteer nurse among the Southern soldiers.

In the season of 1866 she supported Edwin Booth at the Winter Garden in New York, and returned to the Winter Garden in 1867, in which season the death of her husband caused her to retire from the stage for two months. That was practically the only break of any considerable time in her fifty-two consecutive seasons.

In 1871-72 she started in the large cities North and South, but was soon engaged by A. M. Palmer to go to the Union Square Theater in New York to originate the role of Sister Genevieve in the first production of "Two Orphans." In 1883-84 she traveled in support of Edwin Booth.

Miss Vernon now is with "The Man from Home" company, in the important role of Lady Creech. She will remain here until "The Man from Home" moves to the Astor Theater in New York, where she will begin her fifty-third consecutive season on the stage.

"Way Down East" Makes The Discriminating Weep

London Truth Wants To Know Why Lottie Blair Parker Should Be Introduced In British Capital ---Echo Answers "Why?"

I SOMETIMES wonder why the British dramatist does not seek to have a tariff imposed upon imported plays, says London Truth, and can only suppose that it is because the poor downtrodden creature is afraid of doing anything to irritate the all-powerful managers and syndicates. If the importations were better than the home-made article I would have nothing to say, but I sat in bewilderment at the Aldwych the other night and wondered what press and managers would have said if "Way Down East" had been written by an English author, offered to an English manager, and produced at a West End house. Judged as the work of a new author, it would have been contemptuously condemned. A short time since our American friends were complaining that we were not kind to them. We were very kind to "Way Down East," but only because of its American hall-mark. Miss Lottie Blair Parker's play stands in the same relation to a real play as "Reading Without Tears" does to a novel by Mr. George Meredith. It is theatrical "pap," perfectly innocuous, but equally impossible to criticize. When Mr. G. R. Sims was a little boy I can imagine him writing a similar sort of play for nursery production. If Mr. Frohman, instead of importing expensive companies and productions of this nature from America, were to explore some of our smaller provincial towns, he would find better plays and better acting to "present" to us at the West End, and I commend this suggestion to him. I am sure it would save him money. Our dramatists and managers, by the way, handle this sort of melodrama correctly. In Miss Lottie Blair Parker's play, "elaborated by Joseph R. Grismer," the betrayed heroine so far forgets herself as to appear in a red dress, whereas the veriest tiro knows that for a young person in her circumstances to wear colors is to show an unrepentant heart! Most of the details, however, are quite in order. The callous young squire who has done the deed has quite the right thing in fur coats. The honest young lover, when he hears that the woman he loves has had a baby, reels across the room with his hands to his head in quite the correct "stricken-to-the-heart" manner, and the stern parent very properly orders the girl out of doors into a snowstorm of unexampled fury. It is, of course, "such a night as you would not turn a dog out into," but exactly the right theatrical weather for a seduced maiden. There not being a Thames Embankment in America, she faints in a forest. This sort of thing, only very much better done, I used to see across the water and at the old Adelphi when I was in short frocks. Why be at vast pains and expense to import it from America?

Remarkable Development of Bi-Dimensional Theater.

The Shadow Play Revived In Germany---Will Actors Be Abolished?

RICHARD STRAUSS has discovered what some might call a fourth dimension of music. While music thus extends its boundaries, it is not impossible that her sister art of the theater may, in the future, contract herself into bi-dimensional space. Startling as this statement may at first appear, there are in the world several divergent currents, not generally discussed under one heading, which lend plausibility to this sweeping hypothesis. Seven years ago Mr. David Belasco predicted that the conventional scenery on the stage would be superseded largely by effects of light, and that it would soon be possible to reproduce on a flat surface any previously performed play, not only with every minute detail of the actor's movements, gestures and expressions, but also accompanied by every subtle shading of their spoken words. At the time his statement met with derision; to-day the phenomenal developments of the moving picture and the talking machine have endowed his assertion with a ring that is more than prophetic. For side by side with the growing use of cinematographic devices, there has taken place in Munich a revival of the shadow play, the most ancient form of bi-dimensional drama. The exponents of either system have enlisted names to conjure with on their side, and the time has come when we must seriously face this curious problem.

The Munich shadow-plays have been successfully repeated in the south of Germany. Mr. von Bernus, their founder, has not dared to approach the capital of the Empire and its caviling critics. Let no one, however, be surprised if he should meet with success, and if we should read within the next few months that Suderman with Hauptmann and Fulad have followed in the wake of their French colleagues and are now devoting their time to the composition of plays for bi-dimensional reproduction. In the latter part of December of last year the son of Ellen Terry startled the world by the statement that the salvation of the stage lay in the elimination of the stage drama. If Mr. Craig succeeds in abolishing the actor and the playwright, and if Mr. von Bernus succeeds in eliminating the stage, it is indeed difficult to predict what the future of the drama will be.—[Current Literature.

DEMOCRATS TO KEEP AT WORK

Will Welcome Call For Extra Session of Congress.

To Vote Against Resolution Fixing Adjournment.

Mr. Williams States Position of the Minority.

WILLING TO AID PRESIDENT.

Washington, May 23.—[Special.]—The Democrats of the House are willing to stay in session, and will welcome the calling of an extra session by the President to do those things which Congress should have done and did not. This was the announcement made by the minority leader, Mr. Williams, tonight.

Mr. Williams declared that the Democrats of the House would vote against a motion to fix a date for adjournment; that the public demanded the passage of certain measures by Congress, and it was the duty of Congress to comply. Mr. Williams said:

"The Democracy is standing solid, with less division than I ever knew in its ranks. Still tendering the full Democratic vote of the House to any thirty independent Republicans to pass or to consider at any rate a bill for prohibition, publication of campaign contributions, a bill to secure the liberty of the citizens by a modification of the powers authorized by inferior Federal Courts in connection with injunctions, a bill to safeguard the rights and dignity of the State against the same sort of attack, a bill to put wood pulp and print paper upon the free list, and a bill for a model license law in the District of Columbia, the Democracy will continue to present itself for that sort of alliance. It will vote against a motion to fix a date to adjourn, and it announces now, as it has announced all along, and as it will announce on the last day of this session, that it is ready and anxious and willing to continue at the post of duty for an extra session to be called by the President if he be in earnest and really desires to have passed the remedial legislation indicated in the foregoing."

* * *

The Work of Congress.

This is about all the present session of this Congress has done:

Currency Commission authorized.

Child labor law for the District.

Two new battleships authorized.

Commission to investigate mountain forest reserves.

Pay of army, navy and marine corps increased.

Betting on races in the District prohibited.

Important consular posts reclassified.

Pensions of widows and orphans of soldiers increased.

Philippine shipping law modified.

Nearly 4,000 private pension bills passed.

Arbitration treaties with practically all nations ratified.

Aggregate appropriations in excess of any session in time of peace.

* * *

Up To the President.

"When will Congress adjourn?" one of the best-posted men on legislative matter was asked at the Capitol to-day.

"When will the President approve the public buildings bill?" he answered. The bill is still in conference. It was reported to the Senate at a late hour this afternoon with a statement from Senator Scott, the chairman of the committee, to the effect that an agreement could be reached. There are several minor items in dispute; as far as the Senate and House are concerned there is little trouble over the bill.

The House is naturally jallous, as it always is, over the fact that the Senate has added about 50 per cent. to the total of appropriations carried by the measure. It will be straightened out in plenty of time. While members have received pretty good assurances from the White House that the President will approve the bill, they are still on the anxious bench, and will not breathe easily until it is officially reported by the White House clerk that the President has approved the measure. Congress does not seem to trust the President worth a cent. It will stay in session until the bill is approved and not run the risk of having this done within the ten days' limit.

No Popular Vote For Senators.

By a vote of 33 to 20 the Senate today went on record against the election of Senators by a popular vote of the people. The principle, which for several campaigns past has been prominent in Democratic platforms and has been indorsed by Legislatures of Democratic and several Republican States, has been consistently urged for passage in the last three Congresses. Early in the present session Senator Owen introduced a resolution to this effect and managed to get it before the Senate today, when a vote referring it to committee was taken. The measure will never be reported from the committee.

SMALL GIRL THROWN FROM AUTOMOBILE AND INJURED.

Rear Gate of Car of W. A. Thomas Flies Open and His Daughter Falls Through.

The rear gate of a touring car left unlocked in the automobile of W. A. Thomas, superintendent of construction of the Home Building Company, caused serious injuries to Fanny Thomas, the 4-year-old daughter of Mr. Thomas, at 8:30 o'clock last night. The child was hurled from the car and thrown to the street, where she was picked up unconscious.

Mr. Thomas, together with his family and several friends, left his home, at 2427 Cypress street, for a spin through the city last night. While traveling at a fair rate of speed out Eighteenth street the machine struck a rock at Eighteenth and Mapel streets, and was so severely jolted that the rear gate flew open and the child, who was seated nearest the gate, was hurled through to the street, falling upon her head. The rest of the passengers were severely jolted, but only the little girl was injured.

She was picked up unconscious and carried to the nearby drug store of Dr. Charles F. Dupre, where medical attention was given her. Later Dr. Hugh Leavell and Dr. George S. Coon were summoned, and the child was restored to consciousness. Her head and shoulders were severely bruised, but, owing to her extreme youth, it is not thought that she suffered any dangerous concussion.

AIRSHIP BURSTS UP IN THE SKY

Sixteen Men Injured In Disaster At Oakland.

Believed That Two of the Victims Will Die.

Ten Thousand People Witness the Disaster.

OCCUPANTS LEAP TO EARTH.

Oakland, Cal., May 23.—The great Morrell airship, the largest ever constructed, burst on its trial trip when 300 feet in the air above a crowd of 10,000 spectators at Berkeley, at 11:40 o'clock to-day. The sixteen men who made the ascension with the big craft were dashed to the ground and everyone of them more or less injured. Broken legs and arms and internal injuries were suffered by most of them and it is believed that two will die.

The accident was a most spectacular one. A great crowd had gathered about a vacant lot where the big gas bag had been inflated with 500,000 cubic feet of illuminating gas to watch the trial of the airship. There were sixteen persons, five of them engineers, in charge of the five gasoline engines, several newspaper photographers, the inventor of the airship, C. A. Morrell, and an Australian aeronaut who, against the orders of Morrell, climbed onto the rigging just as the great ship lifted from the crowd, made the ascent. All of these persons were injured and their escape from death is almost miraculous.

Rising slowly under the power from five gasoline engines, the great airship lifted to a height of probably 300 feet. Suddenly there was a ripping, roaring sound and the forward end of the airship tilted downward and it began to settle slowly to the ground.

Several Leap.

The occupants of the airship hung desperately to the rigging, while the crowd of 10,000 persons were panic-stricken before what appeared to be impending disaster to the sixteen men. As the airship settled toward the ground, several of the men leaped and were seriously injured in the fall. Others stayed with the craft until it reached the ground and they, too, were injured by the heavy engines and the structure of the airship. Following is a list of the injured:

* * *

The Injured.

C. A. Morrell, inventor of the Morrell airship, caught inside the rigging and crushed by one of the propellers, legs broken; seriously injured.

C. C. Tripple, San Francisco, engineer engine No. 4, crushed by his engine.

Justin Barber, Berkeley, commercial photographer, ribs broken, internally injured.

W. Tyson, San Francisco, valvetender, jumped when car was within fifty feet of the ground, internally injured.

E. G. C. Wacln, San Francisco, newspaper photographer, badly lacerated, probably internally injured.

P. H. Goodfriend, first engineer, jumped before car reached ground, severely but not dangerously injured.

H. Miller, valvetender, cut and bruised.

John Burns, riding on top of gas bag, bruised and lacerated.

Charles P. Hall, commercial photographer, riding in forward network, internally injured.

John Peterson, assistant to Hall, bruised and lacerated, not serious.

V. J. Fulmo, engineer second engine, cut and bruised, not serious.

W. Mowrey, engineer No. 5, slightly injured.

Capt. Tenfold, Australian aeronaut, crushed, legs broken and seriously injured by engine. Tenfold jumped into the rigging of the airship as it rose from the ground, against the wishes of Morrell, the inventor.

J. V. Rogers, assistant engineer, internal injuries, probably will die.

C. A. Nelson, cut about head, severely injured.

TRUSTEES DECIDE FOR HERD FOR SANITARIUM

PURE MILK DEMANDED BY ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS INSTITUTION.

TWO NEW DIRECTORS ELECTED YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

REPORTS ON WORK DONE.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Association Sanatorium was held at the sanatorium, near Hazelwood, yesterday afternoon with a good attendance. Aside fro mthe re-election of two of the Board of Trustees and the election of two additional trustees, encouraging reports were made by Dr. E. W. F. Rembert, physician in charge, and F. A. Sampson, secretary of the association. It was decided to erect a barn at a cost of $2,500 for the purpose of housing ten cows which will be purchased. Heretofore all the milk used has been purchased and the Board of Trustees deemed it advisable to milk their own cows. The contract for the erection of the barn will be let at once and the herd of milch cows will be purchased soon.

The two new trustees elected were John P. Stapleton and Charles C. Mengle, making the board consist of ten members. B. Bernheim, Bernard Flexner and Dr. Sam Hartwell were re-elected trustees. The other five members of the board are John C. Marshall, W. C. Jones, John L. Wheat, August Ropke and Cyrus L. Adler. Trustees are elected for a term of three years. The Board of Trustees will meet the second Tuesday in June and elect officers for the coming year.

According to Dr. Rembert's report twenty-three patients have been treated since the sanatorium was opened last September. Twelve were dismissed as cured and eleven are still being treated at the institution. Patients are charged at the rate of $10 a week and are only admitted when passed on by the resident physician.

The report of Mr. Sampson showed that the funds on hand were very low. The Association Sanatorium is closely affiliated with the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association, but conducted separately.

MR. BARBEE SENDS WORD OF CUMBERLAND MEETING.

Word was received here yesterday from the Rev. J. T. Barbee, of Louisville, who is attending the Seventy-eighth Annual General Conference of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, in session at Corsicana, Tex. He reports present at the convention seventy-two ministers and seventy elders. The Hon. F. G. Pendergast, of Texas, was elected moderator of the convention. It convened last Wednesday, and will be in session until next Tuesday. The Rev. Mr. Barbee is the only delegate in attendance from Louisville.

STEAL SCOTCHED BY THE HOUSE

Democrats and Middle West Republicans

Line Up Against the Ship Subsidy Measure.

Crumpacker Pet Bill Put to Sleep By Senate.

A FAT POT FOR THE CAMPAIGN.

Washington, May 23.—[Special.]—Despite the crack of the whip of the House organization, the House to-night again voted against the ship subsidy bill and instructed its conferees to insist that the Senate amendment granting $4,000,000 to the ship owners be stricken from the post-office appropriation bill. The vote was 154 to 145, a majority of 9.

The alliance of Democrats and Middle West Republicans defeated the measure. Plans are on foot for another meeting of the conferees and it is reported that the organization having made a gain over the vote taken yesterday has not abandoned all hope of yet forcing the House to concur in the Senate amendment. The leaders of the Republican insurgents, however, declares that his side will stand firm and it is useless to insist upon a concurrence.

* * *

"Frying the Fat."

The action of the House organization in putting up such a terrific fight for the ship subsidy steal is an excellent illustration of the course the Republican party in the House has adopted from the day the session met last December. Hundreds of good meritorious measures are before the House, but will not be acted upon. For instance, one-fourth the energy displayed for the ship subsidy bill would give the country remedial currency legislation. But the party will not stand for anything unless it is to reward or protect contributors to their campaign fund.

Having been overwhelmingiy defeated yesterday, the conferees on the post-office appropriation bill to-day came into the House with a new report, agreeing with the Senate on everything except the subsidy provision and that relating to the system for weighing the mails. The portion of the report on which there was no dispute was adopted unanimously, under an agreement to extend the time of debate on the subsidy question.

The Senate amendment changing the standard of weighing the mails by reducing the number of days which the weighing should be conducted was snowed under 94 to 186. By reason of the action of the House in rejecting these amendments, the bill again went back to conference for the third time, although the Senate already had agreed to the report.

Crumpacker Amendment Put To Sleep.

The Crumpacker bill, including the campaign publicity section, was sent to the Privileges and Election Committee to-day within a few minutes after its formal report from the House. It will stay there during the remainder of the session and next winter, the elections being over, there will be no agitation on the publicity feature. As for the reduction of Southern representation, there never was a possibility that it could get through the Senate. The net result is a big thing for the Republican party. A campaign fund can be collected just as it always has been; even the President can make denial of it without fear of dispute until after the election, and from California to Maine the campaign managers will be in possession of a barrel from the Republican National Committee.

BACK TO CONFERENCE

House Action On the Post-office Appropriation Bill.

Washington, May 23.—For the second time within twenty-four hours the House to-night, following a discussion of two hours, rejected the mail subsidy provision for ocean steamships. Previously similar action was taken with respect to the Senate amendment to the post-office appropriation bill reducing the number of days upon which weighings of mail are to be conducted, with the result that the post-office bill for the third time was sent back to conference, all other features of the bill being agreed to by unanimous consent.

Altogether the day was a busy one. The conference reports on the omnibus pension claims bill and on the fortifications appropriation bill were agreed to; the resolution providing for a remission of a part of the Chinese indemnity growing out of the Boxer troubles of 1900 was adopted, as was also a resolution increasing the pay of over a hundred of the House employes and officials; the conference report on the bill enlarging homestead entries in the arid regions from 160 to 320 acres was rejected, thereby finally defeating the bill, and the report authorizing an extension of time for the construction of a dam across the Rainey River in Minnesota was passed over the President's veto.

The Chinese Indemnity.

The joint resolution providing for the remission of a portion of the Chinese indemnity, arising out of the Boxer troubles in 1900, came up under suspension of the rules. Mr. Denby, of Michigan, briefly rehearsed the incidents in connection with the outbreak and said that the proposed remission would be an act of supreme justice and generosity. China, he said, already had paid on account of the indemnity of $24,400,000 the sum of $6,000,000, of which $2,000,000 had gone toward the liquidation of private claims. Mr. Denby assured the House that even with the remission of the $10,800,000 there would still remain ample funds from which to pay all claimants.

The action of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in amending the resolution so as to increase by $2,000,000 the amount of the indemnity to be paid, as well as providing for the review by the Court of Claims, of claims disallowed in whole or in part, was severely condemned by Mr. Stafford, of Wisconsin.

The bill as amended by the committee was supported by Messrs. Perkins, of New York; Howard, of Georgia, and Williams, of Mississippi. So imbued was Mr. Williams with the justice of the measure that he did not insist upon a rollcall.

* * *

More Money For House Employes.

The House voted $20,000 in favor of 108 of its employes, from the sergeant-at-arms down, the money amounting practically to an increase in salary. There already had been granted these and other employes an extra month's pay, which is usual at the end of the session.

The new proposition, which gave rise to a lively debate, was characterized by Messrs. Fitzgerald, of New York; Brumm, of Pennsylvania; Burleson, of Texas, and Sherley, of Kentucky, as a scandal. Mr. Sherley maintained that there were three times as many employes as were needed. The House, he said, could not afford to talk about economy or lecture the heads of the several departments unless it began its economy at home.

Mr. Olmsted, of Pennsylvania, however, thought the employes who were to be rewarded were a deserving class, and inasmuch as the House had just voted a reduction of $10,000,000 in the Chinese indemnity, he, for one, did not propose to offset it at the expense of the House employes.

Mr. Slemp, of Virginia, also favored the proposition.

Enlarged Homesteads.

A flutter of excitement was created in the House to-day during the consideration of the conference report on the bill providing for enlarged homesteads. Messrs. Mondell, of Wyoming, and Gaines, of Tennessee, who had signed the report, urged its adoption. Mr. Reeder, of Kansas, however, bitterly opposed the report and bill, and in the course of his remarks made the following statement:

"People in the West seldom send men here who do not vote for what they want, and I presume that the men who advocate this bill have hundreds of thousands of acres of Western land and they have the American disposition toward everything that adjoins them."

Mr. Mondell interrupted this remark as a reflection upon himself, and called Mr. Reeder to order. The stenographer's notes were transcribed and read, the members crowding into the well in front of the Speaker's desk.

Speaker Cannon held that the words spoke for themselves and that they did not constitute a reflection upon any member.

* * *

Ill Temper Shown.

Mr. Mondell accepted the ruling, but at the same time declared that he thought he heard other words not taken down. The incident, which at first had an ugly aspect thereupon was closed.

Strong opposition developed to the report and it was defeated, 98 to 148. The principal arguments advanced against the measure were based on the supposition that cattle men of the West and not legitimate homesteaders would benefit by its provision, but this hypothesis was vigorously combatted.

* * *

Agreement on Pensions.

Without a rollcall the House to-day agreed to the conference report on the omnibus pension claims bill, providing for pensions to several hundred persons. Mr. Williams' statement that he would not insist on the yeas and nays was greeted with applause.

The conference report on the fortifications appropriation bill was agreed to by the House. The effect of the action is to send the bill to the House of Representatives for approval. The report gave rise to no debate although a rollcall was necessary to secure its adoption.

BACON ATTACKS PRESIDENT.

Georgia Senator Says Executive Is Guilty of Gross Breach of Senate's Privilege.

Washington, May 23.—When the Senate met to-day there was a general understanding that nothing could be done to delay the final adjournment of Congress and that no legislation could be enacted beyond completing consideration of the great supply bills.

The net result of the day's session was the adoption of the conference agreement on the omnibus public buildings bill and the approval of a part agreement on the post-office appropriation bill, the items in the latter measure relating to weighing the mails and ocean mail subsidy being sent back to conference.

Various questions were discussed during the day. Senator Teller reviewed court decisions on the limitations of Federal power under the Constitution and referred to a report that the President had stated in a letter that he would veto certain legislation if passed by Congress as an evidence of unwarranted encroachment upon the powers of the States.

* * *

Bacon Criticises President.

Mr. Teller was followed by Mr. Bacon, who declared that the President's statement in his message of March 25 that he would veto any bill not guarding the right of the Government to charge for power on navigable streams in connection with legislation respecting water power privileges was a "gross breach of the privilege of the Senate." He said he would have introduced a resolution providing that this matter be considered by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, but, being a member of the minority, he feared his act would have been regarded as partisan.

Popular Election of Senators.

Mr. Owen, of Oklahoma, spoke on his joint resolution providing that an amendment to the Constitution for the election of Senators by the people be submitted to the States for ratification, and contended that the Legislatures of twenty-seven States, having voted in favor of that reform, the Senators from those States should support his resolution. He moved a vote on the passage of the measure, but a motion to send it to the Committee on Privileges and Elections was carried by a vote of 33 to 20.

Ineffectual efforts were made by Mr. Beveridge to pass the omnibus territories bill, and by Mr. Newlands to secure consideration of his resolution creating an inland waterways commission.

At 5:30 p. m., just before the close of the day's session, Mr. Hale announced an agreement made in executive session to take a recess until 8 p. m., with the understanding that the night session would be devoted exclusively to considering conference reports and such measures as could be taken up by unanimous consent.

Mr. Hale had previously stated his belief that Congress could adjourn by 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Senate Recedes.

As soon as the action of the House was announced in the Senate, Senator Penrose moved to recede from the remaining Senate amendments and discharge the conferees. The motion was carried. The congressional work on the post-office bill is to leave the mail subsidy provision out of the bill, and thus effectually dispose of it for the present session.

PENSION AGENCIES REMAIN,

But the President Can Abolish Them If He Sees Fit.

Washington, May 23.—The House and Senate conference on the pension appropriation bill to-night reached a compromise agreement by which there is stricken from the bill the House provision to abolish the eighteen pension agencies and consolidate the entire pension work in one agricultural center in Washington. The compromise leaves in the bill the entire amount of money appropriated for the conduct of the eighteen agencies, but with a proviso that only so much of it as is necessary in the opinion of the President shall be used, the President having the right to abolish such of the agencies as in his judgment may be wise.

APPROPRIATIONS VERY LARGE.

Nearly $100,000,000 Over Any Previous Session.

Washington, May 23.—Although the figures on the total appropriations for the present session of Congress are incomplete, from careful estimates the indications are that they will exceed $1,020,000,000. This is $100,000,000 in excess of any previous session. The largest increases over previous years are found in the post-office, pension, naval and army appropriation bills.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

President Roosevelt signed the bills providing for the participation of this country in the exposition to be held in Tokio in 1912; the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills and a bill authorizing the extension of the street railways of this city to the new Union station.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, accompanied by several experts from the Bureau of Animal Industry, including Dr. A. D. Melvin, the chief of that division, left here for Chicago to attend a conference of meat inspectors which begins in that city on Monday next. The purpose of the conference is to secure greater uniformity in the enforcement of the regulations of the Department of Agriculture governing the inspection of meat and its products.

HIGH COMMISSIONERS REACH COSTA RICA.

San Jose, Costa Rica, May 23.—W. I. Buchanan and Enrique C. Creel, respectively high commissioners of the United States and Mexico to the Central American Court of Justice, which is to hold its opening session at Cartago next week, arrived here to-day from Port Limon. They are accompanied by Dr. Madriz and Dr. Rocanegra, respectively the Nicaraguan and Guatemalan delegates to the court.

The commissioners were enthusiastically received by the Costa Rican authorities and the people of San Jose. Five thousand school children greeted the visitors and threw flowers all along the road from the railway depot. Thousands of persons came from all parts of the country to join in the welcome.

Commissioners Buchanan and Creel and the Judges from the various countries were conducted to residences that had been prepared by the Government for them. The city is beautifully decorated on every hand, and great enthusiasm is shown. Congress has declared Monday, the date of the inauguration of the conference, a public holiday throughout the republic.

PRIMATE OF IRELAND HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

New York, May 23.—Cardinal Logue, primate of Ireland, had a narrow escape from being precipitated into the Harlem River to-day when the Velox, the launch on which he and a party of Catholic clergymen were making a sightseeing trip about Manhattan Island, ran on a submerged rock. The launch ran so high upon the rock that it was in imminent danger of being capsized. Sharp whistles of distress from the launch brought speedy assistance, and the Cardinal and his party were safely taken ashore in a tug.

Ten Probably Drowned.

Key West, Fla., May 23.—A message from Jupiter states that the Greek steamer Cycladus, bound from New Orleans to Genoa, loaded with cotton and grain, foundered off the Bahama Islands on May 13. The captain and fifteen of the crew reached Nassau in a small boat. A boat with four passengers and six of the crew is missing.

HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

When the blood is pure and healthy the skin will be soft, smooth and free from all eruptions or disease, but when the circulation becomes infected with any unhealthy humor the effect is shown by eruptions, pimples, boils, or some more definitely marked skin disorder, such as Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, etc.

Humors get into the blood, usually because of an inactive or sluggish condition of those members whose duty it is to collect and carry off the waste matter and refuse of the system. This unhealthy matter is left to sour and ferment and be absorbed into the blood, and soon the circulation becomes filled with an acrid, irritating humor.

The blood then, instead of performing its natural duty of nourishing the skin, regulating its temperature and preserving its uniform softness, pliability and healthfulness, irritates and diseases the delicate tissues and fibers around the pores and glands and produces some of the various forms of skin eruption or disease.

The cause of all skin affections can be traced to some kind of humor in the blood. Healthy cuticles are only possible where the circulation is pure; and therefore the cure of any skin disease can only come from a thorough cleansing of this vital fluid. Salves, washes, lotions, etc., cannot cure. True such treatment relieves some of the itching and discomfort, helps to reduce inflammation, and aids in keeping the affected parts clean, but it does not reach the blood, where the real cause is located, and at best can be only palliative and soothing.

For six years I was severely troubled with Eczema, located principally on the shin bones, caused by a humor in the blood. The trouble would appear in the form of small yellow blisters, characterized by itching, etc. I tried sarsaparillas, so-called blood purifiers, salves, ointments, lotions and treatment under a local physician, but nothing did me any good. Becoming discouraged I left off all this treatment, and seeing S. S. S. advertised one day I decided to try it, and after taking it a short while the humor was driven from my blood and I was completely and permanently cured. Some seven months have elapsed since I was cured and have had no indication of a return of the disease.

GLIDDEN ROUTE BEING PLANNED

SARATOGA END OF JOURNEY.

Louis Strang, Famous Driver, Tells Aspiring Chauffeurs How To Control Their Cars.

SOME LIVE AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP.

AS DETAILS of the A. A. A. touring contest for the Glidden trophy are unfolded it is becoming evident that the event this year will be much more interesting and important from every view point than ever before. In no former year has the route been laid out through so much magnificent scenery, so many points of summer attractiveness and so many large cities. Never before has there been planned a tour and a daily schedule that would offer the watchful general user such a thoroughgoing and wholly fair and satisfactory criterion for judging the merits of a touring car.

There never has been either any former contest in which the cars of manufacturers could be entered with such assurance that they would travel strictly on their merits, under an adequate and impartial set of rules making it fair for all. The introduction of observers and the allowance of time for tire troubles will eliminate most of the element of luck in the records made, and the public and trade will know that a car that gets through with a good score, not to say a perfect one, must be a fine piece of automobile building.

The work of laying out the route of the tour is now in progress and about two-thirds completed. This important preliminary work is being done by Dal H. Lewis, secretary of the A. A. A. touring board, under the direction of Chairman F. B. Hower. Secretary Lewis is one of a party of four in a six-cylinder car of forty-five horse power, which arrived at Boston Thursday, after having left Buffalo on the morning of May 1. The companions of Secretary Lewis are Leon M. Bradley and N. Lazarnick, of New York, and the driver, Ray McNamara, of Indianapolis.

Thus far there has been no mishap to either car or its passengers to backset the work, but the progress has been slow, because at this season of the year even the good roads being chosen for the tour are in bad condition and not at all in the shape they will be in July. The pathfinders have had hard luck also in running from one rainy season into another. In spite of all, the route is now nearly measured, all the turn and landmarks noted and the arrangements for hotel accommodations for 500 persons made for nine nights, and there are only four more nights after Boston, two of them at Poland Springs, Me., where Sunday, July 19, will be spent.

The run for each day and the stopping places at night and Sundays, as thus far arranged, are: July 9, Buffalo, N. Y., to Cambridge Springs, Pa., 117.4 miles; July 10, Cambridge Springs to Pittsburg, Pa., 110.2 miles; July 11, Pittsburg to Bedford Springs, Pa., 106.4 miles; July 12 (Sunday), at Bedford Springs; July 13, Bedford Springs to Harrisburg, 107.3 miles; July 14, Harrisburg, Pa., to Philadelphia, 153.5 miles; July 15, Philadelphia to Milford, Pa.; July 16, Milford to Albany; July 17, Albany to Boston.

From Boston the tour will go up into Maine, back into the White Mountains and probably disband at Saratoga on July 22 or 23. The details beyond Boston will not be settled until after the pathfinding trip is completed.

As the pathfinder has proceeded Secretary Lewis has made note of every turn, of the character of the roadbed, the landmarks, the tolligates and their fees and of the distances between each turn and crossroad, so that the route book issued will be more complete in detail, more accurate and of permanent value as a touring guide.

There has been some criticism of the A. A. A. for not posting the roads around the country with A. A. A. signs, and in reply to this criticism a prominent member of the A. A. A. says: "In most States it is the work of the road commissioners to see that all roads are properly marked, and the various State associations and clubs of the American Automobile Association are using their influence to compel observance of these laws. Incidentally, it is the special work of each club to post the roads in its immediate vicinity, and this is being done in many cases and will probably continue to be done. These local clubs are the proper people to do the work. If you will figure out that the A. A. A. gets as much as $1 per year from a member, of which 75 cents goes to the State association and 25 cents to the National body, you can imagine that there must be a very great surplus for covering a country larger than Europe with road signs."

During the recent stay of the American fleet at Los Angeles, among the entertainments gotten up for the edification of the jolly Jack tars who thronged the city were automobile rides galore for which most every dealer gave up his entire stable of gasoline wagons greatly to the delight of the sailors, many of whom had never ridden in the horseless wagons. During the week races and contests of all kinds were held upon the beach which rivals that of Florida in length and hardness.

John H. Tyson, owner of the big racer and employer of Louis Strang, was arrested at Stamford, Conn., his home town, last week for disturbing the peace, and his chauffeur, Arthur Peterson, was also taken along on the charge of interfering with Detective Foley, who made the arrest. Mr. Tyson's big Briarcliff racer was in a garage at Stamford and Mr. Tyson, with several friends, came down to Stamford from New York for a little run in the car. It was a pretty fast run, and when it was brought to a standstill in front of the Hotel Carlton it snorted so loudly horses were frightened.

Complaint was made to the police, and Detective Foley went over to investigate. There was some question as to who drove the car, and Chief of Police Brennan directed that Tyson and all his friends be brought in. Two got away in the excitement.

The others were released.

The American entry in the Grand Prix has had its final try-out and tuning at the Buffalo factory and was shipped to Paris, where it will represent America in the great French auto Derby, accompanied by Louis Strang and J. B. Marquise, who spent two weeks at the Buffalo factory to complete final arrangements before sailing. These two, with the racing car, a practicing machine and a touring car, left on the steamer Lorraine for Havre, taking with them Edward Young and four assistants to take care of the American interests abroad. Harry S. Houpt will be in charge.

The new car which the Buffalo factory has built for the Grand Prix race is a regulation stock car, with the exception of the bore of the cylinders. These have been increased to 6.1 inches, the maximum allowance for a four-cylinder car in the race. The normal bore is 5.75 inches and the change increases the power of the car very decidedly.

It was expected that the car would make a straightaway speed of eighty-five miles an hour. The car has done rather better than that. It first showed eighty miles, but Strang found one or two troubles that needed correction and gradually the speed has been increased. On the last try-out it made between ninety-two and ninety-three miles and seemed to run with great consistency. Strang expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied with the car and believes he will make a creditable showing.

Louis Strang, who so successfully drove to victory over the narrow Briarcliff course, gives the following advice to aspiring drivers: In turning corners it is not necessary to disengage the clutch or to apply the brake; as you approach the corner check the speed of the car by throttling—open up when about half way around. Not, however, until you have ascertained that the coast is clear. Do not rush hills—take them at a moderate pace, but "open up" just as you strike the grade, so as to give the motor the "benefit of the doubt." You will have a feeling at first that you must hang on the steering wheel "like grim death;" this is unnecessary, and the feeling will soon wear away, when you will find that a slight touch is sufficient to turn the car in any direction. It is a good practice to use the left hand for steering only—the throttle lever may very easily be manipulated with the index finger for opening and the thumb for closing. This leaves the right hand free to operate the change speed lever. Learn to control the speed of the car with spark and throttle as much as possible, releasing the clutch only when absolutely necessary and resorting to the low gear only in extreme cases. It is hard to explain just how to use the spark and throttle, but the rule is "use the spark for speed and the throttle for power."

Savannah and Thanksgiving day seem pre-eminently the best city and the best date that could be selected for the Vanderbilt Cup race. Everybody who is interested in the event in any manner seems to be decided upon that point. Almost everyone in the trade would like to go to Savannah, but many would find it difficult to do so in October because then is the height of the autumn selling season. November in Georgia brings weather to be remembered. Publicity for the race will be much desired by the entrants and promoters, and October always finds the papers crowded with presidential election news. With a date like Thanksgiving, columns and everything will be clear.

Then, again, November would be better for the foreign makers intending to come over for the race, since the interval to the shows would be short. The advertising gained by good performances in a November cup race would be fresher and more effective at the shows than if they were made earlier in the year. In addition, Thanksgiving day would give Savannah a much longer time for preparation and to build the new road, the makers and importers would also have more time to prepare their cars, so Savannah and Thanksgiving day by all means.

Among the demonstrations, entertainments, banquets and oratorical sessions at Buffalo during the National Good Roads and Legislative Convention of the A. A. A., July 6, 7 and 8, will be a series of experiments with various dust preventives, such as westrumite, tarvia, oil, etc. In these a three and one-half-mile stretch of dustry road will be divided into seven sections, on each of which a different mixture will be applied. About two hundred automobiles will be used to test the efficacy of the various dust medicines. Governors, State engineers and various highway officials will be present to learn what they can of subjugating dusty roads.

The most direct way of making entry for the A. A. A. touring contest for the Glidden trophy is with Chairman F. B. Hower, 760 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., but those whom it will convenience can obtain information and make their entry at the office of Arthur Jervis, 29 West Forty-second street, New York.

Times have surely changed and the status of the automobile with them. A few years ago it was a big stunt for a car to cross the continent, and even until now it has been the custom to make great preparations for such a trip. A car starting from coast to coast usually carries an expert driver and mechanic, it is equipped in all manner of ways for a strenuous campaign and new parts are waiting for it at various points on the journey. The trip appears to have arrived, however, when there are men and cars equal to starting out on the trip wholly as a matter of pleasure with no fuss whatever. A case of this sort is that of H. C. Barroll, of Chicago, who is driving from Los Angeles to New York, with his family, in a 40 horse-power car. Mr. Barroll made no preparations beyond those for ordinary touring and has no repair supplies waiting for him anywhere. In fact, his little jaunt could not have been known about at all had he not casually mentioned that he would drive to New York when ordering his car sent to Los Angeles.

The Pennsylvania Motor Federation, in addition to working for a good and just State automobile law, to be introduced, and, if possible, passed at the next session of the legislature; State aid in the building and maintaining of highways, and the giving of whatever assistance is necessary to the American Automobile Association in the prosecution of the campaign now being waged by that national body, is calling particular attention to the Legislative and Good Roads convention, to be held in Buffalo on July 7 and 8, under the auspices of the A. A. A.

The Federation's new president, Robert P. Hooper, of Philadelphia, has been appointed as head of the committee of arrangements for the Buffalo convention. The meeting will be one of the most important motor functions ever arranged in America. Clubs everywhere have been asked to send representatives to the meeting to exchange ideas and to witness a series of demonstrations of road building and road building machines. These exhibitions are expected to prove highly instructive, complete and convincing.

The Quaker City Motor Club last week selected its quota of four delegates as follows: Edwin H. Lewis, A. T. James, Dr. W. J. Donnelly and L. E. French, the latter of whom very kindly donated a Pullman automobile for the journey. It is proposed to have as many clubs as possible arrange club runs to Buffalo, to arrive in that city on Monday, July 6, the day before the opening of the convention. Clubs having a membership not exceeding 100 will be entitled to three delegates. Those with a larger membership may send an additional delegate for each 100 members. The Governors of the different States have been asked to send delegations of supervisors and others interested in highways. President Hooper is anxious to have Pennsylvania come to the front with a banner representation. The National Grange will send several representatives to the convention. The Grange maintains a most friendly disposition toward automobilists.

CHANGING ABOUT OFTEN DEVELOPS BALL PLAYERS

Joe Kelley Thinks It Is Not Good For Men To Remain Always With Same Team Mates.

"IT'S a good thing for ballplayers to 'swing corners' occasionally—not always to stick to the same 'partners' during the entire time of their big league baseball dance," remarked Manager Kelley, of the Bostons, during a discussion of the changes that had taken place on the Boston team since season before last, when he played against the Beaneaters on the Cincinnati team.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the men I secured from New York in that trade last fall are better satisfied now than they were with the Giants," continued Kelley, "and probably will play better ball this year than they did last. The same, too, may be expected to hold good of the players turned over to New York by Boston.

"To show how wise it is to keep players moving in order that their efficiency may not be entirely destroyed by their remaining in any one place too long a time, one need only create a little list of the men who once belonged to Cincinnati, and were allowed to drift away from time to time. There is not particular reason to believe that these men would have done as well in Cincinnati as they are now doing, nor can one say that they wouldn't have been just as valuable to the Reds as they are to the teams with which they now are playing. Here's the bunch and the teams they are playing with now:

"Dorner, Ritchey and myself, Boston Nationals.

"Jesse Tannehill, Barrett, Boston Americans.

"Mathewson, Seymour, Donlin and Bridwell, New York Nationals.

"Eberfeld and Newton, New York Americans.

"Barbers and Maloney, Brooklyn.

"Hartsel and Seybold, Philadelphia Americans.

"Street, Jim Delehanty and Case Patton, Washington.

"Eddie Phelps and Howard Camnitz, Pittsburg.

"Hinchman and Chech, Cleveland.

"Crawford, Detroit.

"Steinfeldt, Fraser and Overall, Chicago Nationals.

"Jack Barry and Hostetter, St. Louis Nationals."

American Athletes To Fight the World For Olympic Honors.

AMERICAN brawn and speed are getting the finishing touches for the competition against the world in the Olympic games at London next July.

Next Saturday the intercollegiate competition will enable members of the committee to decide which of the various college athletes can worthiest represent Uncle Sam against the world's picked athletes.

A week later, June 6, three simultaneous tests will be held, one at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, another at St. Louis and the third at San Francisco.

At these amateur athletes not connected with colleges will have a chance to show what they can do.

With all this matter in hand, the committee on selection will have enough data to decide on the American team.

Although many names figure in the list of those empowered to do the choosing, the real work will actually fall to two men—James E. Sullivan and Julian W. Curtiss. Undoubtedly these men, with the success of the team at heart, will decide wisely, and name the best possible athletes on their showing at the several tests.

The competition at Shepherd's Bush, where the stadium is located, will really resolve itself into a matching of the world against athletic America. It is recognized, and is a fact driven home by two previous successes in Olympic contests, that Uncle Sam's athlete is the best there is, and to beat him will be the aim of every competitor, whether he hail from England, Germany, France, Russia, Greece or even far-off Japan.

Making all due allowances for the cordial feeling entertained by Englishmen for the United States and the courteous treatment all the competitors are certain to get, nevertheless a majority of the 150,000 persons who can see the games, 70,000 of them seated, will undoubtedly be lined up in sympathy against the men from the United States.

* * *

Records of Our Athletes.

Can the strength of the foreign athlete, aided by the sympathy of the crowd, operate to down Uncle Sam's performers?

Those who have carefully studied the men who will represent the United States contend that it is the strongest aggregation that ever aspired to win honors for the United States in a competition with athletes from other lands.

Barring only the long-distance running, where perhaps England's long-standing supremacy at this game will be maintained, there is a wealth of material for every sport, and the main task of Messrs. Sullivan and Curtiss will be to decide whom to rule out.

For the sprints the candidates include Cartmell, of Pennsylvania, the intercollegiate champion in the 122-yard events; Clyde Blair, Chicago; Archie Hahn, both of whom have done 9 4-5 seconds, and Dan Kelly, who went in 9 3-5 at Spokane, Wash., in 1906. These men will probably be called upon to face Minoru Fujii, of Tokio University, who is said to have done 100 in 9 2-5 on the grass. This performance is sworn to by the timers.

Any of these men will probably give a battle to the best that can be turned out on the other side.

Still more impressive is the showing of the Americans in the quarter-mile event. Wendell Baker, champion, J. Arthur Taylor, a negro, is conceded to be the best quarter-miler that ever put on spikes. His figures of 48 4-5 are a world's record for the event. Harry Hillman is another mighty performer at the medium distance. The Brooklyn man holds the record for the 440 indoors. Bonhag is another fast man for the quarter.

* * *

Sheppard a Strong Candidate.

For the mile and the half mile Melvin Sheppard is sure to be a strong candidate. Sheppard's sensational running has done much to add to the fame of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, for whom he has brought a number of records.

Although Sheppard's best event is the mile, he is nevertheless lightning fast for the half mile, and the man who beats him will have to go some. Sheppard went the distance indoors in 1 minute and 58 seconds, which is the indoor record.

Guy Haskins, if he be permitted to run, and James D. Lightbody, of Chicago, are sure to be formidable rivals to Sheppard for the honor of winning the mile event for the United States.

Haskins, who captured the mile event for the University of Pennsylvania in the last intercollegiate meet, is in trouble with his faculty, and his standing is somewhat in dispute, though just what ruling the A. A. U. will make on his case is still in doubt.

On a ten-lap indoor track Lightbody went the distance in 4 minutes and 24 seconds, but Sheppard beat even this with 4 minutes and 22 seconds, indoors, a phenomenal performance and one that is likely to stand for a good many times.

It is pretty generally admitted that Shrubb will be the winner in the distance runs, for the consumptive-looking little Englishman, on form is better than anybody who could be sent from this country, unless it be Longboat. But it is said that the Canadian Indian will not be declared eligible, in which case Morrison, winner of the recent twenty-five-mile Marathon race at Boston, will be perhaps the reliance of the United States.

* * *

America's Men of Might.

For the field events the United States has many men of might.

At the Penn relay games April 25 Walter Dray, of Yale, cleared 12 feet 6¼ inches, beating his own world's record by one inch. Against this phenomenal figure there is only one mark to set, and that is a vault of three inches more, said to have been made by Minoru Fujii, the same Tokio student credited with the 100 in 9 2-5 seconds. Dray's mark is the one that gets acceptance in the records.

There are many good hurdlers, including Hillman and Shaw, of Dartmouth, and the last-named is expected to be the winner of the event at the intercollegiate games. Shaw, in the relay meet, equaled Kranzlein's mark of 15.5 seconds for the high hurdles, 120 yards. It was conceded that if on that occasion he had been hurried he would have won first place.

Carrells, the great Michigan athlete, an all-around man, is a great hurdler; so is Martin Sheridan, the New York policeman, who is now credited with being the best all-around athlete of modern times.

Sheridan is a good jumper, but in this case men like Ewry, Cook, of Cornell, who made such great records while at Chillicothe as a schoolboy and Mount Pleasant the wonderful little Indian of the Carlisle School, are looked upon to make a showing.

For the shot-put there are a number of famed hurdlers, including W. W. Coe, with a record of 49 feet 6 inches; Horr, of Syracuse; Kruger, of Swarthmore, the intercollegiate champion; Martin Sheridan and John Flanagan.

* * *

Sheridan With a Discus.

Flanagan is the best man with the heavyweights, though Sheridan is also good, and McGrath, another New York policeman, has been coming along with some remarkable performances.

In the discus throw, which is an especially favored event in these classic games, Sheridan is the best man in the world.

When the Olympic games were held in Athens, Sheridan had never thrown in the Greek style. He went out on the field an entire novice to the event, but seeing that in order that his country be represented with credit he must master the sport of a lifetime in a few hours, he gave himself up to assiduous practice, and though he had only two days he learned the style so completely that on the day of the competition he beat the best men of the world, including the champion of Greece.

Prince George of Greece personally complimented the big Irishman, and said it was the greatest athletic feat he ever saw.

The stadium is nearly finished. The runing track is three laps to the mile and twenty-four feet wide, and it has no awkward corners. Outside the cinder path is a concrete cycle track 640 yards in length and thirty-five feet in breadth, specially constructed for speed and safety, and on this track cycle and motor cycle races will be held.

The grass arena is 335 yards long by a little over 100 yards broad. It contains on one side a swimming tank about 100 yards long and fifty feet in breadth, with a depth of twelve feet in the central part, where high-diving competitions are to take place. Water polo also will prove a very attractive event.

GREAT TRACK AND FIELD MEET THIS WEEK

Elaborate Preparations For Big Intercollegiate Championships At Philadelphia This Week.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 23.—The University of Pennsylvania will this week hold the intercollegiate track and field championship meet on Franklin Field. Although the Quakers will be the hosts to the visiting collegians, they hope to retain their championship laurels by outscoring the entire field. They realize, however, that they have no reason to be considered the favorites for this big meet, and that only some fortunate upset will land them in first place. Trainer Murphy ended the hard work for his charges this week, and from now on the men will simply rest up for the great ordeal.

Penn's hopes for victory are based on the assumption that twenty-five points will be enough to win the meet this year, so closely are Cornell, Yale, Michigan and Pennsylvania grouped in comparative strength. The Red and Blue does not have a big scoring team, but the men who are counted on to score the points are veterans, and if some of the younger men on opposing teams fall down the Pennsylvanians are likely to step in and take the meet. Had it not been for the loss of Haskins, Penn would have felt certain of victory, but his withdrawal took away ten sure points.

In estimating their chance for victory the Pennsylvanians feel sure of fifteen points with which to start. They think that Capt. Cartmell is unbeatable in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and that nobody can head off Taylor in the quarter-mile. The Quakers also feel sure that ex-Capt. Whitham will do something in both sprints. He has scored three years in succession, and this spring is running even better than two years ago, when he got two seconds. Trainer Murphy expects him to get at least a second and third, which would bring Penn's total up to twenty points.

To increase the total to twenty-five points or more is the problem that is worrying Pennsylvania. Polwell, who has been throwing the hammer well over 150 feet, is counted on for at least two points, and he may do even better than this. In the low hurdles and the broad jump the Quakers have a possibility in Harteraft, who can do 25 seconds over the sticks and beat 22 feet in the jump. Parker is a possibility only in the pole vault, but if some of the Yale stars fall down in this event he is likely to slip into fourth or third.

The Red and Blue has a chance only in the middle-distance runs. In the half-mile and mile Penn has Beck and Jones, who have beaten 1:59 for the half and 4:30 for the mile. But if they pick up even two points there will be surprise. Kinard, who has done better than 42 feet for the shot, may score in this event. The injury to Lloyd Whitham, a brother of the sprinter, hurts Penn's chances in the quarter-mile, where he was thought sure to score. This exhausts Penn's point-winning possibilities, but if some of the Quakers outdo themselves, as they did a year ago, or some of the other colleges fall down, Penn may still outscore the field.

ALL the games in the City League last Sunday were hotly contested, several of the teams winning by one run, which goes to show that the teams are evenly matched and that to the dopesters it looks like anyone's race. At present Hirsch Bros. and Guetigs have won all their games, but the latter claims that it will not be long before they hit the greasy slide, as all the other teams have been patching up their weak points and with their pitchers rounding into form there will certainly be some tall ball playing in the City League before the season is much older.

The games scheduled for to-day will give the fans a good line on some of the clubs, nearly all the games for to-day being between teams that are tied in the race, and no doubt large crowds will be attracted to the various parks to pull for their favorites. President Blechner's strict orders to his umpires not to tolerate rowdyism has entirely eliminated wrangling from the games, which insures the fans that they will see clean, fast games at all the parks.

New Albany Stars Vs. Royals.

Second Race—Loyal Maid, Denver Girl, Wheat Bread.
Third Race—Hasty Agnes, Woolsandals, Monsignor.
Fourth Race—Coal Black Lady, Exact, Charfield.
Fifth Race—Elysium, Charlotte Hamilton, She Wolf.
Sixth Race—Tivolini, Bonebrake, St. Valentine.
Two Best Bets—Hasty Agnes, Elysium.

WHAT was probably one of the best Gentlemen's Cup races ever run in this part of the country took place at Churchill Downs yesterday afternoon. The event was won by Bowden Caldwell, a young Louisville advertising man, who had the mount on La Velta.

La Velta finished first by a length, but close behind the daughter of Kingston came Dario, on which young Collier had the mount, and following him was High Bear, with Mr. Ritte in the saddle. These three had put up a splendid exhibition of horsemanship through the stretch, and old-time turfmen who witnessed the race declared that professional jockeys could have done no better. Mr. McCulloch, of England, a gentleman rider of considerable experience on the flat and over the sticks on the "tight little isle," also displayed marked ability, but his mount, Waswift, was not good enough to finish in the money.

Contrary to expectations, the Gentlemen's Cup race was run without any serious accident. It was feared by the officials that some of the boys would be thrown. Dr. Baker lost his mount, Mr. Reinhardt, in the back stretch, and at the start Fortunate almost threw Mr. Cundiff, but neither of the riders was hurt.

The splendid card offered was the magnet which drew a magnificent crowd to the Downs yesterday. Grandstand, clubhouse, betting shed and paddock, as well as the lawns leading to them, were thronged throughout the afternoon. The women spectators were especially handsome in their new summer frocks and bright-colored millinery. The clubhouse, while the cup race was being run, was a sight worth seeing and one to be remembered. To a stranger it seemed that all the pretty girls in Kentucky were gathered there, but he had only to look at the grandstand and its rows of steps to learn how badly he was mistaken.

The secondary feature of the card but the race which was the real feature to the lovers of the horse was the fourth on the programme. It was the Frank Fehr Stakes, at one mile, and was won by Darknight, which ran the distance in 1:39 3-5, which is only three-fifths of a second slower than the track record. Darknight beat Lens, Plantland, Zal and other good ones. In the sixth race Cymbal broke the track record for a mile and a sixteenth by a fifth of a second, lowering The Minx's time to 1:45 4-5. In the third race George Long's Derby colt, Balbus, ran six furlongs in 1:12 3-5.

Minot Beats Favorite.

In a close finish that lost the race for the favorite Minot scored the victory in the first race of the day. Betting was unusually brisk on this event, and Frontenac received the most support, while Minot was one of the outsiders. Stable information had it, however, that the son of Lamplighter was ready and a few lucky individuals who accepted the tip got a good price for their money, the tickets calling for $114.90 each.

Minot was third to break to a good start, but Heidel allowed him to drop back to fourth place before he began to make an effort to catch the leaders, and then he had all he could do to get the gelding up in time to get the verdict by the shortest possible margin from Frontenac, which was fighting desperately to maintain the lead.

The Griffin horse was off in the lead and had to be urged every step of the way to keep his nose in front, but the rush of Minot was too much for him and he gave way in the last stride. Hannibal Bey was off poorly, but he saved a lot of ground on the turns and was closing fast in the run through the stretch, and secured the show money a length and a half away.

Dandy Dancer managed to get to the front in the first quarter, but the pace proved too warm for the filly and she dropped back and was not in the money at the finish. Hollow also showed some speed in the early running, but he evidently needed a race to put him in condition, this being his first start since the winter meeting at the Crescent City.

* * *

Another Longshot Wins.

Another longshot scored in the second race, W. A. Leach, which went to the post practically untouched in the speculation, coming home in front. The son of Star Shoot ran in greatly improved form and even his owner did not believe that he was ready to run a winning race, but he was off well and in the struggle for the commanding position hung on gamely and secured the decision by a length from Acquia.

The Talbot filly, however, ran the best race, as she was the last to get started when the gate went up, and the finish found her making a determined effort to catch the leader, but the race was not far enough and second place was the best she could get.

Direct was a contender at all stages and was close up as the field was turning into the stretch, but he was tiring at the end, and it required all that was left in him to hold on long enough to get the short end of the purse by a head from Woolwinder, which was coming fast in the stretch. Ben Howe gave his backers some hope in the early part of the race, but the distance was farther than he cared to go and he was a poor fifth at the finish. Roseburg II. was cut off at the top of the stretch and crowded back to the rear. Fundamental, the third choice, was never prominent and finished in the ruck.

Great Pirate Runs Third.

Great Pirate, a colt that gave promise of duplicating his splendid performances as a 2-year-old, lost considerable prestige when he finished third in his field in the third race, in which he ruled as the favorite. The Riddle colt carried a world of money, as he figured to win easily and his defeat was the more crushing from the fact that he was favored by getting off in a forward position and was well up in the running at all stages of the race. On the turn for home he managed to get up into second place, but the finish found him third on the list.

Balbus was returned the winner. The Long colt getting off sixth to a fair start lost no time in closing up on the leader and he drew away in the final drive and beat Honest by a length. The latter had not been considered as a factor and received only light support, being one of the extreme outsiders in the betting, but he seemed to be in excellent form and forced a fast pace to the top of the stretch, where the winner passed him.

Huck, the second choice, ran with the trailers for the first half of the journey, then came fast in the last quarter and finished fourth. Usuary showed a good burst of speed to the stretch turn, where he quit badly. The others were outrun all the way.

* * *

Darknight Takes Stake.

The Frank Fehr Selling Stakes, the feature of the card, was the fourth number to be decided, and it resulted in another upset for the wise speculators, who had placed their confidence in Zal from the Gerst stable. Darknight was returned the winner, and Lens, which was coupled with Aunt Rose as the Dunne entry, finished second.

The stake was at a mile with a net value of $1,490 to the winner, and the various owners were anxious to annex the victory and all the starters were given a lively play in the betting. After a short delay of two minutes at the post they were sent away to a good start and Zal, which was off in fifth place, rushed to the front in the first quarter and threatened to make a show of his company. He was leading by four lengths at the half-mile pole, but on the backstretch he began to falter and allowed Darknight to pass him as the field was turning for home.

The son of First Mate was completely tired out from the dizzy pace and was not in the money at the finish. Darknight moved up into a contending position from sixth place in the first furlong, and responded gamely when called upon in the last quarter, getting the verdict by a length. Lens was back in the bunch the greater part of the journey, but he finished with a rush and secured the place by two lengths from Plantland, which ran in a forward position throughout.

* * *

Mr. Caldwell the Winner.

The Gentleman's Cup race was fifth on the card, and La Velta, ridden by Mr. Caldwell, was the winner. This event attracted the most interest from a social viewpoint, and each rider had a large number of friends rooting for him. Mr. Caldwell no doubt put up the best ride, but he had the advantage of three months' daily practice, while some of the others had no training until two or three days before the race.

La Velta was off with the leaders and forced the pace from the clubhouse turn home, and had something left at the end, winning by half a length. Dairo was crowded back at the first turn, but was going strong in the last quarter, and got the place by two lengths from High Bear. With better luck the Bryson gelding would have won. High Bear was not prominent in the early part of the race, but he threatened to be a contender in the last half. C. H. Shilling followed the pacemaker to the head of the stretch, where he tired badly and fell back to fourth place. Fortunate closed up a big gap in the last quarter from a poor beginning, and the others were badly outpaced all the way. Pete Vinegar was off on his stride, but was knocked out of the race at the first turn, where Waswift bumped into him, which forced him back.

Cymbal Takes Closing Race.

In the final race of the day Hostile Hyphen and Margaret Randolph were heavily played and ruled as the favorites. The pair seemed to have about an equal chance to connect with the purse, and although they both finished inside of the money, the victory went to Cymbal, from the Gerst stable.

Pickens had the leg up on the winner, and he used good judgment in taking the commanding position at the start, and he never relinquished his hold on the lead, forcing the pace by a length to the stretch, where he drew away from his company, winning easily by two lengths from Hostile Hyphen. The latter ran a good race, and responded gamely to punishment in the run home, but he was not good enough to get close to the winner.

Margaret Randolph rated along in behind the pacemaker for a mile then hung slightly, but had no opposition for the show money, being six lengths in front of Water Cooler, which had come from the rear ranks and was gaining on the leaders at the end. Beau Brummel was prominent only in the first half mile, when he quit badly, and although he made another effort to get up in the last quarter, he was a poor sixth at the finish. Hybird was practically left at the post and trailed his field all the way.

Steeplechase For Monday.

A steeplechase handicap over the short course is the feature of the card that has been arranged for Monday's sport at the Downs. Twelve good timbertoppers have accepted the weights assigned them, and it should result in a sparkling exhibition. A purse race at a mile is next in importance, and a small but select field will go to the post, including Hasty Agnes, Woolsandals and Monsignor. In the other races the fields are too large to guess with any degree of certainty as to the outcome, although in the fifth race Elysium seems to stand out above the others. W. A. Leach was off winging and in a hard drive managed to maintain the lead to the end. Acquia was last to get away, but she wore down the leaders and was closing fast at the finish. Direct was a contender all the way, but was tiring at the end and was hard ridden to get the show. Woolwinder finished resolutely from a rear position. Roseburg II. suffered from interference.

Balbus—Straight, $54.20; place, $29.30; show, $12.90. Honest—Place, $85.80; show, $36.10. Great Pirate—Show, $7.70.

Balbus, running to his best form, wore down the leaders in the stretch and won in a drive. Honest forced the pace throughout, but tired slightly in the last furlong, and lasted just long enough to get the place from Great Pirate, which was also ready to quit. Huck came up from the rear and closed with a rush. Usury had early speed, then quit to nothing.

Darknight caught Zal on the back stretch and held his field safe after that. Lens came from the rear and ran a splendid race in the last quarter. Plantland ran up with the leaders all the way and had no opposition for the show money. Zal ran out in front with a long lead in the first half, then quit. W. T. Overton went wide on turning into the stretch. Aunt Rose and Heine were outrun all the way.

La Velta, well handled, assumed the lead in the first half and was never headed. Dario was crowded back on the first turn, but he closed fast in the run through the stretch. C. H. Shilling was a sharp factor all the way, but tired in the last sixteenth. The others were outrun all the way.

Cymbal, straight, $32.90; place, $17.20; show, $9.80. Hostile Hyphen, place, $11.50; show, $8.40. Margaret Randolph, show, $7.60.

Cymbal forged into the lead in the first few strides and forced a fast pace, drawing away in the last sixteenth. Hostile Hyphen responded to punishment in the last quarter and easily took the place. Margaret Randolph was a sharp factor to the top of the stretch, where she tired. Water Cooler made up a lot of ground and was going fast at the end. Canoplan weakened in the stretch. The others were badly strung out at the finish.

CHAT OF THE COURSE.

Bowden Caldwell, winner of the Gentlemen's Cup race, last year finished second with Swiftwing to Bert Collier, the winner. In 1906 Mr. Caldwell had the leg up on Madoc in the Gentlemen's Cup race, but his mount, tiring under him, did not finish in the money.

Mr. Caldwell has been exercising horses at the track for the past three months, was in splendid condition and his expectations were fully realized in winning the race. He rode the race according to instructions from the trainer and landed his mount first. He lives at 1723 First street, and is in business with his father, who conducts an advertising agency in the Courier-Journal building.

* * *

Mr. McCulloch, the young Englishman who had the mount on Waswift, when interviewed, said that his mount began to tire at the five-eighths pole. He was then in second position, and he started to make his ride, but found that the horse was "dead under him." He used whip and spur on his mount, but to no avail. His horse began to lag and nothing that he could do could make him keep up. Mr. McCulloch has had a great deal of experience in riding. In Gatehouse, England, his home, he is known as a daring cross-country rider.

Mr. McCulloch won the Gentlemen's Cup race at Memphis last year on Sambo. He came to Louisville expecting to win the local cup race, but it was not the young Englishman's fault that he lost. He put up a grand ride on his mount, but he did not have the horse under him. Mr. McCulloch is in the cotton brokerage business at Memphis, being connected with the firm of Goold & Co. He sails for his home at Gatehouse, England, next week. He spoke in the very highest terms of the Louisville Jockey Club officials, whose guest he was. He expects to make another try for the Louisville cup next year. He will return to Memphis next fall to resume his business.

J. W. Russwurm, secretary of the Tennessee State Fair, and breeder of thoroughbred horses and Berkshire hogs, has sold the unnamed chestnut filly yearling, by Imp. Ornus, dam Addie C., dam of Sidney Lucas, winner of the American Derby, to J. M. Johnson, of Oakland, Cal.

This youngster is pronounced by competent judges as the best filly that has been raised in Tennessee for many years. She is engaged in both the Futurity and Great Brood Mare Stakes.

Mr. Russwurm also sold the broodmare Irksome, by Iroquois, dam Hilda, by Great Tom, to Tom Walters, of Detroit, Mich., and to Albert Watkins & Co., Nashville, Tenn., the 3-year-old filly Odalie, by Phoenix, dam Merle, by Tammany.

H. E. Rowell is on his way East with a string of the horses of Thomas H. Williams, the master of Oakland, who intends a vigorous campaign over the Jockey Club tracks. Dr. Rowell is also bringing with him Jockey Gilbert, the lightweight, who is under contract to ride for James R. Keene this season. Walter Miller, who has been riding for Mr. Williams all through the winter season, is booked to leave for the East in a few days.

In the string being shipped across the continent are Rubia Grandpa and Rosevale, the fillies that have been nominated for the Astoria Stake. Both have shown high quality in the Far West and will be specially pointed for the Dinner Stake that is run during the Gravesend meeting.

By a simple calculation it is found that the Brooklyn Handicap will this season be a very expensive stake for the Brooklyn Jockey Club. Estimating that a field of a dozen starters go to the post—and it is hardly probable there will be any more—the club will have to spend $18,190 to make up the $25,000 value, which is guaranteed.

The opening date of the meeting is Monday, June 1, when the Brooklyn Handicap and the Expectation will be decided. The meeting continues until June 18, there being sixteen days of racing. In that time twenty-seven stakes are to be decided. In addition to the old stakes there has been added to the programme the Castleton, a five-furlong dash for 2-year-old fillies, to be run on the last day of the meeting.

The attendance yesterday was all that could be desired. The crowd was large and all were amply rewarded who were fortunate enough to have tickets on the horses which finished in the money, as most of them paid good prices. In the opening event Minot upset the form players by landing the long end of the purse. This is the best race ever run by the gelding over a fast track. It can be mentioned here that William Gerst's horses at present are in excellent form and will do to string to in any kind of company.

Chief Archibald, of the Cincinnati Fire Department, departed for that city last evening, business requiring his attention. He was delighted with his visit and is very much impressed with the parimutuels, and thinks it is the only way to wager on a horserace. Chief Filmore Tyson certainly gave the Buckeye fire fighter a good time while he was his guest, and it is safe to say that when the Falls City chief visits the Queen City he can get anything he wants.

* * *

Pat Dunne, who is one of the shining lights of the American turf, had the misfortune to meet with bad racing luck in the Frank Fehr Stakes. His good filly Aunt Rose was almost knocked down at the clubhouse turn, which put her out of the running. There was considerable crowding at this point, the filly suffering the most. Jockey E. Martin did well to keep his mount on her feet. She might have won with clear sailing, as she seemed to be on edge.

* * *

Lens ran a good race considering this was the second time the gelding had ever started in a race over seven-eighths. The owner has had him three years and never worked him a mile but once, which was in 1:46. After having yesterday's race under his belt, he ought to give a good account of himself over a distance of ground.

* * *

There was a misunderstanding about the filly She Wolf being sold to J. R. Wainwright, as she was purchased by Fred Luzader for E. A. Brennan, for the place stated, $1,000.

* * *

A person could have bought a straight ticket on each horse in the first race, which would have cost him $45, on which he would have made a net profit of $69.90, taking down $114.90. In the second event, by buying a straight, place and show ticket on each horse that faced the barrier, $150 would have been invested, taking down $386.70, leaving a profit of $231.70 net. In the third race one ticket on each horse, straight, place and show, would have been an investment of $150, taking down $226, and the winnings would have been $71 net. In the fourth event, which was a six-horse race, two horses being coupled, a straight ticket on each would have earned $60.60 on an investment of $30, making $433.20, when it would have been using good judgment to "take to the tall grass."

* * *

Mr. Ritte rode a good race on High Bear up to the three-eighths pole, when he pulled up his mount twice between that point and the quarter pole. The horse was running great guns and might have won if taken to the outside, as he is a great stretch runner.

No doubt he had heard about the horse wanting to go over a longer route, as several bets were made that High Bear would go another mile after the race before he could be pulled up.

It was W. A. Leach who fattened the bank rolls of a number of persons. It may take a number of Leachs to take the swelling out of some of their heads after they get through celebrating.

Honest showed a return to his 2-year-old form by setting a heart-breaking pace as Great Pirate was chasing him.

The base drummer took the tip on Cymbal and put down a bet.

* * *

It was a hot day and a great many played Water Cooler. He ran dry before the finish, as it was a warm pace.

* * *

The way the second race was run Acquia was pounds the best, as she was off badly and came with a rattle when clear of interference. The effort to get to the front was too much for the filly and she weakened when the pinch came.

* * *

Dandy Dancer was responsible for the defeat of the favorite, Frontenac, in the opening event. She ran neck and neck with the Kingston horse up to the stretch turn, which caused him to tire badly in the stretch run under the heavy impost.

YOUNG JAY GOULD WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

New Yorker Defeats Eustace H. Miles, the English Player, In Three Sets.

LONDON, May 23.—The Olympic games court tennis competition came to an end this afternoon at Queen's Club in a victory for Jay Gould, of New York, who defeated Eustace H. Miles, the English player, in three straight sets. The scores were 6-5, 6-4, 6-4.

This is the third defeat in important matches of the present year that Gould, the American-British champion, has inflicted upon Great Britain's best player. Gould's success of to-day was most decisive. On the occasions of his previous victorious he was a little stale from a long period of training.

On the other hand, a few weeks of rigid training and constant practice in the recent tournaments improved Mr. Miles' form. When the pinch came, however, the American player seemed always to have something up his sleeve, and while his strokes to-day were not quite so severe as usual, his judgment always came to his aid when an extra effort was necessary.

On several occasions Mr. Miles was in the lead, and at one time he seemed to be a sure winner of the first set, the score standing 5-2 in his favor. With a splendid rally, however, the American gradually evened up matters and eventually captured the set.

The Englishman again took the lead in the second set, the score at one time standing 3-2, and later 4-3 in his favor, but Gould ultimately won.

In the third set Miles went to 2-0 before his opponent found himself and took the next game. Miles captured the next and the score stood 3-1.

Gould won the next three games and the Englishman won the eighth, thus making the score 4-4. This was Miles' last rally, for Gould won the next two games and the match.

Counting by games, Mr. Gould won by the score of 18-13.

Falls City "Silents" Win.

The Falls City "Silents", the deaf and dumb team, began their baseball season with the team composed of pupils of the Kentucky School for the Deaf, yesterday afternoon. The game was much better than was expected, but for errors in the eighth inning the score would have been much closer. Weiner pitched good ball for the "Silents," while Napier kept the players of the Falls City team guessing. The final score was 12 to 2 in favor of the K. S. D. lads. The "Silents" would like to arrange a game for Sunday, May 31, with the Kentucky Lads, or any amateur team that wants to play them. Write to W. C. Hugate, 234 West Walnut street.

Rambler 34

"Rambler" Straight-Line Drive.

"Rambler" direct connecting motor; no universal joints in drive shaft; there being but one joint and as that one is located between the engine and the transmission, the propeller shaft is much longer than is commonly used, with correspondingly less angle.

The large 36-inch wheels raise the differential so the propeller shaft is nearly on the level with the engine shaft. To overcome the slight difference, the engine is tilted so when load is in, no angle exists, and the straight line drive like the illustration is obtained.

This means the smallest amount of power is lost between the motor and road wheels.

Let us send you a book giving full particulars of the "Rambler" straight line drive and the many other features found on the "RAMBLER" 34, THE CAR OF STEADY SERVICE.

More beautiful "Ramblers" are sold in Louisville than any other car.

GREAT CROWD AT WOODBINE

Twenty-five Thousand People See the Opening At Toronto.

SEAGRAM'S KING'S PLATE.

Havoc Colt Has Enough Left to Stall Off Challenge of Shimonese In Stretch.

FOUR FAVORITES ARE FIRST.

TORONTO, Can., May 23.—[Special.]—The opening day's sport at the Woodbine track was witnessed by one of the largest crowds at the historic old course since its organization forty-eight years ago. Twenty-five thousand people passed through the gates before the bugle called the horses to the post for the first event. Canadians turned out to do honor to their Governor General, Lord Grey, who was escorted by the Royal Dragoons and took his seat in the vice regal box amid the cheers of the vast crowds.

The racing was all that could be desired. The feature event on the card was the forty-eighth running of the King's Plate at a distance of one and one-quarter miles, in which only Canadian-bred horses were eligible. King Edward's gift of fifty guineas was added to the monetary value of the purse.

Thirteen horses started in the classic event, and the Seagram entry, which comprised Seismic, Half-a-Crown and Dog of War, were installed the favorites at even money. The Hendrie entry, Shimonese and Archie Whyte, were next in demand, while the others any price could be had against their chances.

Capistan, ridden by Tommy Burns, came in for a smart play shortly before post time, and he went to the post the third choice. After a short delay at the post Starter Dade caught them in line and they were away to a good start, with Supper Dance, from the Woodstock stable, assuming command. He flattered his backers leading until they were straightened out for the final run, when Fairbrother brought up the favorite, racing Supper Dance into defeat. When a few yards from the wire he was challenged by Shimonese, but the Havoc colt had enough left, passing under the wire half a length in front of Shimonese, with the other Seagram horse, Half-a-Crown finishing third, ten lengths in front of Table Bay.

As the race was run, Shimonese was the best horse and with an energetic ride could not have lost the race. Forty books cut in for the day's business and they worked under a disadvantage owing to the large crowds. Four out of six winners were heavily played and the public got much the better of the argument. The West was well represented in the layers' line, as over half of the bookmakers doing business were familiar figures at the Kentucky tracks in the past.

Jeffersonville and North Vernon.

The "Jeff" team will oppose the strong North Vernon team this afternoon at Jeffersonville park at 2:45 o'clock. The North Vernon team is composed of players who have had minor league experience and is the fastest independent team in the Hoosier State. The "Jeff" team will try to keep up their winning streak, but will probably have trouble in solving the benders of Pitcher Lett, of the visitors, who is held by the Indianapolis team. Devite or Joss will pitch for the "Jeff" team, and Welke, late of the Waco, Tex., League team, will replace Baker behind the bat, and Knoop of the Michigan State League, will covere second base. The line-up of the teams are:

Jeff.	Position.	North Vernon.

Devitt, Joss	Pitchers	Lett
Doyle	First base	Sloderbecker
Knoop, Reed	Second base	Westfall

RECORD MADE IS VERY GOOD

LOCAL CRANKS IN HIGH GLEE.

Burke's Team Has Played Twenty-One Games On Trip and Won Majority of Them.

LIVELY CHAT OF THE GAME.

JIMMY BURKE and his baseball warriors have played great ball on the present trip. The Colonels, after facing the Senators at Columbus to-day and to-morrow, will return home Tuesday, May 26, to tackle the leaders of the American Association, Manager Carr's husky Hoosiers, in a series of four games at Eclipse Park. The Indianapolis crowd is a strong bunch, and the chances are the local fans will witness bitterly fought contests. It is likely that "Rube" Marquard, the wizard twirler of the association, will pitch in the opening engagement.

The Colonels have played excellent ball since they left Louisville. They have contested in twenty-one games so far on the present trip and succeeded in annexing eleven games to their won column. This is a splendid record for the locals, and the followers of Burke and his troupe are in high glee over the showing made. In fact, not since the old American Association days has such a feat been accomplished by a club representing Louisville. Only two more games will be played at Columbus, and it is dollars to doughnuts that the Colonels will take one of the remaining contests, or probably both.

According to the article of ball Burke and his hustlers are furnishing, they will land home with a proud record. To split even with the Mudhens and Senators on their own ash heap is evidence that the Colonels are doing some ball playing of the tallest sort. The improvement shown by the locals is gratifying to the supporters of Burke and his clan. The boys have all worked hard and pulled together in order to gain victories. How well they have succeeded is attested by the great results achieved on the present road games. They have won more engagements this trip on foreign ballyards than did the other teams of the Eastern circuit of the American Association.

Since the boys have slugged the sphere with more frequency to safe territory they have added more scalps to their victory column. The most of the games lost by the Colonels on this trip, almost ended, was by one score, and several of these were for extra innings. So it can be seen that Manager Burke and his cohorts are playing tiptop ball from almost every angle. With the improvement noted in the Colonels' batting department, the locals begin to loom up, as their fielding at present is of the high-class order—in fact, they easily lead the association, and these conditions will make the local squad one of the strong contenders for the flag. There is no denying the fact that the Colonels will rank very near the top or make some team hustle to keep them out of the first division.

If last year's work of the Colonels is any criterion, the chances are they will continue to show improvement as the season grows older. It will be remembered that the locals played the best ball of any association team, and had the schedule started on June 1 there is no doubt but that the local crew would have nabbed the pennant. So what can prevent them from duplicating last year's performance? The team is almost the same with the exception of pitchers and two infielders. The local followers hope to see the Colonels repeat the trick of 1907, and if it is done, with the present standing of the home team, it will have to be counted on as one of the foremost candidates for the banner.

The Colonels are now in the best of playing condition. Not a member of the local squad is on the sick or crippled list. Their twirlers are all in tiptop shape and pitching splendid ball. The veterans have rounded into form and are playing at top speed. This is particularly true of the "old reliable" Heine Peitz. The youngsters are holding up their end in grand style. The Colonels are improving in stickwork. In every town where the locals have played the baseball critics have pronounced the fact that Burke and his group of balltossers will have to be reckoned with. With Jesse Stovall now playing in the right garden, the Colonels' batting strength has been materially bolstered.

Tom Chivington, the manager of the Louisville baseball club, believes that Jim Burke's Colonels stand an excellent show of copping the flag if they can keep up the pace they have shown since the start of the season. Says the optimistic Chivington in the Kansas City Journal:

"The Louisville pitchers have been working in fine form and there is no danger of the twirlers letting up. They are good pitchers and are in condition to heave good ball throughout the season, barring accidents. We have seven pitchers at present, but we expect to dispose of one of them soon, as the club will carry only six pitchers this year. Young Joe Chabek, who pitched the thirteen-inning game against the Blues, is at home. The pitchers with the club are: Jimmy Durham, Ambrose Puttmann, John Halla, Charlie Adams and Ed Poole. They look mighty good.

"The team hasn't been hitting, but is bound to improve. There are several players on the team who have always hit around .270. They are now hitting about .200. So you see the Louisville club is almost sure to improve in hitting. And when the team gets to slugging the ball in the same tune it is fielding and running the bases then look out for the Louisville colors at the top of the mast."

Chivington believes that the Kansas City team has a chance to win the pennant this year and he asserts that he doesn't see how the club can finish lower than third place. There are numerous fans roundabout who hope Tom is right about it.

* * *

Senators, Hens and Hoosiers are united in thinking that Cliff Curtiss, of Milwaukee, is going to pitch his way up to a chance in 1909 with a major league team. They wonder at times why he wasn't taken up for this season or last.

* * *

There is agitation going on for a lengthening of the American Association playing season. It is argued that the league covers too much territory for a campaign of five months. Another half month may be tacked on and thus make the end come late in September. Major seasons do not close until the first week in October. In Kansas City, George Tebeau and Bob Quinn talked the lengthening subject over. Tebeau seems to favor it, and Quinn certainly does think the plan should be adopted. He and Bill Armour discussed the same topic the other day in St. Paul. Armour, too, thinks that more time should be allowed for the teams in making the long jumps.

* * *

"Jap" Barbeau thinks that some player will get a call to near-death on the Milwaukee park this season. That sign on the center-field fence is bad for the vision, he says. While the Hens were there Hopkins lost track of the ball and it landed against his head. Fortunately, it was not going at the highest speed and the Toledo left fielder was not hurt seriously.

* * *

Harry Swacina—premier fielding first sacker of the National League.

That is what they are saying in Pittsburg now of the Pirates' big guardian of the initial bag, and no team that has been along this way thus far this season has been able to produce any proof to the contrary.

Pittsburg fans have now seen Konetchy, of the Cardinals; Ganzel, of the Reds; Chance, of the Cubs, and Tenney, of the Giants. They know what Bransfield, of the Phillies; Jordan, of the Superbas, and McGann, of the Doves, can do, and they have no hesitancy in pronouncing "Swats" the greatest fielder of them all.

* * *

Manager John J. McGraw, of the New York baseball team, has considerable respect for the much-venated Boston outfit.

"Joe Kelly has a fine ball team," remarks Manager "Muggsy," "and it is likely to make considerable trouble for the other teams before the season is over. Kelly is just the kind of leader Boston needed, and he has personally strengthened the team. If he were to play regularly his influence would be felt still more.

"Bill Dahlen is playing a great game at short for the Doves, and I am inclined to believe that a change of scene was all that was needed to improve him. He is doing far better for Kelly than he did for me last season, but I am not kicking at that. Bowerman is a good catcher, and he has helped the Bostons where they were very weak. He is always aggressive and wide awake, and has put a lot of life into the other members of the team.

"I don't think McGann and George Brown will last much longer in the big league, but they are doing very well, too. Boston has a wonder in that man Beaumont. I wish Barney Dreyfuss had handed him to me when he thought that 'Beau' was all in. There is not an outfielder in the league playing better ball than he is now. He is stinging the ball as he did in his old Pirate days, and is running bases and fielding with all his old cleverness. He would strengthen any team. I talked to him while we were in Boston, and he told me that his legs were not bothering him in the least, and that he really felt better than he had for several seasons.

"I consider the Boston team a deal stronger than Brooklyn, and look for the Doves to beat the Superbas out in the race by several notches. Donovan's men have not got off to a good start, and I believe their worth has been overestimated. But look out for Boston."

The American League is threatened with a revolt, one of the most unique situations that has confronted the national game since the inception of organized baseball in 1876.

The trouble, say the boys, is a direct result of the czarlike methods of Ban Johnson in thrusting upon the players hotel accommodations in Chicago and other Western cities that are not up to a tramp's standard.

The clubs are forced by Johnson to eat food in those cities that is ordinarily consumed by the most menial of the hotel employes. In one city the players are fed at some tables hastily put in a large hall, where the employes of the hotel usually congregate.

The food does not compare favorably with the average free lunch. In Chicago they eat next the barroom in a space that is vacant except when Big Ban sends one of his ball teams to occupy it.

It has been suggested among the Cleveland players to take a united and determined stand against those miserable accommodations, thus forcing the issue on Big Ban, who, with his $15,000 a year salary and expenses, sees no reason why mere athletes should not eat whatever is offered them.

While not trying to butt in, the writer, nevertheless, in common with many local fans, humbly offers the suggestion that the Louisville club management throw out a line and drag in Roy Thomas who has just been let out by the Philadelphia club. Thomas is a good fielder, a fair sticker and a clever run-getter.

* * *

Billyam Keeler, the Yankees' sterling right fielder, walloped out a homer last Wednesday. It was his first four-base slap of the season. In fact, it was back in 1906 when he got his last one.

* * *

Jimmy Dygert, of the Athletics, and Southpaw Burns, of the Nationals, who were leading the A. L. pitchers, got their bumps together. Each member owned three victories and no defeats up to last Wednesday. Lattimore, of the Naps, and Mathewson were other twirlers to receive their first defeat of the present campaign.

* * *

Christie Mathewson, after winning six straight games for the Giants, got bumped by the Pirates. Usually he's very effective against that team. But last Wednesday Clarke's chaps got to him in the fifth round. They tallied four times, sewing up the show. Mattie retired in favor of young Crandall, who showed sterling form.

* * *

Manager McCloskey of the Cardinals can secure Shortstop Phil Lewis of the Superbas, whose work this season so far has been sensational in the extreme, if he is willing to part with one of his pitchers.

In other words, if McCloskey will give Manager Donovan the choice of his pitchers—and "Patsy" is willing that Fromme be barred.

Donovan is disappointed at the slow traveling of his team, and wants to bolster up his pitching staff. He is reported to have said that he might be induced to part with Lewis, if he can secure a pitcher like Karger or Raymond from McCloskey.

There is a chance that the two managers will get together before the team plays in the East which will land Lewis in St. Louis and net Brooklyn one of the Cardinals' pitchers.

Christie Mathewson of the New York Giants tasted his first defeat of the season in Pittsburg last Wednesday. Prior to that time he had been bracketed six times in a row. As the record includes games up to and including last Monday, Matty is shown at the top of the N. L. boxmen, but in reality he has tumbled.

Overall, Frazer and Brown came after Mathewson. The first two named have gone to the post four times each and have been returned winners every time. Brown has won the two games he pitched. Reulbach is another Cub twirler with a 1.000 notch. Victor Willis, who was late in getting started, has faced the enemy twice. He has handed out nothing but nothings for eighteen innings.

Youngster McQuillen of the Phillies, after losing his first game, has been the winner five times running.

* * *

Youngster Schlitzer of the Athletics is really the leading boxman of the A. L. Prior to last Wednesday he was sharing honors with Jimmy Dygert, also of the Athletics, and Southpaw Burns of the Nationals. But Wednesday Dygert and Burns both come to grief. That leaves Schlitzer on top by himself. As the records include games to and including last Monday, Dygert and Burns are still in the lead with Schlitzer.

* * *

Milwaukee took Columbus into camp four times, and any way you figure it it means something. If Columbus is strong, then Milwaukee is stronger. If Columbus is weak, then Columbus is out of this year's race. Milwaukee jumped from second to first class when Brown was signed. When Donahue left the Brewers to go to the Sox, Milwaukee became weak at the first sack and never recuperated. Brown is the first man secured since Donahue who fills the bill. Bevill, Bateman, Haynes, Conners and others filled the job, but didn't quite do.

Brown does do and he suddenly has lifted Milwaukee into a leading position. One position on a ball team can throw a team to the bottom. The Brewers have plugged that weak position and are in the race from now on. The pitchers are exceptionally good. Schneiberg, Curtis, Manske and Daugherty make a grand quartet, to say nothing of Quate Bateman. Randall is a big addition to the outfield. In batting, fielding and pitching the Brewers are away above last year's strength, and it is going to be a big job for any team to head them off.

Tim Donahue, who bore the rather misleading name of "Bridget," played on the Chicago Club a decade ago. As a catcher Tim could be depended upon to earn his salary, for he was one of the hardest-losing backstops that ever wore the inflated chestpad.

As far as receiving the ball was concerned, throwing it to the bases, and as a batter, Tim was classy, but when on the bases he was the slowest that perhaps ever played professional baseball in the major league.

Yet "Bridget" had a deep-rooted idea that he was a sort of a ten-second man, and nothing the other players would say could convince the tall backstop that he was not a sprinter in the A1 division.

Jimmy Callahan, George Davis, Malachi Kittredge and Jimmy Ryan were almost convulsed one day when Donahue claimed that he had become so proficient in bunting that he could lay one down every time he came to bat, and that he could beat it out to first.

Jimmy Callahan, who was then filling in at third base for the Chicago Club, laughed so heartily that "Bridget" offered to bet him a dollar that he could beat out a bunt every time he came to the bat, providing Callahan played third base.

The offer was quickly taken upp, and Jimmy Ryan went into the pitcher's box, Kittredge got behind the bat, and Davis held down first, while Callahan stood guard at the third corner.

Jimmy Ryan put a couple of extra balls in his pockets before going into the pitcher's box, and when Tim made his first bunt and tore away like mad for first base, Ryan let him get about ten feet to the sack, when he fired one of the balls from his pocket over to Davis, with the result that Tim was nabbed about five feet from the bag.

Poor old "Bridget" kept pegging away at the bunting game until the quartet of jokers had $15 of Tim's money, when the ice-wagon catcher had to confess that he was beaten; but he contended that no other third baseman in the world but Jimmy Callahan could throw him out going down to first on a bunt. When the money was returned and the joke explained he was the happiest fellow in the world.

Tom Hughes, the elongated pitcher of the Washington Club, is a big man, and naturally Tom has man-size pedal extremities. His teammates love to kid Tom about the size of his feet and refer to them as being gunboats and so forth, when in reality the big fellow's underpinning is nothing at all unusual for a man of his size; still the gang when they are in a kidding humor never fail to get after Tom.

Tom is himself a past master in the art of guying, and when he gets a chance at the other fellows he also rubs it in, but little Shipke shot a hard one at Hughes one morning last week when the Washingtons were all out at practice. Tom Hughes and Shipke got into an argument over the ownership of a ragged glove that would not have brought a nickel in a Seventh-street rummage sale.

The argument between the players reached a rather heated point when Hughes in finishing off his spiel shouted out:

"Because you see, Shipke, I am not a man who stands on trifles."

"No," shot back Shipke, "I know that; I haven't forgotten that you came from Chicago."

If the amount of thought given to baseball were given to literature, commerce or war, the United States would be a much greater country. And, after all, most of the thought given to baseball is shallow and almost entirely valueless.

Now, certain people imagine that George Stone, the left fielder of the St. Louis Americans, has a weak arm, which is an entirely false premise. Stone's arm is not, primarily, weak. At least, not weaker than that of the average left-handed thrower. To be sure, contrasted with the wonderful right arm of Charley Jones, the left arm of Stone is as a sickly slum kitten compared to the wild Numidian lion. But the arm of Jones is a right arm, the best right arm playing in the outfield to-day. While the arm of Stone is a left arm of merely average left-arm ability.

First, let one understand thoroughly that no left arm anywhere equals a right arm. For some reason or other, which belongs in the region of physiology, left-handers cannot throw as far, as fast or as accurately as right-handers. Still further, not one in a hundred left-handers can throw a perfectly straight ball, whereas the right-hander finds it hard to throw any but a straight ball. Thes are facts and effects, not causes.

There was but one really accurate and good left-handed thrower. That was Jimmie Ryan, of the old Chicago White Sox. Ryan batted right-handed, but threw left-handed. He was not exactly a long-distance thrower, but he was a sharp and accurate one. His arm was probably no better than that of Stone. But he got the ball away quickly, and he could clip the eyelashes of a mosquito at fifty yards.

* * *

There are many good fielders who throw with their left hands, but none like Ryan. Keeler throws fairly well on short shots. His arm is no better than that of Stone, but he handles a ground and fly ball much better than Stone does. Keeler once was a third baseman and can handle ground balls. But of the lot Donlin, Seymour, Hemphill, Burkett, T. Hartsell and Slagle not one is better than Stone, and while Dan Hoffman may get more steam into the ball he gets no more effect.

Stone never will be a C. Jones, a Birmingham, a Heidrick, a Hinchman, or a Sheckard on the throw. But his trouble lies not in a weak arm. It is in poor handling of himself when taking and returning the ball, in lack of facile grace of action.

Stone is a sure catch and a good fielder on fly balls. He covers a deal of ground and anything he gets a full hand on is his. But he began as a weak fielder. In Milwaukee, whence he graduated to the American League, it is said that when a man hit a fly ball to Stone he just kept on running and never looked to see what happened until he had scored. Practice has made Stone a good fielder. But he still lacks the ease, confidence and grace which enables the finished fielder to get, and get away with, the ball in a hurry. There is where Stone is deficient. If others handled themselves as Stone does when taking a fly ball they would look just as bad on the throw-in.

Much has been written about Christy Mathewson this spring. The great pitcher has started out well, and his return to form has had much to do with leading the Gotham critics to predict victory for him and his team-mates. However, a Boston writer recently analyzed the New York team, and declared that, while Mathewson had been winning games, he did not possess nearly so much as in past seasons, but that he was depending almost entirely upon wide curves to fool opposing batsmen, and that there was danger of his "blowing up" at almost any time. If Mathewson should go to the bad, there would be little chance for New York to finish ahead or near the top. McGraw's other twirlers have not been doing effective work at all, and the team has not found it easy to defeat the other eastern nines. McGinnity has been in poor condition, Ames has just as poor control as ever, Taylor is the same old in-and-outer, and Wiltse, the southpaw, is speedy, but wild at times. The new pitchers—Crandall and Malarkey—may prove good men, but a team that is after the pennant must have plenty of tried pitching material.

For twenty years George Davis has been a model of style, grace, form and effect on the baseball field. He has played every position successfully except catcher. At all infield and outfield positions he has been a star. He played third for great clubs at Cleveland and New York, short and second for the White Sox and the outfield for Cleveland. He even pitched and won a league game for Cleveland, and he has always been among the great hitters of his years.

Yet, had Davis lost heart when he found that he could not hit right-handed pitchers, he would have been lost to baseball. Lacking the physical power of Lajoie and Wagner he may not be their equal. But of average men none has been a greater ball player than George Davis, the man who could not hit.

Yet many people will try to tell you that hitters are born, not made. Davis was not born a hitter. He made himself one.

The consensus of opinion seems to be that the Detroit team will come far from repeating its feat of landing the American League pennant this season. The team has made a poor start, and, in spite of the hustling spirit of Hughey Jennings, the opinion is general that the Tigers are doomed to nothing better than a berth in the second division at the finish. Detroit's pitching staff has shown up very poorly to date, and it is said that there is not likely to be much improvement. Moreover, the other teams in the league are playing superior ball. It was the contention along the American League circuit last fall that the best team had not won the pennant, and it is beginning to look as if there were truth in the claim. The Tigers can boast of only one first-class veteran pitcher—"Wild Bill" Donovan—and he cannot put the team in front unassisted, although he almost did that in 1907. Jennings has one or two good young twirlers, but they have not been very successful, owing in part to the fact that they have been receiving poor support. The final position of Detroit depends entirely on just how much fight the team will show under adverse conditions, for it is claimed that the Tigers themselves realize that they are up against it, and that their opponents have the greater strength.

In this connection, it is interesting to note the attitude of the Detroit fans. The City of Straits cannot stand a loser, and it looks as if it had been ruined by a winner. Detroit never was a good ball town, and it is one of the weak sisters in the Ban Johnson circuit. Twenty years ago its team won the pennant, and two years later was clear out of baseball. Will history repeat itself? Wait and see. It is an undeniable fact that the team is not now being supported, and that the patronage is practically nil. A glance at the figures published in Detroit papers shows that there has scarcely been a crowd of over 3,000 at any game played there this spring, and at many the attendance has not even reached into the thousand column. No club can accomplish much without the loyal support of the fans, and that is lacking in Detroit. It is little wonder, therefore, that the players are losing their ambition, and, perhaps, not playing as hard as they might?

Will there ever be satisfactory scoring done by the official scorers in the major and minor leagues? Scoring that will be absolutely correct, and scoring that will not savor of favoritism?

Never so long as the present style of scoring is permitted.

It is a question if there are two official scorers in the baseball leagues who score a play alike. One who has traveled throughout the cities has found so many kinds of scoring that one often wonders how a batter is to get what is due him.

Take the ruling laid down several days ago by President Ban Johnson of the American League, when he informed an official scorer of St. Louis that a player who gets an unassisted putout should be credited with an assist in the play. What rubbish.

Here is the rule:

Section 7. Scoring rules: The number of times, if any, each player assists in putting out an opponent shall be set down in the sixth column. An assist should be given to each player who handles the ball in aiding in a run out or any other play of the kind, except the one who completes it.

President Johnson should read the last line—except the one who completes it.

A man who completes the play is the man who makes the putout, and a player who makes a putout unassisted certainly does not deserve an assist as well as a putout on the same play.

Many times one sees a footnote, out for bunting third strike; the rule states plainly that it is simply a strikeout and the catcher should be given a putout.

In some cities the player who overslides second or third base after having successfully stolen the base is not given a steal.

There are several scorers (official) that could not give a correct definition of a fielder's choice or a life. Some scorers do not give the player a sacrifice hit when he intentionally makes one, if an error is made on the play.

In some cases when a pitcher strikes out a batter and the catcher drops the ball but gets the man at first base, the pitcher is not credited with a strikeout.

In one of the cities a new man who was selected to write auto notes was selected by the president of the team as official scorer of a team which many think will win the American League pennant, and the same O. S. acknowledged that he had never seen a big league game until this spring, but had been reading up the rules. How in the world can one expect to find uniform scoring in this case?

It has been known where a player got hits when rank errors were made simply to have him ahead of "so and so" in "so and so" city. This would all be a thing of the past if official scorers were appointed and sent around to cities as are umpires.

The above argument is not made for any selfish reason, but because it is the truth and will be acknowledged by all fair-minded sporting editors.

GOOD GAMES PLAYED BY CLUBS IN SATURDAY AFTERNOON LEAGUE

How They Stand.

Ohio Falls	4	4	0	1.000

The Fetter team yesterday displayed some of the form that won last season's pennant for them, and had no trouble in defeating the Old Charter team by a one-sided score. For six innings the Old Charter club could do nothing with Doyle's delivery. Their tallies in the sixth and eighth innings were the result of Doyle's wildness. The battingg of Williams and Deekin and the fielding of Deekin, Vance and Krebs were the features. The score:

Innings ....1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9—R. H. E.
Fetters ....2 0 0 1 4 4 0 0 0—11 8 4
Old Charter ....0 0 0 0 0 2 0 2 0—4 5 4

Batteries—Fetters, Doyle and Yantz; Old Charter, Stiltz and Brown. Umpire—E. Ryan. Attendance—300.

The Sutcliffes stopped the winning streak of the Y. M. H. A. at McMahon & Lapelle's park by defeating them in a hair-raising finish. The Sutcliffes came to the bat in the seventh inning with the score standing 5 to 0 against them and batted in four runs, and then came back in the eighth and drove in five runs. They secured eight of their eleven hits in these two innings. A stop of a hard line drive by Stengle and a catch by Marsh of his throw were the Association boys' best stunts. A catch by Klosterman and Harper's pitching featured Sutcliffe's play. A fairly good crowd enjoyed the game. Newman was put out of the game in the second inning for questioning a decision. The score:

Innings ....1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9—R. H. E.
Y. M. H. A. ....2 0 0 0 0 3 0 0 0—5 6 3

The Ohio Falls Iron Company took the Post-office team into camp to the tune of 6 to 2 in a finely played game at Glenwood park. Both sides had several errors, the heavy hitting of Kircher, Leathers and Geysel, and the fielding of Gaunt and Sample being the Post-office features, and for O. F. I. Co. Pressler and Lally did the best work. Fehler pitched a good game. The score:

Innings ....1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9—R. H. E.
O. F. Iron Co. ....0 0 0 0 1 1 1 3 *—6 9 4
Post-office ....0 1 1 0 0 0 0 0 0—2 10 5

Batteries—O. F. I. Co., Fehler and Schau; Post-office, Leathers and Kircher; umpire, Crowder; attendance, 300.

First Regiment got out of the maiden class with colors flying by defeating Vic Lorsch's diamond-diggers to the tune of 8 to 6. The soldier boys outclassed the jewelers as to batting and fielding. Gleaton pitched a star game and had he the support due him would have won the game. Hoke played a nice game at first, and with the bases full hit a line drive to center and during the scramble three scores were tallied. Semple, the sturdy little catcher of the First Regiment, was robbed of a home run by the ball hitting a tree on a line with the left-field fence. Seymour stole three bases. The score:

Innings ....1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9—R. H. E.

Kid Phillips To Fight.

A letter has been received from Kid Phillips, who is Chicago and who claims to be the lightweight champion of the South, in which he states that e intends to meet Sang, better known as Sammy Phillips, and also Young Griffo, who used to be one of the cleverest fighters in the world. He states that there is keen interest in Chicago in the forthcoming Papke contest and that a lot of money will change hands over the result. He says Jeff Scoulel is regarded as about the best 122-pounder around Chicago. He saw him win over Pete Savoy, the "fighting Greek," at Racine, Wis., three weeks ago. Kid Phillips holds the lightweight championship of the South.

LIVELY TIMES IN ATHLETICS

Great Track Meet Held In the Rain At Kansas City.

FOUR HUNDRED TAKE PART.

First Annual Games of Seven Colleges Which Compose Missouri Valley Association.

IOWA STATE TAKES HONORS.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 23.—With rain falling intermittently all afternoon and the field a sea of mud, Iowa State Agricultural College, of Ames, Ia., to-day annexed the first annual track and field meet of the Missouri Valley Intercollegiate Association. Missouri beat Drake by a close margin for second place, while Washington, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa universities trailed along in the order named. The final score was:

Ames 52, Missouri 22, Drake 19, Washington 13, Kansas 11, Nebraska 8 and Iowa 7.

Athletes from the State universities of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, three Iowa universities—Iowa, Drake and Ames—and Washington University, of St. Louis, took part in the intercollegiate meet at the New Elm Ridge field. It was the first annual meet of the seven schools composing the new Missouri Valley Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and all of the colleges sent their best men.

Although there was a heavy fall of rain last night the sun came out early to-day and the track was fairly fast.

Four hundred men, the pick of the athletes of the Middle and Southwest classes, awaited the call of the starters. So evenly matched were the teams that officials generally agreed twenty-five points would be sufficient to insure victory for the one able to gain that many.

ANOTHER SOUTHERN RECORD.

In the half-mile run Davenport, of Georgia Tech, by making the distance in 2:05 2-5, lowered the association's record for that event. Vanderbilt University won the meet with a total of 42½ points. Clemson was second with 27 points; Georgia Tech School third with 22½ and the University of Georgia fourth with 16.

OFFICIALS ARE AFTER THE SPEED MERCHANTS

'Squire Dorsey Says Automobiles Must Not Run Too Fast—Other Motor News.

EUGENE STRAUSS, secretary of the Louisville Automobile Club, was notified by Squire Dorsey that instructions were given to all of the officers under him in Jefferson county to be on the lookout for anyone speeding along the pike and to arrest those who are caught going faster than is allowed by the speed limit.

Secretary Strauss wishes it understood that he is in favor of this, and that he intends to exert every effort to assist the officers of Jefferson county to keep the members of the Louisville club from speeding their machines beyond the limit as prescribed by law.

* * *

A letter was received by Secretary Strauss from Officer Hugo Schultz, of St. Matthews, stating that warrants had been issued for several of the members of the Louisville club for exceeding the speed limit. The matter was taken up at once with the official, and after considerable persuasion consented to let the matter drop this time on condition that the automobilists would be good in the future.

The Locust run to be held by the Kentucky Auto Association was postponed from yesterday for two weeks, until June 6. Secretary Strauss announced yesterday that the club would donate to the Kentucky State Fair a beautiful silver punch bowl to be given to the best American standard bred carriage mare. Also a handsome silver cup to the best pair of mules. A small loving cup will be donated to the best pony in the State.

TOMMY BURNS GOING TO FAR-OFF AUSTRALIA.

LONDON, May 23.—"Tommy" Burns, the heavyweight pugilist, has had no reply to the cablegram he sent to "Jack" Curley, at Chicago, four days ago, accepting an offer to fight "Jack" Johnson, $35,000, Burns to have $30,000, win, lose or draw. Burns told the Associated Press to-day that in view of this silence he has decided to accept an increased offer from Australia to fight the Australian boxer, Lang, at Sydney, during the visit of the American fleet. Burns says he will get $30,000 win, lose or draw, in Australia, and that he will start the end of June. Lang was defeated by "Jack" Johnson at Melbourne in March of last year.

COLONELS WIN BY CLOSE SCORE

Bunching of Hits and Superb Fielding Gives Louisville Victory.

PERRINE'S SECOND BASE PLAY

Halla, Although Walloped For Ten Safeties, Manages To Keep Them Well Scattered.

JIMMY BURKE'S NICE WORK.

COLUMBUS, O., May 23.—[Special.]—Two pitchers with a deep-dyed hoodoo following them took up the task of entertaining 3,000 fans at Neil Park this afternoon. Geyer, for the champions, and Halla, the southpaw of the Colonels, have both had plenty of cause for complaint at their turn of luck, and both worked hard for a win.

Trusty "Rube," faithful as they make them, had to see another defeat registered, 2 to 1.

Halla saw his team win for him, and his string of few-run games was broken to the extent of the game being a victory. Halla had gone twenty-seven innings with his team making but one run behind him. He is the happy lad to-day.

Geyer had suffered ill treatment, and is still the glum citizen. Rube allowed but four hits and one pass. The one pass he granted came in the fourth, when Stovall walked. He stole second when Fohl threw badly, and a nice bingle by Sullivan brought him home.

In the opening inning Stanley singled. oWodruff beat out a bunt, but Raidy felt it his duty to throw after the man had crossed Kihm's corner, and he heaved so high that Stanley reached third and Woodruff second. Kihm winged to the plate to head off Stanley, but Fohl let the bounder straight at him go by, and the Louisville center gardener scored. These two runs were sufficient. Columbus made ten safe hits, but they could not get them at the proper time, and this accounts for the defeat.

The one run was put over the fourth corner in the ninth after a respectable, but too timid, rally. Fohl secured a single by cracking one off Halla's shin. Wrigley doubled to center and Fohl stayed at third, being unable to get home ahead of Stanley's deadly throwing. Odwell was put in to bat for Geyer, and he bounded to Sullivan. Raidy hit a sharp grounder to Burke and all hands moved up. Jimmie decided to play it safe and let Fohl cross the pan and take a chance on Jackson being retired when he faced Halla.

"Peppery Jim," who had already made two hits, was gentle enough by lifting a high fly to Stanley. Columbus had a chance in the second. Kihm singled, Fohl bunted and Burke elected to head off Kihm at second. He was too late and all hands went safe. Wrigley and Geyer could not hit safe, both lifting high flies to center, while Raidy gave Perrine a hard chance, which he accepted.

In five of the nine innings but three men faced Geyer, so well was he working. Only in three innings were hits made, and only in the first did two come together. Perfect support for him would have scored a 1-to-0 shutout victory.

The Louisville team put up another of those bang-up fielding games. Perrine was the star, with nine assists, many of them coming after hard dashes for the ball. Halla did some good defensive work, too. Kruger took Odwell's place in center because of a sore foot. The score:

High School Beats St. Mary's.

The High School baseball team made a trip to St. Mary's College, at St. Marys, Ky., yesterday afternoon. They went expecting to meet a foeman worthy of their steel, and they did. Had it not been for a wild throw by the St. Mary's shortstop the game might never have ended. This wild throw, the collegians' only misplay, allowed Altsman to score the wining run, the only tally of the contest. It came in the fourth inning, and though St. Marys tried very hard, and were amply seconded by some strenuous rooting, they failed to score. They got men on the bases in nearly every inning, but excellent pitching and fielding by High School prevented any runs.

Capt. Kimble pitched masterly ball, especially with men on bases, and Sheetz, of St. Marys, did even better, holding the Purple to two hits. Both teams fielded splendidly, and the contest was the sort that sets the spectators' nerves on edge and keep the players on tender hooks.

The Purple has now won ten games, a record no other High School baseball team has equaled. They are fielding in remarkable form, and expect to win to-morrow, when they face the C. W. Medical nine, and to take Manual into camp next Saturday. Score:

Manual Shuts Out K. M. I.

For the second time this year Manual shut out K. M. I. by the score of 11 to 0 yesterday at Manual Park. The game was much on the order of the first contest, K. M. I. being outclassed at every stage of the game. Young Johnson, who pitched the first six innings for Manual, was given perfect support and pitched a fine game. He was a perfect puzzle to the soldier boys, as was Fallis, who went in in the seventh. K. M. I.'s fielding was good, but their headwork was poor, throwing the ball away several times.

In the first two innings both sides went out one, two, three, but in the third Manual scored on M. T. Payne's tripple to center. Again in the fifth Manual scored, this time getting three tallies. Schmidt got to first on an error, as did Sprau, and a hit by Lewis filled the bases. Here it was that K. M. I. let down. Weisenstein singled to right, scoring Schmidt, while Fallis walked, forcing Sprau. Lewis was thrown out at the plate, after which Martin walked, forcing Weisenstein. Richardson flied out to center, retiring the side. After that Manual scored every inning. Weisenstein's fielding was a feature of the game. The score:

FIVE RECORDS BROKEN.

Pennsylvania Eight Makes the Best Mark of the Day in the Big Regatta.

Philadelphia, May 23.—In the best regatta ever held by the American Rowing Association, five different eights this afternoon beat the record for the course of a mile and five-sixteenths on the Schuylkill River in this city. The best mark of the day was that of 6 minutes 26 seconds, which was made by the University of Pennsylvania's varsity eight and the New York Athletic Club, when they rowed a dead heat for first place in the race for first eights. Again in the race for junior college crews all three contestants, Yale, Pennsylvania and Harvard, beat the former figures of 6 minutes 34 seconds, the time of the victorious Yale eight being 6 minutes 27 seconds, and of the Harvard and Pennsylvania crews, which rowed a dead heat for second place, 6:28 3-5.

New York crews carried off the lion's share of the honors, winning four firsts and tying one. Philadelphia was second with three firsts and a tie for first. Georgetown Preparatory School, Harvard, Yale and aBltimore each got one first.

Vanderbilt Cup Race Rules.

New York, May 23.—The protest against the rules for the Vanderbilt Cup race recently filed by the Automobile Club of France has been followed by the lodging of a similar objection on the part of another representative, the European Automobiling Organization.

Secretary S. M. Butler, of the Automobile Club of America, to-night made public a letter received by the club of the Royal Automobile Club of London, England, regarding the conditions of the Vanderbilt Cup Contest. The English club calls attention to the variance in the conditions for the Vanderbilt race with the rules adopted at the Ostend conference last July, especially with regard to cylinder measurements and weight of competing cars.

Secretary Butler said to-night that the Royal Automobile Club's communication had been forwarded to the Vanderbilt Cup commission for its consideration.

Survivors In Tennis Meet.

New York, May 23.—Rapid progress was made to-day in the singles of the delayed Long Island tennis championship on the courts of the Kings Country Club, Brooklyn. The field of thirty-nine competitors in this, the first big tennis meeting of the year, was drawn down to thirteen survivors when competition ceased for the day.

F. B. Alexander, national titleholder in doubles, won his third round bracket. He first defeated S. A. Westfall, of Kings Country, 6-2, 6-2, and then O. H. Hinch, of the Montclair A. C., 6-0, 6-0.

S. L. Uhl, Oxford, England, won his first match, defeating Dr. H. H. Waugh, of Kings Country, 6-2, 6-3. In the following round he succumbed to H. L. Westfall.

H. J. Mellenhauer, C. F. Watson, Jr., of Orange; E. P. Larned and S. F. Touchard, of California, all got into the third round. The tournament winner will become challenger of J. G. Wright, of Boston, the present holder of the title.

BASEBALL CHAT

President George Dovey, of the Bostons, is traveling with the team and thinks that he has a crack aggregation of balltossers. It is Dovey's opinion that Kelley was the David Harum in that deal with New York.

Pinnance, the Indian pitcher, who was known as "Peanuts" while with the Athletics several years, is having a new lease of life and is doing some wonderful pitching for the Portland club of the Pacific Coast League.

Outfielder Josh Clarke, of the Clevelands, broke the bat with which he made his great batting record in the American Association. He says he would give $50 for an exact duplicate of the broken stick.

The followers of the Yankees are not yet ready to believe that Griffith got a gold brick when he secured Glade. They think the former Brown will strike his gait in a short time.

Detroit is a better road team than home team. Manager Jennings would never win a pennant if he played all of his games at home.

Leifield, of Pittsburg, has proved the wildest pitcher in the National League this season. He has given twenty bases on balls in five games.

Catcher Sullivan, of Chicago, has introduced a new chest protector which is known as the straight front.

It is said that Hughey Jennings has a string on the services of Rube Marquardt, the Indianapolis pitcher, who has been creating a sensation in the American Association.

Shortstop O'Leary, of the champions, is suffering from a strain sustained in the last St. Louis series.

Joe Kelley has made a hit in Boston as manager of the Doves. His smiling, happy face is a treat to the fans after years of the gloomy Tenny.

"Long Tom" Hughes, of Washington, has acquired a new lease of life with an effective "spitball."

Umpire Tom Connolly, strange to say, has never been a ballplayer, but there is nothing about the game that he does not know.

Jack Thoney's injury could not have been so severe as reported, as he is back on the Boston team.

Willie Keeler is hitting better this spring than last year.

The managerial burden is not bothering John Ganzel, of Cincinnati, in his playing, for he has been putting up a great game at first and has been doing most of the timely hitting.

Catcher Eddie McFarland has rejoined the Bostons after a five-weeks' layoff.

WEST MORELAND.
Lots, 30x140 feet, from $300 to $500 per lot; granitoid walk in front of each lot; $25 cash and $10 per month.
JANSING PLACE.
At Forty-second and Broadway. Lots, 40x175 feet each, from $400 to $600 each; $50 cash and balance $10 per month. In our judgment these lots are the best purchase in this rapidly-growing section, as Jansing ave. connects Broadway and Chestnut st., and is sure to become a part of the Parkway system.
LINCOLN COURT.
These lots are the most desirable in the West End, and Lincoln Court is certain to become the center of value in the western part of the city. It is at Thirty-eighth and Broadway, has asphalt street, granitoid curb, gutter and sidewalk and a nine-foot grade plot between the walk and property line, in which the water, gas and sewer are located. This prevents the cutting up of the street to make connections and saves about $50 in building.

"NEAR BEER" IN ATLANTA.

[Baltimore American.]

"Atlanta is not entirely happy, even if it does try to convince the rest of the world that it is a modern Eden, now that the whisky traffic has been abolished," said Mr. E. G. Deems, of the Georgia metropolis, at the Belvedere. "One of the things that vexes the soul of the Atlantese is how to stop the sale of a suspicious drink that goes by the name of 'near beer.'

"The people who make the stuff, though they will not tell the secret of its composition, deny that it has any alcohol in it. They say it is a 'soft drink' and wholly outside the operation of the law. They may tell the truth, but it is curious how popular 'near beer' is with the very element that used to be the biggest consumers of the real brewery product. These patrons 'rush the growler' with all the regularity that they showed of yore in the palmy anti-prohibiton period. The retailers of the imitation drink make just as good profits as when they sold the genuine malt article, and as they are vending it in the same places it looks as though business was booming at the old stand.

"This is why many of our people are sad and why the City Council is now on a programme of investigation to determine what 'near beer' may actually be."

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MONETARY.

Saturday Evening, May 23.—The return of Government deposits, increased stock market borrowing and reports of gold told heavily in the weekly showing of the New York clearing-house banks to-day. The average surplus reserve was $56,485,375, a decrease of $8,121,875 as compared with last week. Loans expanded $17,927,900. Deposits increased $20,702,700, enhancing requirements $5,175,675, and cash holdings shrank $2,946,200. However, there was no change in the tenor of the money market, easy conditions ruling throughout the week. Call money ranged between 1½ and 1¾ per cent. and time funds were in good supply at 2½ per cent. for sixty days, 2¾ to 3 for ninety days and 3 to 3¾ for six months. The general stock of money in the United States on May 1, 1908, was $3,396,653,082. Over one-eighth of this amount is held in New York City, and as there is little prospect of it being greatly diminished in the near future the outlook for money is one of continued ease.

Very satisfactory reports were issued this week by the Bank of England and the Bank of France. The former showed an increase in specie of $2,700,000, bringing the proportion of reserve to liabilities up to 51¾ per cent., which is almost 4 per cent. above the average since 1900. The Bank of France added $7,000,000 to its gold on hand, and reduced circulation and bills discounted fully $11,000,000. Both institutions are in a position to reduce their rates, but Germany stands in the way with its 5 per cent. rate and its insatiable demand for gold, so that no changes will be made until Berlin acts.

Little change in the local money market is noted. The statements of national banks, published in response to a call from the Controller of the Currency, showed a healthful condition. Reserves are very comfortable, and there is more of a disposition to shade rates and a feeling that rates will gradually work lower. Some gilt-edge paper and names are being taken as low as 5 per cent., but there continues discrimination against brokers' collateral.

New York exchange is scarce and is quoted at 25c to 50c premium.

The report of the Clearing-house to-day was as follows:

Day's clearing	$1,653,770
Balance	226,620
Week's clearing	10,788,546
Corresponding week last year	12,663,428
Balances for week	1,499,088

The sharp reaction in the New York stock market to-day monopolized the attention of brokers and traders and very little attention was given to local securities. There was a fair attendance at the Stock Exchange, but bids and offers were few and far between. Louisville Traction common was a shade easier, with only small lots figuring in the bids and offerings. The preferred and rights were firm. Springfield was easier, offerings at 74¾ failing to draw a bid. In the outside list St. Louis United Railways issues and Kansas City Railway and Light common were steady. Business in local securities for the week was only fair, there being some contraction as compared with last week. With the exception of St. Louis United Railways issues, which were affected by a specific cause, prices ruled steady to firm, several changes being to a higher level. Louisville Traction common was in only fair demand, but offerings were sparing, and it sold up to 91½. To-day's bid of 90¾ compared with last week's final bid of 90¼. There was a good demand for the preferred, but buyers were content to wait for sellers and transactions were small. The rights moved in sympathy with the preferred. Springfield Railway and Light continued to be absorbed by investors, and there was some buying in it by an Eastern banking house. It sold up to 74, an advance of 2 points. The company's earnings continue to increase at a gratifying rate, 10 per cent. on the stock, for this is indicated, and it is generally believed, that the dividend will be advanced to a 5 per cent. basis in October. Portland Railway, Light and Power common was traded in both here and Columbus at advancing prices, sales being made at 49½. The company's earnings continue to increase at a remarkable rate. St. Louis United Railways issues broke sharply early in the week, due to the decision of the United States Supreme Court, which upheld the city ordinance taxing the company one mill on each passenger. Under this ordinance the company owes the city $850,000 up to January 1, 1908, and the tax will run from $220,000 to $250,000 per annum. The company's attorneys express hope of being able to have the ordinance nullified in the State courts. The tax amounts to about 1 per cent. on the common stock. It is believed if the company has to pay the tax it will not result in the suspension of the preferred dividend. Central Home Telephone sold at 4, the lowest price ever touched. There appeared to be no special cause for the drop. Louisville Home Telephone was quiet. The fate of the ordinance giving the company a new franchise is with the Mayor, and until it is known the stock will remain dormant. Local securities have failed to follow the advance by New York. They with but few exceptions represent traction and lighting companies which continue to enjoy increased gross and net earnings, while railroads and industrials, of which New York listings are chiefly composed, continue to suffer severe decreases. This is a severe trying-out period, and it bids fair to give traction and lighting securities a prestige not enjoyed in a long time. If New York stocks are entitled to sell higher it would seem reasonable to believe that local issues should be entitled to a very large upturn.

At the Stock Exchange to-day Rochester Railway and Light 5s were offered at 95 and interest. Louisville Railway 5s were 105 and interest bid and 106 asked for $1,000. East St. Louis and Suburban preferred was 73 bid for twenty-five shares. Louisville Traction common was five shares offered at 92, four offered at 91¾, 90¾ bid for ten. The preferred was 105½ bid for 125 shares, three sold at 106 and twenty-five offered at 107½. For any part of 500 rights 31 was bid. For five shares of Rochester Railway preferred 95¾ was bid. Springfield was forty shares offered at 75 and ten at 74¾. West Penn common was 33½ bid and 34½ asked for twenty shares. For ten shares of American National Bank 135 was bid.

St. Louis United Railways common closed in St. Louis at 20¼ to 20½, the preferred at 62½ to 63 and the 4 per cent. bonds at 81⅞ to 82¼. Kansas City Railway and Light common was quoted in Chicago at 44 asked. Toledo sold in New York at 10. Detroit was quoted at 35 to 37. American Tobacco closed at 335 to 340, Standard Oil at 601 to 605, Subway at 21 to 22, and Giroux at 3¼ to 3⅜. New Orleans common was quoted in New Orleans at 13¼ to 13½, the preferred at 33½ to 35 and the 4½s at 72 to 72½.

The Fall River Textile Council has voted to accept the reduction in wages called for by the average margin between the cost of cotton and the selling price of cloth. To offset the cut of nearly 18 per cent. the mills will return to full operation as soon as possible.

The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, which shut down its rail mill April 1 for the purpose of removing the old stands of rolls and installing the new mill, put its first rail through the latter April 30, making good the thirty-day estimate of the management. At present all the open-hearth furnaces at the Ensley plant are idle, and they will remain so until June 15, when the rail mill will resume operations in full.

According to the New York Commercial disbursements of interest and dividends by the large industrial, railroad and public utilities companies in June will aggregate $75,348,309, as compared with $75,498,946 in the corresponding month last year. Of the total $46,118,736 represents dividend payments, or more than $4,000,000 more than in June last year. Interest payments, however, will be nearly $5,000,000 under those of June 1, 1907.

STOCK MARKET REVIEW.

New York, May 23.—Money on call nominal. Time loans dull and firm; sixty days 2¼@2¾ per cent.; ninety days 2¾@3; six months 3½@3¾. Prime mercantile paper 3½@4 per cent. Sterling exchange fairly steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.8710 for demand and at $4.8535 for sixty-day bills; commercial bills $4.85@4.85¼. Bar silver 53c. Mexican dollars 47c. Government and railroad bonds steady.

Prices of stocks collapsed with great violence during to-day's short session of the market. The outpouring of stocks was heavy in some quarters, but the striking feature of the proceedings was the disappearance of all trace of the fostering measures of support which have been present through all stages of the preceding advance in prices and through the period of digestion of profits which has been going on this week.

There were mixed opinions in Wall street as to the motives for this sudden change of policy in the conduct of market operations. The filing of the suit by the Government against the New Haven for violation of the anti-trust law was much dwelt upon as belying the much-heard assumption that a truce had been arranged between the Administration and the corporations, and a tacit agreement reached for the softening of the rigors of prosecution against railroad corporations. So much has been heard of this assumption in connection with the recent rise in stocks that the incident was dreaded for its effect on speculative holders of stocks who have acted upon it.

Another view of the collapse was that it represented the normal culmination of a movement which has been under suspicion of artificial and manipulative origin from the outset. News of conditions to-day were more strikingly corroborative of the claims of general improvement on which the rise in prices was professedly based than at any time since it was undertaken. In spite of assertions recently of the continued shrinkage of railroad traffic a decrease in idle car surplus was reported by the American Railway Association in their statement published to-day as of May 13, the reduced number of idle cars in two weeks reaching 8,963 cars. This represents a turn in the tide of equipment going into idleness since May 18, since which time there had been a large increase in each two weeks' period.

Apparently these favorable developments have not attracted as much demand for stocks as was hoped for, and was relied upon to digest the profits of speculators who had bought in anticipation. A flood of stocks came from these sources to-day and caused the break in the market, extending all the way to 6 points in Union Pacific and St. Paul.

The expected decrease in bank cash appears in the actual condition, but not in the averages, and the loan expansion serving at the same time to increase the reserve requirement, there results the first decline in surplus reserve which the banks have had to report since early in February.

Bonds were steady. Total sales (par value), $1,426,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call for the week.

Weekly Bank Statement.

New York, May 23.—The statement of clearing-house banks for the week shows that the banks hold $56,485,375 more than the requirements of the 25 per cent. reserve rule. This is a decrease of $8,121,875 in the proportionate cash reserve as compared with previous account. The statement follows:

		Increase.
Loans	$1,129,047,900	$17,927,900
Deposits	1,206,923,300	20,702,700
Circulation	57,267,200	61,000
Legal tenders	68,050,800	*1,021,100
Specie	312,055,400	*1,925,100
Reserve	380,716,200	*2,946,200
Reserve required	324,230,825	5,175,675
Surplus	56,485,375	*8,121,875
Ex-U. S. deposits	64,153,700	*8,378,150

*Decrease.

The percentage of actual reserve of the clearing-house banks at the close of business yesterday was 29.24. The statement of banks and trust companies of Greater New York, not members of the clearing-house, shows that these institutions have aggregated deposits of $908,259,500; total cash on hand $61,725,300, and loans amounting to $861,385,000.

The Financier will say: "The statement of the associated banks of New York City for the week ending May 23 showed a decrease, taking the report of actual conditions as a basis of comparison, of $8,720,000 in cash reserve. This was not surprising, in view of the fact that the banks during the week lost $9,000,000 to the Treasury on account of repayment of public deposits, and something like $13,500,000 owing to continued exports of gold. The actual reduction in cash reported by the banks for the week was $4,806,200, which goes to show that the other losses already mentioned were made up largely through excess of receipts from the interior and from other sources. The loans of the banks for the week increased $11,209,500, due largely to the continued revival of speculative activity on the Stock Exchange and the commitments in commercial lines. Deposits for the week rose $15,657,600, which increase did not coincide with the other changes noted. Another surprising, although not an important feature of the bank statement, was the increase of $185,000 in circulation—this at a time when banks apparently are making every effort to decrease the amount of their circulating notes outstanding. The total deposits of the clearing-house banks now amount to $1,302,000,000, which is by far the largest figure ever reported. The actual surplus reserve stood on Saturday at $55,280,625, and since the banks began Saturday to pay into the Treasury the last installment of $25,000,000 of public deposits called for, it is quite likely that succeeding statements will show further decreases in the matter of surplus reserves. The banks are still receiving cash from the interior, and it will require quite a heavy reduction in the present surplus reserve before money rates are appreciably affected. The summary of State banks and trust companies in Greater New York not reporting to the New York Clearing-house indicates a slight decrease in deposits following the $40,000,000 increase reported during the past several weeks, a gain of about $600,000 in cash and an increase of $2,818,900 in net deposits. The actual percentage of reserve carried by the clearing-house banks is now 29.24, the reserve reported by the State banks is 25.54 per cent., and the reserve of the trust companies is 32.92 per cent."

FOREIGN FINANCIAL.

London, May 23.—On the Stock Exchange here to-day American securities showed a further relapse in sympathy with Wall street. Some realizations for continental and local account helped the depression and the market finished dull. Copper shares were easy. Money was plentiful and easy on the market to-day and discounts were weak. There was a moderate attendance at the Stock Exchange, but good business was transacted. Foreigners and Kaffirs improved. A lull in the investment demand, however, caused a sagging in gilt-edged securities. Closing quotations were: Consols for money 86 9-16; do for the account 86⅝; Anaconda 8½; Atchison 85⅝; do preferred 96; Baltimore and Ohio 93¼; Canadian Pacific 163⅜; Chesapeake and Ohio 45⅜; Chicago Great Western 7¼; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul 139½; De Beers 10⅜; Denver and Rio Grande 26½; do preferred 66; Erie 22⅜; do first preferred 43; do second preferred 30; Grand Trunk 17⅜; Illinois Central 143; Louisville and Nashville 111½; Missouri, Kansas and Texas 29⅜; New York Central 107½; Norfolk and Western 72; do preferred 83; Ontario and Western 41; Pennsylvania 62; Rand Mines 6; Reading 58¼; Southern Railway 19⅜; do preferred 46½; Southern Pacific 88⅜; Union Pacific 157½; do preferred 86; United States Steel 39; do preferred 104⅜; Wabash 14½; do preferred 28½; Amalgamated Copper 66¼; Spanish fours 92½. Bar silver quiet at 24 7-16d per ounce. Money 1@1¼ per cent. The rate of discount in the open market for both short and three months' bills is 1¾@2 per cent.

While the volume of business on the Stock Exchange was larger during the past week, the tendency of stocks occasionally was erratic. Firmness at the week end, however, resulted in small general net advances. Investment stocks reaped a benefit from cheap money, which can be used more profitably on the Stock Exchange than in the money market, and although several new issues caused a setback to the gilt-edged securities in the middle of the week, renewed buying assisted in the recovery later. The improvement of the position of the Bank of England and the huge stock of gold in the Bank of France, together with falling discount rates, created the belief that a reduction in the Bank of England's rate of discount cannot long be delayed. This was the chief influence in the recovery, and consols particularly benefited from it. Foreigners continued to improve steadily, the operations for Paris and Berlin account being well maintained, while Argentine rails attracted increased attention. The feature of the week was the sharp rise of 9 points in Hudson Bay on a burst of speculative buying. American rails provided fair excitement. The steady upward movement early in the week gave way to a sharp slump on general profit-taking, in which the continent was prominent. Some bad traffic returns and unfavorable trade reports assisted in the depression, but Wall street support again raised prices. Occasional further setbacks, however, occurred, notably the drop in Baltimore and Ohio on poor earnings, and with the easy market to-day the final rates were irregular. St. Paul was 2 and Union Pacific 3 points higher, while other securities were 1@2 points lower on the week, excepting Baltimore and Ohio, which was 5 down. The money market was plentifully supplied with funds and discount rates declined below 2 per cent., presumably in anticipation of a reduction of the bank rate, which, it is argued, must occur soon in view of the large shipments of gold from New York to the continent. This movement must soon strengthen these exchanges on London and allow the weekly gold arrivals to be retained here.

Berlin, May 23.—Prices generally on the Boerse to-day were weak on the advance from New York. Government securities remained firm. Exchange on London 20 marks 41 pfgs. for checks. Discount rates: Short bills 3½ per cent.; three months' bills 3⅝ per cent.

Paris, May 23.—The tone on the Bourse here to-day was unsteady. Three per cent. rentes 96f 75c for the account. Exchange on London 25f 12½c for checks.

COTTON MARKETS.

New York, May 23.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 13@16 points, and during the early session sold up to a net gain of 17@20 points on covering by yesterday's sellers and Wall street support. Buying motives included firm cables, bullish statistics, rains in the western belt, decreasing stocks available for delivery on contract and reports of an improvement in the dry goods trade. Business was moderately active. The market closed steady, with prices net 18@19 points higher.

Receipts at the ports to-day were 12,053 bales, against 9,302 last week and 7,107 last year; for the week 50,000 bales, against 58,229 last week and 55,229 last year; to-day's receipts at New Orleans 2,610 bales, against 1,427 last year, and at Houston 591 bales, against 1,782 last year.

Spot cotton closed steady and 10 points higher; middling uplands 11.20c; do gulf 11.45c; no sales.

VICTORIES FOR THE AMERICANS

Experts Think Yankees Will Win the Olympic Games At London.

CERTAIN TO HAVE HARD FIGHT.

Recent Performances Cause Critics to Wonder if There Is Any Such Thing As Limit.

POLE VAULT AND HAMMER.

WITHIN the next six weeks the team which is to battle for the honor of Uncle Sam in the world-watched Olympic Games will have left these shores for England. The men who will enter the lists will carry the hopes of more than 60,000,000 loyal Americans. Pitted against the sturdy sons of Uncle Sam will be representatives from almost every country in the world, but it is the doughty men from the British Isles, the strong-thewed athletes from the firths and fjords of Sweden and the supple-sinewed sons of sunny France that the Yankees have most to fear.

It is with feelings of fear and deep respect that the foreigners will greet the men who will wear Old Glory's shield on their jerseys, for in each of the four sets of Olympic Games that have already been held America's strong-lunged and steel-sinewed athletes swept the boards. Of the seventy standard events comprising the four meets, America has won 56, leaving the other countries to divide only 14 victories among them. England won 6, Ireland 3, France 2 and Canada, Greece and Hungary 1 each.

Seventeen out of the eighteen Olympic records for standard events are held by sons of Uncle Sam, the eighteenth is a tie between America and France, and the nineteen held by the Finns in other Olympic Games have demonstrated that American athletes are without a peer.

* * *

That the United States, provided it sends a team of its best athletes, will win the coming Olympics is agreed by the majority of the experts. All indications, however, tend to show that America will not have quite as big a cinch as it has had in the past. England, Sweden and France have all been in the throes of an athletic revival since the Athens games, and many athletes have been developed who on form should give the cream of Yankee performers the battle of their lives. Then, again, the English climate has always affected seriously the performances of American athletes. The British climate is feared more by the experts on this side of the pond than are the British athletes.

England has three men who have run the 100-yard dash in ten seconds consistently this spring. Sweden has a sterling sprinter in Knut Lindborg, who defeated J. W. Morton, England's fleetest flyer, in the International Match between England and Sweden. Morton, on his last visit to the United States, defeated the cream of the Yankee cracks. Nat Cartmell, the man who the majority of experts figure will be the first selection for the Anglo-American in the sprints, was defeated by Morton in England. The University of Pennsylvania flyer was far from being in his true form, running against the speedy Briton soon after stepping off the boat.

In the quarter-mile, England has defeated Lieut. Halswell, who, though defeated by Paul Pilgrim in the Athens games, has a record under 49 seconds. On form it would be a surprise to see Halswell lead the dark demon, J. B. Taylor, Uncle Sam's fastest quarter-miler, to the tape. With Taylor in condition, however, there are few who are willing to believe that Halswell should have a chance with him. America's Lieutenant, Harry Hillman, it is thought, will not take the trip. Through recent happenings the experts are doubtful of Hillman's ability to get in condition for the try-outs, or, in fact, for the Olympic games themselves.

England has two half-milers who have beaten 1:56 this spring and three milers who have beaten 4:20. Lieut. Force Melvin Sheppard is the only middistancer in the two classes with the British cracks. The mile men who competed in the 1,500-meter event at Athens all had better records than Jimmy Lightbody, but the Brooklyn Circle boy showed the Britons the way to the tape. America to-day has the greatest string of milers it ever had, and despite their performances of some of the British cracks it would not be astonishing to see the Yankee land a winner.

Sweden has developed some fine mid and long-distance runners. Dahl and Björn are capable of giving the British and American cracks the battle of their lives at the half or the mile, as also is Christian Hollstrom.

* * *

In the distances above the mile John Svanberg can give any man in the world, with the exception of Al Shrubb, the English professional, a run for his money. Hawtrey and other English five-mile men appear to be faster than the Americans. Svanberg and Ivan Lundberg, who will probably be Sweden's representatives in the Marathon race, will be dangerous contenders.

America should have no trouble in winning the hurdles. There are no timber-toppers on the other side who can compare with the present crop of Uncle Sam's fence-flyers. Such men as Dray, Gilbert, Sampse, Cook, Nelson and Allen can clear the bar in the pole vault at a greater height than Gondet, of France, and Soderstrom, of Sweden, the two best men across the water. Ralph Rose and Bill Coe in the shot-put, Martin Sheridan and Johnny Garrels in the discus and Matt McGrath and John Flanagan in the hammer and weights, provided they all make the trip, have nothing to fear from any of the men Europe boasts, though Jarvinen, of Finland, has made some wonderful throws with the discus. The United States will need its best men to defeat Leahy and O'Connor, of Ireland, in the running broad and high jumps. Ray Ewry is in a class by himself in the standing jump.

A few years ago if anyone had ventured to predict that any pole vaulter would clear 12 feet 6 inches he would have been scoffed at, yet at the recent University of Pennsylvania games Walter Dray, of Yale, soared over the cross bar at that height, and barely failed at clearing 12 feet 10 inches. When Hugh Baxter made his record-breaking vault of 11 feet 9 inches it was predicted that it never would be bettered, yet in a few years it has been bettered many times and several vaulters have succeeded in getting over the 12-foot mark.

Norman Dole was the first man to do it. The boy from the Golden West vaulted 12 feet 2-100 inches on April 23, 1904, at Oakland, Cal. The feat was considered wonderful, but the mark has since been bettered by Le Roy Sampse, E. T. Cooke, Claude Allen, A. G. Gilbert and F. T. Nelson. Gilbert did 12 feet 3¼ inches, Nelson Sampse came out and cleared 12 feet 4⅞ inches, only to have Dray top 12 feet 5½ inches and later clear 12 feet 6⅛ inches. There are four men who today are consistently clearing 12 feet 2 inches, and it does not seem unreasonable to expect that the 13-foot mark will be bettered.

When Jim Mitchel was in his prime and beating all comers at throwing the hammer it was predicted that the world never would see another man of his caliber. Mitchel's world's mark was 130 feet. John Flanagan came out and tossed the 16-pound ball 164 feet 6 inches. The throw was considered marvelous, yet John later hurled the missile 172 feet 11 inches, and last year in Montreal Matt McGrath sent the leaden missile out to the 173-foot 7-inch mark. In the spring practice this year Matt got the hammer out over 180 feet several times, and Flanagan also is reported to have turned the trick this spring, as has Plaw, the California giant. Last week a prominent trainer expressed the opinion that at least three men would beat 180 feet this season, and said he would not be surprised if one of the trio hurled the hammer 190 feet before he quit. Sport followers are beginning to wonder if there is any such thing as a limit.

* * *

There is a certain misinformed person who has been harping about how the collegians will sweep the boards at the Eastern try-outs on Franklin Field on June 6, and also how much better Western athletes are than those of the metropolitan district. Though the "rah, rah," contingent is stronger this year than ever, it is a safe bet that the collegians will not score a third as many points in the try-outs as the men who sport the emblems of the athletic clubs.

As far as the West is considered, the East can take off its hat to such men as Johnny Garrels, Spider Coe, Jimmy Lightbody and a few others, but that lets the West out. Huff won the "100" at the Jamestown games last year, but it is not expected that he will turn the trick in this year's championships. The East will win the "220," quarter and half and has an even chance in the mile against the great Coe and Lightbody. The 120-yard hurdles will be a toss up between Shaw, the Easterner, and Garrels, the Westerner. The East will take the hammer, the 56-pound weight, the five-mile and the pole vault. The running high jump and the broad jump will be in the balance, while the West will take the shot-put hands down.

* * *

The giant Burroughs from the University of Indiana, who copped the shot-put and the discus at the Pennsylvania relay meet, is a comer and should be heard from, but it would not be surprising to see Kreuger wallop him in the intercollegiate games on May 30, and it would be astonishing to see "The Gentleman From Indiana" lick Martin Sheridan in the discus or Ralph Rose in the shot-put, provided Burroughs ever stacks up against them.

WADDELL CASTS HIS LOT WITH THE OUTLAWS.

WADDELL, has jumped the St. Louis Browns and signed a contract to pitch the balance of the season for the Philadelphia Union League Club. President Lawson was instrumental in getting the noted twirler's signature, says a special from Philadelphia.

When the "Rube" announced in Philadelphia that he was through with St. Louis, emissaries were sent out after Waddell, who was finally located with some friends in a quiet Jersey resort and was found to be enjoying himself.

After a chat Waddell was asked whether he intended to return to St. Louis, and he replied he would not go back again with McAleer as manager under any circumstances.

This was reported to President Lawson this morning and he immediately went after Waddell and secured his signature to play with the "outlaw" league.

Waddell, after "doing" Philadelphia for several days, went over to Camden to visit his old saloon keeper friend there, and for whom he has often in the past, while with the Athletics, tended bar whenever it was given out by Mack he had a few days to spare.

He is in his element while tending bar. While the direct reason for deserting St. Louis was owing to the fact that McAleer refused him a wad of money last Tuesday, Waddell has had something up his sleeve for sometime past.

Nick Bible, representative of a big whisky concern and a brewery in Philadelphia, has been negotiating with Waddell to install him in a saloon in the central part of that city which his concern owns.

Last Tuesday morning Bible offered Waddell $5,000 per year with a long contract to accept his proposition. Bible admits that he practically closed with Waddell, papers now being in process of preparation by lawyers for this co-partnership.

The "Rube" when he returns to Philadelphia from Camden will sign them. Then, if the license court acts favorably upon the application to transfer the license from the present proprietor of the saloon to Waddell, it will be "Waddell's" hereafter.

GOOD HORSES WILL LAST TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, ACCORDING TO EXPERTS WHO OUGHT TO KNOW

WHAT period in a horse's life represents the three-score years and ten that is allotted to man? The question is hard to answer for the reason that, with the exception of standard and registered horses, no statistics have been kept, and even in these cases the date of death of a large proportion of registered animals has not been recorded.

The ordinary, or business horse, that has reached the age of fifteen years or more is looked upon as a doubtful proposition by buyers, and the average horse that is subjected to the haphazard treatment that he is likely to meet with through perhaps many different ownerships is a fairly tough beast if he retains his usefulness longer than fifteen or eighteen years. The larger percentage of them go to the rendering pot and scrap heap before the age of 18.

It is often contended that the well-bred horse, trotter or thoroughbred, is longer-lived than the horse of little or no breeding, or the draught breeds, but this is open to doubt. As a rule the well-bred horse has better care and treatment, and, owing to the fact of the everyday sort of a horse, and this has something to do with the ripe old age to which many noted turf performers have lived, though they were subjected to the severest tests of strength, speed and stamina during a long career on the turf.

W. D. E. Stokes, the proprietor of Patchen Wilkes farm, Lexington, Ky., has recently quoted as of the opinion that the trotting horse is the longest-lived of any of the various breeds of horses. In support of his claim he cites the case of Goldsmith Maid, who, at, the age of 19, lowered the world's trotting record to 2:14, and four years later, when 21 years old, duplicated the performance.

It would appear that the well-bred trotter that has no organic disease should not wear out or die of old age until he has reached the age of 25.

Many noted trotting stallions have lived to a much older age. It would appear that a "good old age" for a trotter is from 25 to 27 years, and those that live beyond that age are the exceptions.

While it may be possible that there are older trotters of more or less note still alive, a diligent search fails to show one older than the chestnut gelding Edward (2:19) or the brown mare Rysdyk's Maid (2:29¼), both of which were foaled in 1872 and are consequently 36 years old, as horses' ages are reckoned, their first birthday being the first day of January after their birth.

Edward made his record at Providence in 1879, thirty years ago, and was afterward world famous as one of the Frank Work's noted polo team, Edward and Dick Swiveller (2:18). He is still a pensioner of the aged New York banker. Rysdyck's Maid is now owned by David L. Thomas, of Belmont, and is still spry for her years. Those that go back to the early '80s will remember the little brown mare that was raced by the late John Riley. Later she was put to breeding and produced Easter (2:12¾), one of Dutton's noted polo team, Easter and Paris. She also produced the bay mare Mystic Maid (2:21¾). Though the last of Hambletonian's get were foaled four years later than Rysdyk's Maid, so far as known, she is the last of his produce.

It is said that David A. Snell, of New Bedford, Mass., who campaigned the famous old-time trotting mare Lady Snell (2:23¾) back in the '70s, and afterward owned the famous stallion Jupe (2:07¾), which as a 2-year-old trotted to a race record of 2:13¾ at Readville in 1897—the best on record for the age until it was beaten at Lexington, Ky., last fall—owns a gray road horse that is 28 years old.

Many stories have appeared of horses that had reached a much older age than those mentioned above, but in the case of Edward and Rysdyk's Maid there can be no mistake, as there is recorded in the trotting register.

The old-time Morgans, of Vermont, were noted for their longevity, and some amazing stories have been told of the age to which some of them lived. There is no question that the descendants of the old Morgan were a hardy, tough and long-lived race, but perhaps some of these stories were overdrawn.

As to the oldest horse in the immediate vicinity of Boston it is hard to say, but when the Boston Work Horse Parade Association started a competition for old horses some interesting facts were brought out, and it was found that some of the horses that do ordinary labor day in and day out about the streets of the city have made surprising records in the way of long-continued service, and that there are many that are daily doing their tasks as cheerfully and as satisfactorily as their younger fellow-workers.

The oldest horses that have been brought into notice by these competitions are the bay mare Eva, owned by Mrs. F. H. Thorndyke, and Doll, owned by Winslow H. Dodge, both of which are 38 years old. Eva is a small bay mare, and though her breeding is not definitely known, she has always been called a Morgan.

Among the other extremely old horses that were shown at the last Memorial day parade in Boston were Senator, 35 years, Boston Sanitary Department; Dick, 31 years, John Bibber & Co.; Prince, 30 years, owned by James C. Smith.

In addition to these that were shown in the old horse competition, there was shown the bay gelding Dick, 33 years, owned by James F. Weir. Dick was not shown in the old horse class, as he had previously won the gold medal for the best old horse in one of the parades. In some respects he is the most remarkable old horse that had taken part in one of the parades.

He has the record of having kept his place in his present employment for twenty-two years, and though he has had few holidays, he is fat and sleek, as sound as the day he was foaled, and shows hardly a trace of extreme age.

SUPERSTITIONS OF BIG BETTORS

Trifles Often Guide Judgment of Plungers On the Turf.

PECULIARITY OF E. R. THOMAS.

Many Men Think They Are Sure To Win If They Touch the Hump of a Hunchback.

JOHN W. GATES AS RACE BUG.

SOME days ago E. R. Thomas was standing on the lawn at the Jamaica track, talking with his betting commissioner. He was just dismissing the commissioner to the ring to get down a heavy wager on his selection, when a racing man of his acquaintance strolled up behind him and placed an arm around his shoulders, says an Eastern exchange.

"Hello, Ed," he said. "Give me one of those cigarettes of yours, won't you?"

Thomas looked distinctly annoyed and let out an ejaculation that proved it. He produced a gold cigarette case, touched a spring, and held the case out to his acquaintance. But at the same time he called back his betting commission, who was making for the ring.

"Never mind that bet, Fred," said Thomas to the commissioner, when the latter turned in his tracks and came back at the summons. "I'll stay off the race."

A racing man standing near the group elucidated this little incident.

"Thomas," he said, "is one of those superstitious mustang players. His main bug is that when anybody maces him for one of the paper smokes before a race he is bound to lose, no matter what he goes to in the race.

"When the touch for the cigarette comes in time, as it did just now, he stays off the race altogether, no matter how much alive the one he has picked may look to him. He's been nursing that same bug for two years now.

"Nearly all of the high-notch players of the cayuses," went on this racing man of wide experience, "give ear to the buzzing of their own particular kind of superstitious bugs, and some of these are sure the queer insects. I can remember when the only generally prevalent racetrack superstition was the hunchback thing.

"Most of the bookie whangers believed that they could for a sure thing get the money if they could touch the hump of a hunchback on their way to the track or within the track grounds. But this one petered out five or six years ago, when it developed into a regular hunchback industry or trust.

"Hunchbacks got to thronging the track tracks, and they hung around the entrance gates to the tracks and paraded up and down the lawns, waiting to have their humps touched. They looked for the piece of change from those who touched their humps, and for a number of years they did well at the game.

"But too many of them got into it, and finally the deformed ones got jealous of each other and started in to scrap for patrons. Thus they degenerated into a nuisance, and had to be shooed off the place by the track authorities.

"No less a sage of the turf than Dave Gideon has the bug that the horse that picks up a piece of accidental overweight in a race is one to be looked out for and played if the dope gives him any kind of a chance in the world to cop. I won't say that Gideon can show you how this has sifted out in actual practice during a period extending over 306 years, for he isn't quite that old—although nearly—for it is said that he remembers the races won by Eagle, the great Virginia thoroughbred, shortly after the War of 1812. But Mr. Gideon can take you back a long time on that overweight dope of his, and he can show, too, how it has gained the change in a remarkable number of instances.

"As a matter of fact, there is some sound sense back of this bug, for the horse that picks up the piece of overweight gets the ride by a jockey who has been unable to reduce himself to the carded weight, and when an owner is willing that his horse shall take up some additional pounds in order to permit a certain boy to ride, the inference is reasonable enough that the owner knows that he has got a pretty good horse that day.

"Pole Pearsall, the heap big whanger, has got the superstition that if his horse kicks another horse at the post it's all over and there's no chance.

"John W. Gates' bug used to be that a jockey who wears a diamond ring on one of his fingers while riding can't get a horse home in front. This, he claimed, was a bug based upon long observation and experience.

"One day, several years ago, Mr. Gates backed a horse ridden by that master horseman—for a while, when he was behaving—Grover Cleveland Fuller. He bet $25,000 on this mount of Fuller's, and he stood to win $75,000 if Fuller brought the horse home.

"Fuller wore a big solitaire diamond ring that day. The horse was a hard-headed brute that needed to be restrained under the wraps until the final spring for the wire, that was his characteristic.

"Fuller followed instructions, and took the horse up, under forty wraps, as they say, immediately after the start.

"But the tightly wrapped reins pressed the diamond ring into the flesh of the jockey's third finger of his left hand, causing him excruciating pain. Not only that, but Fuller was worried lest the wrapped reins would warp the ring out of shape and loosen the stone, and he was afraid he might lose the rock. So he was unable to do himself justice in riding.

"In order to stop the pain and to flag the chance, Fuller thought he stood of losing his hunk of ice, he loosened the reins and gave his horse his head at the beginning of the back stretch. The result was that the horse, that should have been saved for the finish, shot his bolt before the top of the stretch was reached, and was disgracefully beaten at the end.

"When asked why he hadn't obeyed instructions and waved the horse for the finish, Fuller told about the ring that hurt him, and about his fear that the stone might drop out of its setting, and this story reached the ears of Mr. Gates. Ever since then he's taken particular pains when he does make his now only occasional visits to the tracks to find out whether a jockey carrying his coin is wearing a ring that's loose or not.

"He used to be fond of Jockey Miller, and often played that boy's mounts, but never when he ascertained that that kid had put his bazoo in diamond ring.

"Is Miller wearing that fool gewgaw to-day?' I once heard him ask one of his betting commissioners.

"The commissioner hustled out to the paddock to take an observation of Miller as the jockey weighed in, and on returning to Mr. Gates with the observation that Miller wasn't sporting his big rock that afternoon and Mr. Gates got down a boulder bet on Miller's mount in the next race. Miller's horse finished a bad fourth, but that didn't change Mr. Gates' dope with respect to his ring superstition. He probably figured out that Miller's horse would have finished last in the field of fourteen if the boy had been wearing his Kimberley."

"That's how the one big and universal track superstition was broken up into hundreds of individual ones. Some of the most level-headed of the big players are the fellows with the oddest superstitions.

"One of them, a man who rarely or never bets less than $2,000 to a race, and who not uncommonly unbelts to the tune of ten, twenty and $2,000 on his convictions are strong that his is an ace high one. He has the queer weevil that if he catches sight of a woman with a string on one of her low-cut shoes untied he's in bad. He tried for two years to beat that one down by disregarding it, but it finally tied him in bowknots.

"This curious bug of his goes back to a day, three or four summers ago, when he brought a woman friend to the track. On the way to the track he had to stoop down and tie one or another of the strings of her low-cut shoes several times, and, finally, in a moment of hot-weather impatience, he said to her that it was a wonder she couldn't rig herself out in a pair of kicks that wouldn't keep a man kneeling on the ground in front of her, like an idiot, for the better part of an afternoon.

"Naturally enough, this made her sore, and when the train reached the track she promptly got into a carriage and returned to New York, telling him before she went that she hoped he'd drop the whole bank roll, and then a few. He dropped it all right enough. He played four rank Edams that day, all for chunks; got left at the post twice; disqualified once, and outrun the other time.

"Then for four straight days he never got near enough to the pay-off line to hand a ball of popcorn to the cashier. It was the most disastrous streak he'd had for years, and it put some lines of worry at the corners of his eyes.

* * *

"Davy Johnson, than whom nobody will send the spinach along faster when he thinks he's right, gives aid and comfort and nourishment to a curious sort of bug. He likes the horse that comes to a halt and stands still for a minute or two on the parade past the stand before going to the post.

"Johnson has it that the horse that does that is a sensible, cool-headed brute, and that his purpose in stopping on the way to the post is just to survey the situation and take a look at things.

"The biggest bundle that Johnson ever took down during his long turf career—the time he caught Intrusive at 20 to 1 with $5,000 down straight—was based, he claims upon this bug. Intrusive did the halt two or three times on the parade to the post that day, and there wasn't any kicking him out of his halts until he got ready to trudge on ahead again. Johnson put that alongside some previous observations he had made of horses being successful after doing the pull-up thing in that way, and now the bug has a firmer hold on him than a woodtick on a blackberry picker."

NOTED ATHLETES SURE TO COMPETE

Elaborate Plans For Big Track Meet At Pittsburg On June 20.

PITTSBURG, May. 23.—Advices have been received that the cream of American athletes will be here June 20 to take part in the great field and track meet.

The fact that there is no gate money side to the affair; that the performances on the famous Schenley oval will be open to 50,000 people, and that handsome medals will be offered, has aroused the athletic world. Men who see out for places on the Olympic team are convinced that a triumph in the Pittsburg event will enhance their chances of victory for the Alleghenian band. It will be all will be an opportunity for the men to show their form.

It will be a great preliminary to the Eastern culling for places on the American team. The man who lands one of the sixty-four handsome medals ordered by the Pittsburg Press for the coming meet can feel well satisfied that his name will be inscribed on the tablets to be erected at the scene of the Olympian of 1908.

A fortnight elapses between the date of the Pittsburg meeting and the trials for the Olympic selection. This will give the aspirants for honor ample time to size a little dirt, showing their competition here and then proceed to fit themselves for the battles in the East.

Though the local tourney is nearly a month off entries have started to come in. The early response and the distribution of entry blanks is indicative of a marvelous burst of enthusiasm for the competition. This is an era of outdoor pastimes. Western field, water and track sports declare that 1908 gives assurance of being a historical year in manly sports. College and athletic club meets have been splendidly attended.

Fast work has been shown by the performers and a number of newcomers added to the class of top-notch athletes. Indianapolis is getting ready to display a high jumper, who may startle the athletic realm the coming months. He has been jumping six feet two inches in competition. John Miller, the youth, has been invited to attend the Pittsburg tourney. Friends feel that his work will entitle him to a place on the Olympic team.

Stanford Varsity is sending a cluster of high-class performers East to meet the best in the Middle Western varsities on June 6. The men from the glorious climate will be invited to enter the Pittsburg races and jumps. As they will be East for over a month there is a chance for them testing their skill against the array of talent from every part of the land.

TROPHY OF THE DIAMOND SPORT

Chase of Thousands of Baseball Clubs For Pennant Now On.

SPEED AND BRAWN TRIUMPH.

No Other Athletic Game Has An Emblem With the Same Significance.

COST OF FLAG VERY SMALL.

TROPHY more alluring to athletes and their partisans than any prize yet devised as a reward for the triumph of speed and brawn, the pennant is now the quarry in the chase of thousands of baseball clubs.

The bunting surmounting the flagstaff may lack in money value, but it costs more in sustained effort than any other athletic prize. It has an immovable place in the affections of the American public as the symbol of their best-beloved sport.

Sometimes it is a white flag, oftimes the ground is blue, perhaps flaunting pride on occasion has made it red; but no matter what the basic color, somewhere on its expanse stands out boldly, where it can be seen to the furthermost parts of the field, the word:

"Champions."

And this one word goes further to explain the extraordinary hold of the great American sport on the public than any other factor connected with it.

It must be remembered that great as is the army of men and boys who profit in health by actual participation in the national sport, they are small in proportion to the total number of nonplaying votaries over whom the game wields its sway.

For every man who plays ball there are ten who pay to see it. And the joy of backing a winner, the desire to see a pennant won, is the impulse which packs the grounds, crowds the streets in front of the bulletin boards and renders the gravest of diplomatic or financial crises unimportant compared to the vital question:

"What's the score?"

Baseball has, perhaps, never justly estimated its debt to the system of having clubs organized into leagues, with a flag as the permanent symbol of victory.

There never was such an investment as the graceful pennant, which, furling and unfurling in the uninterrupted breeze of its lofty station, is an ever-present trophy of a victory won and incentive to future triumphs.

* * *

Take the most expensive. The kind used in the American and National Leagues cost $100, that sum being appropriated for the purpose annually.

Yet, to get that $100 worth of bunting proprietors of baseball clubs cheerfully spend as much as $100,000 for players and other expenses in the course of a summer, and it is estimated that to follow the pennant fights at close range the American public pays at the gate $7,000,000 every year.

The man who invented the pennant idea has cause to feel proud of his inspiration. It is the most profitable one in the history of sport.

* * *

No other athletic game has an emblem with the same significance. Football and boxing, which, for the attention they attract from all classes, may be said to rank next to baseball as the most-followed sports, have no parallel trophies.

The winning football eleven keeps the pigskin with which the game was played, but there is no flag, no team trophy to show whether Yale, Princeton, Harvard or Penn produced the great eleven of the year.

There used to be a heavyweight championship trophy, the diamond belt, which Richard K. Fox presented to John L. Sullivan, but nobody cared anything about it. It never passed from hand to hand with the moving of the championship. Corbett, Fitzsimmons and Jeffries never owned or wanted it.

* * *

The most that comes to the track and field athlete for his victory in the leap, the sprint, the pole vault, the weight hurl, is a cup or a medal.

For the oarsman who pushes his prow ahead of his straining rival there is, perhaps, a miniature reproduction of a pair of sculls, gold, silver, or, as in the case of the noted trophy for which competition is yearly held on the Thames, diamond sprinkled.

The soccer team, the cricket eleven, the golfers, all have some symbols of victory.

But none of them takes the same hold on the public mind. The sportsman who goes to see the intercollegiates applauds and enjoys the victories of men like Taylor, Horr, Kruger, Cartmell, Hankins, Garrells, etc., but six months afterward he could not tell the names of the winners in five of the thirteen events, or, perhaps, even the name of the winning team.

* * *

But he knows the baseball champions and all because for a large part of the summer his attention has been concentrated on the pennant idea, the blue ribbon of the annual baseball handicap.

It is dreams of a possible pennant that enable the fan to support the long winter months without his favorite sport. With keenest enjoyment he reads of the signing of new men to strengthen his team in the fight.

Though that of a coming pennant take him down to the railroad station to see the "boys start South to train" in the closing days of February, when the lingering snows of winter still clutter the ground.

The manager who leads the men away on their tour of preparation, while just as eager to take the bunting as the most rabid enthusiast, builds up no extravagant hopes. He knows better from sad experience.

He has invested a small fortune in players from minor leagues, colleges and lots, but he knows that not many of those who are called in the winter are chosen in the spring. The grim reaper of baseball head in those early days on Southern diamonds.

And many a veteran sees his place taken by a youngster, for the leader cannot afford to play favorites if he would keep in the pennant hunt.

* * *

The general of each team knows that he is opposed by seven other men equally experienced and resourceful, with big barrels at their backs. Out of his material he must pick the seven best regulars for the infield and outfield work, the eight best men for the battery places and the utility infielder and outfielder who show best form.

Back in the North, welcomed uproariously by the fan, but just as wildly condemned next day should his miscues bring failure, the player runs the stern chase for the flag under way.

For six months the mind of every man must be concentrated on that one idea of landing enough games to figure at the finish in that mysterious column, "Per Standing," the most eagerly sought item in the summer newspaper, the pulse of baseball, the symptom that tells the condition of the race.

KING EDWARD TO STOP GO IF BURNS GETS $30,000.

A SPECIAL cable from London says:

"Tommy Burns is a Yankee bluffer, and I shall take every means in my power to stop a battle between him and Johnson if it is arranged with the understanding that Burns is to receive £6,000 ($30,000) win, lose or draw."

King Edward so declared to-day to his close friend, Lord Lonsdale, at the Jockey Club at Newmarket.

The King, who had lost heavily on his horse, Perrier, had a long talk with his friend after the running of the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes, which was won by Richard Croker's Rhodora, regarding the proposed battle between Burns and Johnson.

"I am a sportsman," he continued, "but Burns' proposition isn't sportsmanlike and England should be up in arms if a battle under any such conditions is permitted to occur."

* * *

Feeling Is Mutual.

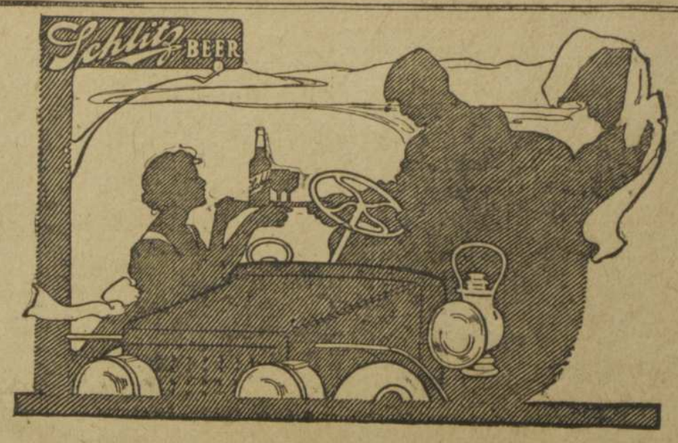

The feeling which King Edward possessed is felt by most of the sporting men of this country and those close to the inside workings of the National Sporting Club declare that the only reason that $30,000 was named Burns is because the members of that organization believe Johnson can beat Burns.

Tommy, while considered a good fighter by the public here, has gained much disfavor, and were it not that they are anxious to see him beaten they would have shipped him out of the country long ago. "To begin with," said one of the close friends of the king, "Tommy never showed that he is a sportsman. He has a perfect right to demand that the winner's end of the purse be two-thirds and the loser's end one-third, but when he demands $30,000 win, lose or draw, he shows he wants no one but Burns to get the harvest.

Should Get Consideration.

"Johnson came here from across the pond in search of a fight with Burns. He came here practically penniless and should be given some consideration. Instead of treating him half civil, Tommy ignored him and even after making an appointment with the colored man did not see fit to keep the engagement. We are anxious to see Burns and Johnson battle here, and much will be overlooked to bring them together, but the king has set his foot down on Burns' demand and there will be no fight if Tommy is to collect $30,000 for his end."

BARLEY AND HOPS—a food and a tonic. A trifle of alcohol—an aid to digestion. That's beer. If you get a pure beer—well aged—nothing is better for you.

It is not good advice to say "Don't drink beer." There are many who need it.

Your doctor advises beer. The healthiest peoples of the world drink the most of it.

But it is good advice to say, "Don't drink the wrong beer." Some beer causes biliousness. Schlitz does not.

Schlitz beer is both good and good for you.

Nine people in ten would be better for drinking it.

Schlitz is the home beer, because of its absolute purity. It is aged for months, then filtered, then sterilized. There are no after effects.

Ask for the Brewery Bottling.
Common beer is sometimes substituted for Schlitz.
To avoid being imposed upon, see that the cork or crown is branded Schlitz.
